The hobbit Bilbo Baggins lives in a beautiful and calm house in Hobbiton, or the Shire, as the hobbits like to call their region. But Bilbo's house is so different from any other house that you and I may know. His house was built under a hill. It has a round front door, and the hall has the form of a long tunnel. But there isn't any smoke or dirt in the tunnel where Bilbo lives. There are a lot of carpets on the floor and paintings on the walls. There are also comfortable chairs for Bilbo to sit in and relax. There are some bathrooms, seven bedrooms, and a lot of wardrobes for Bilbo's clothes. And the house is only one floor so there aren't any stairs. On the outside there is a very lovely garden where Bilbo grows his vegetables and fruits. Bilbo's favorite room is on the left side of the house. There, he can sit and write for hours. He is about to finish a book about an adventure he had many years ago.

One beautiful sunny day, Bilbo received an old friend, the wizard Gandalf the Grey. Gandalf then took Bilbo on a very dangerous but really exciting journey to the city of Erebor. There, Bilbo, Gandalf and some Dwarves went through an extraordinary fight against Smaug the dragon. Smaug occupied the Dwarves' city of Erebor, and was keeping their gold. But that is not all, Bilbo also met a really horrible creature named Gollum. Gollum wanted to eat him but Bilbo escaped thanks to a magical ring that he found earlier. The ring is still in Bilbo's possession. It gives him the power to disappear.

After Smaug the dragon was shot by a really courageous fisherman, the dwarves took back their city and their gold. And Bilbo returned home a very changed young man and a very rich one.
