

Income Eligibility Application

Funding Background:

The Zero Energy Now program is pleased to be able to provide additional funding for low/moderate-income (LMI) Vermonters. The program is grateful to VLITE for the funding support to provide these additional incentives.

Income Eligibility & Incentive Amount:

Income eligibility is defined as a household income for a family of 4 of approximately $90,000 or less. There is a total of $30,000 available; ten (10) income qualifying homeowners are able to receive $3,000 each on a first-come, first-serve basis until ten projects have enrolled. Enrollment for this offer expires December 31, 2020, but projects may be completed in 2021.

IMPORTANT NOTE: As described on the Zero Energy Now website (zeroenergynowvt.com), this form assists in determining income eligibility for the Zero Energy Now program. If you do not need financing to complete your project, then receiving approval via this form ensures you will receive an additional $3,000 (according to the terms listed above). However, if you do need financing, your lender will likely have more stringent income eligibility requirements, and approval through this form does not mean you will receive approval through your lender. (Note that your income presented in your IRS tax return is not necessarily how lenders determine your income.) It is still recommended that you submit this form so that you and your contractor can further refine your project work scope and associated costs.
