

How We Bred Two Males Together To Produce A National Winner

A seminar on breeding by Brian and Toni Beninger, Benbaron St Bernards

Summary:

In the 1980s we had the foresight to collect and freeze semen from Am Can Ch Benbaron's Yondo Von Gizer, a two-time National winner and Hall of Fame stud. Then the 90s, we owned another Hall of Fame stud, Ch Sky Meadows The Iceman. It was at that point Toni had the radical idea to breed them together in the hope of combining their best features in a new generation of dogs.

But you can't breed two males to get pups... or can you?

This seminar will show the steps we took and the techniques we used to do exactly that.

Did it work?

There were six pups in our second "T" litter, all of them champions. The most famous was Ch Benbaron's Taboo Of Yondo who won Best Of Breed at the National under judge Horst Vogel.

Spoiler alert: we broke some taboos to get Taboo.
