How to Help Your Child Stop Whining

Alyson Jiron, Brooke Brogle & Jill Giacomini

There are few behaviors that are more frustrating to parents than whining. Yet for children, whining can be a quick and easy way to get a parent’s full attention. Children whine when they feel overwhelmed by an emotion or desire and do not have the vocabulary to express their feelings. They also might whine when they do not have the skills to complete a task or because they feel tired, hungry, powerless, or lonely. Simply put, children whine to ask for help. You can help your child figure out why he is whining and help him to find a better way to communicate.

Your child will continue to whine until you teach him a new skill. When you give into his whine for candy at the check-out counter, you are teaching him that his whining behavior is working and he should use it again. When you take away your son’s favorite toy because he won’t stop whining, you increase his feelings of insecurity and actually also increase the likelihood that he will whine more often. Instead, you can teach him to use his words to tell you about his feelings and, together, you can come up with a way to solve his problem.

Try This at Home

- If your child often whines when he is tired, consider running errands before or after her nap time, when she is rested.
- If your child often whines when he is hungry or bored, hope for the best but be prepared for the worst. Carry a small snack, pack a coloring book and crayons, or have a special activity ready to go that is only for this type of occasion. For example, you could give your child a bucket of puzzles, books, or toys that you only take out when your child is learning at school and specific ideas on how to use the strategy or skill at home.

Practice at School

At school, children are encouraged to use their words either verbally, using sign language, or using other forms of communication. Teachers remind children when they whistle to instead use their words to express their wants and needs. A teacher might say, “I don’t understand what you want when you whine. You can use your words to tell me what you need and then I can help you.” Often a child just needs a reminder to use words and if needed, the teacher can give the child an example of what to say. “You sound like you are still hungry. You can say ‘more crackers please’.” Or, the teacher can show the child how to ask for a cracker in sign language.

The Bottom Line

Whining is a common way for your child to tell you that she needs help. Until she learns a new way to get your attention, she will likely continue to whine. You can teach and show your child how to use her words to clearly express her needs. Children who are confident talking about their emotions and feel heard by their parents are less likely to whine.