

ABOUT MIKE KNIGHT

Mike Knight is an Indianapolis-based marketing/communications consultant, freelance content developer and freelance writer. He has worked in sales, national and regional marketing, corporate communications, advertising and as a freelance writer and journalist.

Mike's passion is developing content that's focused on social justice and equality as well as nurturing respect for creativity via the Arts. Diagnosed with Multiple Sclerosis in 2013, developing content about living his best life with MS has kind of become a thing for Mike, too and you'll find content about all of this stuff at mikeknightwrites.com/blog.

Mike has written for:

- The Chicago Sun-Times
- Midwest Living
- Indianapolis Monthly Magazine
- In-flight magazines (Northwest Air, Delta, ATA)
- Minneapolis-St. Paul magazine
- Thrivent Financial
- Target Corporation
- Modern Bride
- Purdue University
- Marian University

He has also worked for, with, or counseled/advised:

- Central Indiana Community Foundation (and its affiliates)
- The Arts Council of Indianapolis
- The International Center of Indianapolis
- United Way of Central Indiana
- Indiana Association for Community Economic Development (IACED)
- Indiana Youth Institute
- Fairbanks Hospital
- Children's Museum of Indianapolis
- Washington, DC-based Corporation for Enterprise Development (CFED)
- Eli Lilly and Company

On top of all that, he has:

- Earned multiple Society of Professional Journalists awards
- Received an Emmy (with WFYI)
- Earned an Addy
- Received readers' choice awards
- Created, written for and ran Sky Blue Window, an online magazine meant to increase demand for the arts in central Indiana
- Received one or two smiley faces along the way!
