History

The Heimann estate was established at the 18th century, although development was later slowed with the Great Depression and the second World War. In the 1990s, Zoltán and Agnes Heimann, both trained economists, took over their family namesake, reorganising the viticulture and winemaking. The work in the vineyards is at the heart of what they do – so much so, that in 2009, they moved to Székszárd, an appellation that covers the easternmost stretches of the Transdanubian Hills, to dedicate all their efforts to running the estate. Most recently, their son, Zoltán Jr, has taken over the winemaking responsibilities. Although the Heimanns work with major international varietals, we believe their terroir is best expressed in wines produced from local varietals, notably Kékfrankos (Blaufränkisch) and Kadarka: round, elegant and fruit-forward.

Tasting Notes

Typical notes of cherry on the nose. Fruity (cherries and strawberries), fresh, midweight palate. Nice balance.
