

CALL FOR PAPERS

ASSA Session: Inflation and Price Setting

Central Bank Research Association

January 3-5, 2020

The Central Bank Research Association (CEBRA) is organizing a session on inflation and price setting at the 2020 ASSA meetings in San Diego on January 3-5. The session aims to bring together top researchers from academia, central banks, and other policy institutions to present the latest research findings related to inflation and price setting behavior. Some of the topics of interest include, but are not limited to:

- Inflation dynamics and monetary policy
- Monetary policy frameworks and the inflation process
- Determinants of inflation expectations and their relationship with observed inflation
- Input costs, networks and their role in inflation dynamics
- Micro-level price dynamics and implications for aggregate inflation
- Inflation forecasting

Authors interested in presenting research related to inflation and price setting at this conference should submit a PDF of their paper to inflation.conference@clev.frb.org. The deadline for submissions is May 15, 2019. Authors of accepted papers will be notified by June 15, 2019. The organizing committee includes Raphael Schoenle (session chair), Luca Dedola, and Gee Hee Hong.

The Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland (FRBC) has agreed to work with CEBRA to organize this session. By submitting your paper to inflation.conference@clev.frb.org, (1) you acknowledge that the FRBC may share your paper, name, and e-mail address with CEBRA, and (2) you confirm that you are a CEBRA member or agree to become a member. Membership is free of charge. CEBRA's privacy policy can be accessed here: <https://cebra.org/contact/>

Please feel free to circulate this call for papers to your colleagues.
