The Crisis Is New, the Tradition Is Not

Jews have faced crises throughout history. Whenever faced with emergencies, Jews traditionally respond with prayer, action, and adaptability. Today, we are faced with both a flood of emotions and a flood of requests for assistance from our local community.

As is the tradition, the Greater Charlotte Jewish community has responded to these needs with understanding, compassion, and financial support. But, as is also a tradition within the Jewish community, people need to participate. The escalation of COVID-19 calls for a coordinated response to meet the demands created by this unprecedented pandemic. And that coordinated response is the JewishCharlotte Emergency Response Fund.

The JewishCharlotte Emergency Response Fund will be guided by the Federation and fund individuals, families, and Jewish organizations affected by the pandemic. The assistance will allow organizations to preserve their workforces, and deliver critical services. 100% of every dollar raised will go directly to agencies to meet critical needs.

To help with this important effort, please donate at www.jewishcharlotte.org or mail your check to Jewish Federation of Greater Charlotte, 5007 Providence Road, Ste. 101, Charlotte, NC 28226.

Thank you to those who have already donated. The needs will continue. Visit www.jewishcharlotte.org and donate today.

Last month, the first round of grants was approved for distribution to meet the most immediate needs. Learn how these dollars will help strengthen and sustain our community, and how Federation is working in partnership with you, our dedicated and generous community members, to stay responsive during COVID-19.

As of April 14, our JEWISHCOMMUNITY EMERGENCY RESPONSE FUND has raised more than $312,000! Thank you! Please join us for our Virtual Annual Meeting on May 21 at 7:00 pm as we honor Outgoing President, Alison Lerner and welcome Incoming President, Ron Townsend.

As Federation continues to work with our network of beneficiary agencies to meet short-term needs as a result of COVID-19, our 2020 Annual Campaign continues to insure that we are able to sustain the recovery once this crisis is over and beyond. Federation is uniquely positioned to manage overall communal needs by convening its partners to identify and respond to those needs and ultimately working with the largest donor base in the community to help fund those needs. This is what Federation does day in and day out, and this is what your Annual Campaign dollars fund year in and year out.

Donors to Federation’s Annual Campaign appreciate the importance of community. Your investment means even more in times of crisis so that we continue to support those organizations and programs that make our Charlotte Jewish community a special place to live. If you have not already done so, please make your 2020 Annual Campaign commitment today at www.jewishcharlotte.org or mail your donation to Jewish Federation of Greater Charlotte, 5007 Providence Road, Ste. 101, Charlotte, NC 28226.

As of April 14, our 2020 ANNUAL CAMPAIGN has raised more than $3,207,156.

Chelmi Hakimi, an owner of two local businesses who took part in a Partnership Leadership Mission describes the situation: “Businesses have closed down however their outgoing cash flow continues as usual (with the exception of a few state provisions to ease their situations). Suppliers are being paid even though there are no revenues coming in. Small businesses will survive this month of March since they were able to operate for half a month, but if April continues to witness a shutdown, many business will collapse financially and, with that, entire families who depend on the income. Unfortunately, this is the same situation for all businesses and people. We’re all in the same boat. Until last week, the country was allowing businesses to decide whether to remain open or not. I, like many others, decided to close my businesses a week ago in order to assist in the general effort to stop the spread of the virus and to protect my own employees and customers.”

The most difficult thing these days is the feeling of uncertainty. Instructions to the public change from day to day and are sometimes unclear. We don’t know how long this situation will continue and how much more serious it will become. Another serious concern is the generation of older parents in Israel who have seen wars and recovery, economic and political crises.

Eliyahu Lapidot, a math teacher at Katzir School: “My parents aren’t alive today but I’m happy they were able to experience this feeling of isolation that I’m experiencing. This almost complete shutdown and not being able to go to work is forcing me and everyone else into social isolation. I’m used to being around my fellow teachers at school and taking part in folk dancing twice a week. Now I’m limited to giving assignments online to my students at home. On the bright side, I’ve learned to cook a more varied menu for my teenage kids who remain with me (unlike they’re glued to their screens playing Minecraft or Fortnite). I ‘meet’ my friends online including Gery, who hosted me last summer in Richmond and who told me about the situation there, which is virtually the same. Her husband is in the medical profession and works long hours while Gery’s routine hasn’t changed radically since she works from home while raising her small children.”

At present, the unemployment rate reached 22% of the workforce, however some employees are considered essential in emergency situations. One such person is Eliyahu Krav, who took part in our Young Leadership Mission last year. Eliyahu works in the Local Council as director of the Community Security Authority. Only several weeks ago Eliyahu got married in a ceremony that was viewed live online by many “guests” from our SE Communities. He and his wife were on their way to their honeymoon when the coronavirus crises erupted, thus changing their plans entirely. Today, Eliyahu works round the clock and under tremendous pressure with little sleep in order to carry out all of his emergency tasks. He is being swamped with calls amid this hectic situation which is dynamic and changes from day to day.

All of the children are at home these days. The older ones are studying online, the younger ones are not. The hardest thing for the children is being away from their friends and not being able to go to parks or take part in extracurricular activities. So naturally they’re bored. It’s even harder for parents who need to keep their children occupied and maintain the family’s morale, even though some of them are working from home while others are seeking some sort of income and trying to fathom what’s happening in this new “age.”

Our P2G team created a number of alternative projects online that will offer encouragement to our communities in the U.S. and Israel. Our overriding guideline, as always, is the relationship between us.

On the bright side, we all have more time to spend with our immediate families and we’re learning to appreciate the simple things in life that we took for granted in the past. Despite the feeling of isolation – away from family relatives, parents and friends – as a Partnership staff we are busy trying to continue strengthening our relationship with the Jewish community overseas amid this new reality of virtual meetings and activity.

The Interpreter, scheduled for publication on March 28, is one of the most unusual Holocaust books I’ve ever read.

This unique story travels back and forth in time and perspective. It is the story of Kurt Berlin who as a teenager is sent by his parents Berta and Hertz to Brussels, Belgium, on the Kindertransport in 1939. While on board he meets Elsa and they are taken in and lovingly cared for by the wonderful Mandelbaum family. During their stay, Kurt and Elsa fall in love and promise to find each other after the war.

The Interpreter is also the story of Kurt’s parents Berta and Hertz Berlin, and recounts their highly suspenseful and dangerous escape to freedom. Hertz and Berta find themselves in unfathomable situations and their subsequent actions of daring and bravery are spellbinding for the reader.

Hoping to find the answers about what happened during the war to his extended family and the woman he loves, US Army officer Kurt Berlin returns to Europe in 1945 to accept the post of interpreter in the OSS interrogation of a captured Nazi war criminal. This task is emotionally heart wrenching for Kurt as it brings back the extreme Antisemitism he and his family suffered at the hands not only of the Nazis but specifically the particular Nazi who is being questioned. As the interrogation progresses, Kurt is faced with a moral dilemma which if acted upon would have serious repercussions for him and his family. Kurt’s struggle and subsequent actions are central to the fast-moving plot.

The Interpreter is a suspenseful first-rate novel of historical fiction that has it all – love, hatred, heartbreak, family loyalty, danger, and courage. It is sure to be an award winner for author A.J. Sidransky who has published three novels since 2013. The National Jewish Book Awards selected his first novel Forgiving Maximo Rothman as a final-ist in Outstanding Debut Fiction in 2013. Next Generation Indie Book Awards selected Stealing a Summer’s Afternoon, his second book, as a finalist for Best Second Novel in 2015. Forgiving Maricela Camacho his third work, received the David Award, from Deadly Ink! Writer’s Conference for Best Mystery of 2016.

A.J. Sidransky is currently at work on The Investigator, the second installment in The Interpreter series. He lives in Washington Heights in Upper Manhattan with his wife. He is a dyed-in-the-wool New Yorker, born in the Bronx, and a life-long Yankees fan.

If you are looking for a book you can’t put down, read The Interpreter – then join me in anticipating A.J. Sidransksy’s next book in the series.

PJ OUR WAY Visits CJDS

Charlotte’s chapter of PJ Our Way organized a very special experience for the children of Charlotte Jewish Day School’s 3rd grade class — a virtual visit from PJ Library’s award-winning author Erica Perl. After reading Ms. Perl’s book When Life Gives You O.J., the students prepared thoughtful questions. Each child was able to have a turn to ask his/her question and receive answers that were insightful and often funny. As the students left the Center for Jewish Education, they all were wondering when they could have this experience again.

We are so grateful to Erica Perl for providing this wonderful, educational experience.

PJ Our Way Charlotte looks forward to bringing this type of experience to more of our local schools in the future.

What is PJ Our Way?

PJ Our Way is the next chapter of the popular PJ Library program. Kids ages 8 1/2 to 11 receive the gift of exceptional books with Jewish themes — and they get to choose the books themselves. Our Charlotte community has over 260 PJ Our Way subscribers. If you would like to receive free, age-appropriate Jewish books every month, then go to pjourway.org.

Over the last several weeks, JFS has been on the frontlines, responding to the urgent needs of Charlotteans who depend on us.

COVID-19 Support Page: We’ve added a support page that identifies programs, services, and activities - all of the ways in which JFS and others are supporting the community. Go to www.jfscharlotte.org, under the services tab to access support or learn how you can help.

JFS Food Pantry: Just before the shutdown JFS had no way of knowing what was to come, but we knew, with a sense of great urgency that our food pantry clients would be in need so practically overnight a month’s worth of groceries was distributed to each assisted living facility and to eight different homebound seniors were filled and delivered remotely.

Bobbie Mabe harvested the Shalom Park garden for fresh produce for JFS clients.

COVID-19 Support Page: Many in our community are getting laid off and people of all income levels are feeling the effects of the times, facing financial stressors that never could have been anticipated. JFS has established a special COVID-19 Emergency Fund to assist those in need. For more information please go to www.jfscharlotte.org.

Volunteering: So many in our community have reached out and offered to help in any way needed. Thank you does not nearly feel adequate. Just a few highlights:

* The Charlotte Jewish community donated hundreds of pounds of food.
* 67 "Taste of the Holidays" Passover Bags were filled and delivered to homebound seniors and to eight different assisted living facilities across Charlotte, delivered by 15 volunteers, in two days.
* Dozens of prepared meals were donated by The Circle of Generous Hearts.
* 75 bags of groceries were filled and delivered by an army of volunteers.

We are living through unique and uncertain times, offering ways to cope.

Triple P Positive Parenting
- Age specific online workshops offering tips and tricks for parenting, addressing:
  * For toddlers/pre-schoolers: tantrums, disobedience, and trouble following directions
  * For elementary: fears, chores, and homework
  * For teens/tweens: rudeness and disrespect, anxiety, and depression

Finding Your Shalom: Managing Stress and Anxiety
- This workshop is dedicated to helping adults process and manage their daily lives during these most unfamiliar and uncertain times. Learn coping skills and strategies for feeling more grounded. Explore ways to become more resilient while managing your everyday stressors.

For dates and times of workshops email us at info@jfscharlotte.org or call 704-364-6594.

Online Programs and Activities
- JFS - "Coping Conversations"
  - We are experiencing a loss of control, perhaps fear and anxiety about our health and that of our loved ones and we’ve lost the structure and normalcy of our everyday lives. At JFS, we have continued to provide therapy through phone and video sessions.
  - Older Adults and Caregivers: JFS continues to provide on-going personal contact to 24 Holocaust survivors and approximately 65 other senior adults in the community. Online resources are also being shared so seniors can remain connected and engaged. Caregiver Support Groups are being held virtually.

Support Groups
- * Motti Groner and the Young Adult Professionals of Uptown Chabad delivered food and Passover holiday bags.
  - April was Volunteer Appreciation Month, a time to recognize and thank volunteers who help us deliver services and to make a difference in the lives of our clients. In addition to those who stepped up with recent, most urgent needs, we are grateful for all of our volunteers, year-round, who help us make friendly visits, serve food at our community celebrations, or lead Shabbat Services at senior residential communities. We could not do what we do without their time, talent, and gifts.

Irving Bienstock Visits Hadassah Hospital

By Dana Kapustin
Lillian Bienstock was actively involved in the Charlotte Chapter of Hadassah between the years of 1975-1992. She was our treasurer for four years. She enjoyed playing Mah Jongg, having lunch, and socializing with the Hadassah ladies. It was Irving’s wish to recite the Mourners Kaddish for Lillian while visiting Hadassah Hospital in the Chagall Chapel.

When Irving Bienstock went to Israel in February of 2020, one of the most important places he wanted to visit was Hadassah Hospital. His dear friends, Susan and Donald Jacobs, Lynne and Morrey Sheffer, and I escorted him to Israel. When Lillian passed away, it was very important for Irving to honor and remember her with a Perpetual Yartzeit. Every year upon her Yartzeit, Lillian’s name will be read during the Mourners Kaddish in the Chagall Chapel in Hadassah Hospital, Jerusalem.

While at Hadassah, we received a special visit by Dvir, a very special man with an incredible story of survival, hope, and blessings for the future from Hadassah Hospital when he was a teenager as a victim of terror attack in Jerusalem the day we arrived in Israel. He was a member of the army unit that was having a ceremony at the Western Wall, when a terrorist drove his car into the group of soldiers. Irving is grateful for the Israel Defense Forces, and he shared these feelings with the Lone Soldier from San Diego, CA. We met incredible people, experienced a VIP tour by Deputy Director of Hadassah, Barbara Goldstein, and enjoyed a tour about the Chagall windows. No trip to Israel is complete without visiting Hadassah Hospital. For more information on Hadassah, please visit www.hadassah.org.

CJDS Gives and Gets Back

The Jewish and holiday programming are the highlights of the CJDS school year. That is why once a year CJDS invites all the children from Religious Schools, Hebrew Schools, and Sunday Schools in the Charlotte region to celebrate Judaism. This year they were invited to enjoy and learn about the times when we were liberated from Egypt at a Freedom Fair. The Freedom Fair, like the Jewish Pride Fair and the Israel Fair experienced in previous years, engaged the children through art, music, and experience about the various topics. This year’s Fair included a Matzah Bakery where they made their own matzah, a Drum Circle expressing the sounds of slavery to those of liberation and the giving of the Torah, a Ten Commandment Jewpardy game, and tambourine art remembering that the Jewish women of that generation expressed their joy and gratitude to God with tambourine playing. Over 300 children from Temple Beth El, Temple Israel, Temple Emanuel in Gastonia, Congregation Ohr Hatorah, and the Ballantyne Jewish Center attended the fair. Teachers and administrators have expressed how pleased they are with this annual event.

On the flip side, Temple Israel included CJDS in their artist-in residence weekend with renowned artist Mordechai Rosenstein. Rosenstein’s work is based in the art of calligraphy but highlights Jewish themes, ideas and teachings. All students in grades K-5 were able to visit with the artist, watch him work and ask questions. They also viewed a display of various works from originals to prints. As a special tie-in to Mr. Rosenstein’s visit, our second grade did a project to show him. Using their Hebrew names, they tried their hands at fancy Hebrew lettering and filled in the remaining spaces with lots of bright color. Some of the student’s work reflected the Hebrew meaning of their name. We are so grateful that our students had this opportunity, especially since it ties in with their art and Judaica classes.

Mom always made sure you had the best.
Now it’s her turn.

We cater to seniors who desire social opportunities and a carefree lifestyle. With two great locations and warm, caring staff, you’ll feel right at home as soon as you step inside.

Freedom School Still Making a Difference

Freedom School is a six-week literacy and character-building summer program designed to help children in our community become self-sufficient by closing literacy achievement gaps. As we all struggle to cope with the current health crisis, our Shalom Park Freedom School program is forced to grapple with how the pandemic will affect our already disadvantaged students. Each summer, Shalom Park scholars, selected from Huntingtowne Farms and Sterling Elementary (the two schools in faith-based partnerships with Temple Israel and Temple Beth El), work to overcome summer reading loss, the foremost contributor to the achievement gap for low-income children. Typically, low-income children lose two to three months in reading level each summer, now however, there will likely be even more than just summer learning loss for these kids.

Tutoring programs that supplement regular schoolwork have been put on hold as educators across the county try to figure out how best to reach all of their students and use online tools. Freedom School Partners, which oversees all 16 Freedom School sites in Charlotte, is in close contact with CMS, and they are working on multiple scenarios for the summer, ranging from a typical Freedom School program to a completely virtual program.

In the shadow of that uncertainty, our volunteers continue to work tirelessly as they prepare for our typical summer program on Shalom Park. Our enrichment coordinators have almost completely filled our programming schedule, which will include: a meet and greet with the Charlotte Knights’ mascot, Homer; a visit by WCNC news, weather, and sports anchors; John Tosco from Tosco Music Group; time with a CMPD officer; Lowe’s crafting time; and so much more. It feels particularly good to be doing something meaningful and productive right now.

CJDS Rising the Challenge of “Stay At Home”

By Mariashi Groner, director, CJDS

I don’t believe we will ever forget, Friday the 13th, 2020, the day we suspended school to help slow down the spread of COVID-19. On that day, when we realized that we were about to start teaching our students online, Mandy Difilippo, assistant director, Andrea Gamlin, technology teacher, and Quyen Nguyen, IT director, hunkered down and prepared a comprehensive plan for each class and subject area.

The following Monday and Tuesday, all the teachers came to school, collaborated in meetings and prepared their classes for the foreseeable future. They filled their in-person curriculum with online supplies, tech tools, chart paper, etc. in case they would not be able to return. They made videos in their classrooms using their tools and teaching aids for future lessons, soon to be uploaded. On Wednesday, our parents lined up, carpool style, so that we would be able to limit exposure, to pick their children’s books, supplies, and materials that the teachers prepared for them.

Since then, it’s been a roller coaster. Technology does not always work. Children, especially in grades K-5, don’t always want to do their work, even when their teacher is right there. Consider the distractions: the cat, the dog, brothers and sisters, and mom and dad on their own Zoom work calls. And we all know, that mommies and daddies are not supposed to teach. They are also struggling with questions, “Why are we not at school? I want to be able to ‘really’ see my teacher. I want to play with my friends.”

On top of that, our parents, while learning to work from home are managing the class schedule for their child or children, each with unique schedules and assignments.

With all those obstacles, our parents, our students, and our teachers are superstars. The interactions between the students themselves (they are even setting up their own Zoom playdates), the individual attention that the teachers are giving the students when needed, and the effort being put into the work that is submitted are all helping us continue to reach our students and families. We have even received emails from our students thanking us for their “new school.”

Shabbat assemblies are still taking place and we get to light the Shabbat candles together (something we did not do before). Our students were on a Pesach Scavenger Hunt through an app where the students were given 20 Pesach missions to complete during our Pesach break.

We have certainly learned from this exercise that we like to go to work, the children want to go to school, and we need each other, not only through email and Zoom but through real-time connections. We have all had to break ourselves of our normal learning – our students, our staff, our parents. Yet, we have risen to the challenge and have proven that we can do it.

A Chag Sameach video from each of our staff and faculty went out to the school body wishing all of our families an enjoyable spring break and happy Pesach. The tone from the staff was genuine and warm, wishing everyone a happy Pesach and waiting for the time we will once again be in our building learning together.
Professional Development Day for CJP Teachers

On February 17, the staff at the Charlotte Jewish Preschool participated in our annual school-wide Professional Development Day. Because we run both half and full day programs, we operate on two different calendars, making coming together as one staff very difficult, which is why this one day is so important to us. At the CJP one of our core values is limud, or learning. Not only do we find it important for our students to be lifelong learners, but we find that coming together as a kehillah (community) to add to our professional toolbox, as well as to bond and participate in shared experience is a top priority. On this day we had the pleasure of hosting Nancy Siegel, of Nancy Siegel Consulting, to present on mindfulness in the Preschool Classroom as well as to engage in various hands on activities to inspire our teachers as they plan lessons in our brand new MakerSpace.

The Center for Jewish Education invited and organized our visit from Nancy Siegel. Siegel is an expert in mindfulness and has a strong background in Jewish preschool education, making her a perfect fit for our day of learning. Siegel presented to our staff about problem solving, thinking in the moment, and being present. She shared with our teachers different props to help teach children these lifelong skills. You might have heard your child talk about the new “breathing balls,” cymbals, glitter jars, and other counting techniques their teachers have already introduced in their classrooms.

Lindsay Romero, full day 2s teacher says, “The breathing balls help us get ready for the day. We start our circle time with each child taking a turn leading us in breathing exercises. The ball helps the kids to visualize a big breath in and a big breath out. I can literally see the kids physically calming down after free play so they are ready for what’s coming next.” When the kids aren’t using the breathing ball you might catch them “smelling and blowing” on their (imaginary) hot chocolate. Siegel stressed to our teachers the importance of breathing and the necessity to teach our kids this skill, as it is not inherent.

Bo Boyd, 2s student, leads his friends in a breathing exercise. Bo told his friends to “take a big breath in and blow it out” in a calm quiet tone.

Talya Tateo, 2s teacher, hosts a “Loose Parts Popup.”

Stephanie Zubrinsky, 1s teacher, teaches us how to make paint with items from nature.

Becca Green leads her group in Expression of Judaism using Natural Resources.

Nancy Siegel of Nancy Siegel Consulting discusses the “Breathing Ball.”

For the second part of our day we discussed our newly opened MakerSpace. Thanks to our leadership and staff, the staff have participated in over 280 hours of professional development and been to Italy, Atlanta, Nashville, Chicago, Durham, Waynesboro, Dallas, and here on Shalom Park to attend various educational and Jewish professional conferences. At the CJP, we find that coming together as a kehillah (community) to add to our professional toolbox, as well as to bond and participate in shared experience is a top priority. On this day we had the pleasure of hosting Nancy Siegel, of Nancy Siegel Consulting, to present on mindfulness in the Preschool Classroom as well as to engage in various hands on activities to inspire our teachers as they plan lessons in our brand new MakerSpace.

The Center for Jewish Education invited and organized our visit from Nancy Siegel. Siegel is an expert in mindfulness and has a strong background in Jewish preschool education, making her a perfect fit for our day of learning. Emojis of JPS
It's hard to describe a day in the life of a JPS kid with words alone. In this article, which was written in February, we used emojis to help us out.

The art easel is a favorite for many of us at school. We enjoy experimenting with different colors and paints. There are no mistakes in art and we are given the opportunity to create and invent.

We celebrated the wedding of Yitzchak & Rivka, and everyone got to dress up as a different member of the wedding party. Dress-up and roleplaying helps us understand and experience the stories we learn.

Every day brings new discoveries and adventures.

JPS kids are expert handwashers. We wash them often and we wash them well, keeping germs at bay.

Reading helps develop our language and listening skills. We love to read books on our own and together as a group.

Working on our gross motor skills helps us gain strength and confidence in our bodies.

From the JPS Director, Regarding “Stay At Home”

By Devorah Gorkin

As schools in North Carolina and across the country are closed, we are offering Zoom classes daily to our toddlers and up. The classes include circle, Judaica, story time, music, yoga, science, art, and gym. As we prepared our students for Passover, the 7s and up experienced a virtual Model Seder as well as a Matzah Bakery. Here are some parents responses after we asked what they most enjoy about zooming:

• “Staying connected with friends and teachers.”
• “The teachers engaging with each child and giving them attention. And the schedule. Makes it seem like a real day.”

No matter what the future brings, we know one thing: the students and teachers at JPS are a family and will continue to stay connected no matter what.

The Ruach Creates a Watershed Shabbat Experience

By Jeffrey Gitomer (Editor’s Note: The following article was scheduled to appear in last month’s Charlotte Jewish News.)

Last year, after a 40-year hiatus, I was reunited with my Judaism. A friend told me about a post-denominational Friday night service here in Charlotte known as The Shabbat Experience led by The Ruach and Rabbi Rachel Smookler. Upon hearing that the service used all modern Jewish music that was played by an amazing rock band and was held in a comfortable setting with inspirational words delivered by an incredible rabbi, I knew that I had to check it out.

Keep in mind that growing up I was extremely observant. With my family we attended Shabbat and holiday services all the time, albeit reluctantly as a child.

I remember very distinctly often asking the question, “Do we have to go to services?” And we went pretty much always. I can’t say that I was always inspired, but I always felt very Jewish as a result of it. I guess if I were being honest, the Oneg Shabbat was really the draw.

Fast forward about 40 years (maybe more), and I find myself sitting with my wife about to receive what would be, for me, the religious experience of a lifetime. The music that The Ruach played was not only inspirational and spiritual. (70% of the music that The Ruach plays is original. One of their songs, “Romemu,” is played on the international streaming music service, Jewish Rock Radio.)

“Ruach” is defined in Hebrew as spirit and boy do these folks have and evoke it. Their Facebook page modestly defines themselves as: “Spreading the joy of Judaism through modern Jewish music. We provide a Jewish spiritual and cultural experience.” A total understatement.

In a world that has seemingly departed from traditional religion, The Ruach has somehow found a way to reunite people and instill great feelings through their innovation and melody.

The Ruach rocks Shabbat and their “Experience” is one that touches heart, soul, and mind. For me, it was a reunion of my growing-up life and my life today.

A Watershed Event: On the fourth Friday night in February, we took our family, Jennifer (wife), Gabrielle (daughter 10), and a couple of friends to The Shabbat Experience in its new home at the Watershed in the Plaza-Midwood area of Charlotte where we joined more than 150 others to experience and celebrate the joy of Shabbat. The Watershed is exactly the kind of place that the band and The Ruach Community have been looking and hoping for.

The Shabbat Experience was electric. The music rose to the heavens. Rabbi Smookler’s words as she consecrated of the ark for the new venue were inspirational and heartfelt. She’s a wonderful storyteller and somehow related each story back to me.

The Ruach adds a new dimension to traditional Jewish services. They deliver spirituality, excitement, familiar prayers, melodies you will sing between services, and for me personally, a deeply moving remembrance of past to celebrate the presence.

The Ruach is also making an impact the Jewish community of Charlotte with world-class experiences. Superstar Joe Buchanan joined the band for Shabbat at Temple Kol Ami in Fort Mill in March and The High Holy Day Experience will be held at Queens University in the newly renovated Sandra Levine Theatre where 1,000 people are expected to celebrate Rosh Hashanah and Kol Nidre this year.

If you are looking to rekindle the Jewish spirit within you, please join me at The Shabbat Experience. You won’t be alone. You will feel the spirit and breath of God in the room.

Don’t miss a thing. To be on the distribution list and get the latest updates on The Ruach and The Shabbat Experience, email the. ruach.band@gmail.com. The Ruach is a 501(c)(3) non-profit organization whose mission is to spread the joy of Judaism through new Jewish musical experiences that are meant to create and maintain personal connections and inspire and engage people to embrace the religion and all that it has to offer.

Freedom School

Board made up of dedicated high school students who are selected to volunteer as Freedom School classroom assistants for at least two weeks during the summer. Our applicant pool this year was fabulous. We will have forty-five teens volunteering over the course of the six-week program. Twenty-one of these teens are returning to the Teen Board, and one is returning for her fourth and final summer before she heads off to college. Our Teen Board chairs are currently working through a virtual platform to train our volunteers for the summer. Please keep your eye open for the Teen Board’s Autobell fundraiser, which will be taking place May 1-30.

Out of respect for appropriate social distancing, we have postponed our 10th anniversary spring fundraiser. We hope to be able to celebrate in person at a later date and will follow up with details as events unfold. Thank you for being patient as we remain flexible in these uncertain times. In the meantime, if you are able, please consider donating to Shalom Park Freedom School at: www.sp-freedomschool.org/donate-now/. Your help is especially invaluable now, given that it is not clear at this point when, or even if, we will be able to hold our in-person fundraiser. We need all the help we can get to continue our Shalom Park site.

Our volunteers remain passionately engaged and virtually connected as we hope for the best, and plan for whatever may come. Thank you for your continued support of our vital program.

Jewish Responsibility Explored During International Development Study Trip to Rwanda

Moishe House’s David Cygielman Visits Jewish and Israeli Service and Development Projects

The inaugural InterACT Global study trip for high-level Jewish influencers from the United States, Britain, and Israel returned from five days in Rwanda. The group explored the impact of Jewish and Israeli international development and service projects and studied the idea of Jewish responsibility to non-Jewish vulnerable populations.

Participants in the immersive study trip included CEOs and chairpersons of major Jewish organizations, Jewish lay leaders, journalists, and opinion-shapers representing diverse communities and perspectives.

The InterACT Global delegation visited Jewish and Israeli organizations and individuals engaged in innovative efforts to meet global challenges. They saw non-profit and for-profit initiatives and groups who volunteer, fund local partners, and offer training. The itinerary included the Kigali Genocide Memorial, Rweru Reconciliation Village, Agahozo Shalom Youth Village, Energiya Global solar fields, and MASHAV Horticulture Center of Excellence. The delegation met with Israel’s first ambassador to Rwanda, Ron Adam, and influential Rwandans who shared local and personal perspectives about Rwandan challenges and solutions.

“InterACT Global was an opportunity for Jewish leaders to study the impact of a foundation’s Jewish value in action: caring about the world and working to make it better,” said OLAM Executive Director Dyonna Ginsburg. “Our hope is that these change-makers will be inspired to launch conversations about global responsibility when they get home and galvanize broader segments of the global Jewish community to support vulnerable populations.”

While in Rwanda, the group considered the global Jewish community’s responsibility and opportunity to use its established institutions and networks to make an impact for others.

“Having the opportunity to be on the ground in Rwanda to see the work of Jewish and Israeli NGO’s in solar, agriculture and humanitarian aid was quite special. It’s exciting to see the impact the Jewish community can have around the globe,” said Dave Cygielman of Charlotte, founder and CEO of Moishe House International.

InterACT Global is spearheaded by OLAM, a platform of Jewish and Israeli international development organizations founded in 2015. The trip is organized in partnership with The Gesher Leadership Institute, The Society for International Development—SID Israel, and Shalom Corps. It is funded by the Charles and Lynn Schusterman Family Foundation and the Pears Foundation.

Seven NC Natives Who Serve in the IDF Were Not Home with Their Families for Passover Due to COVID-19

Some seven North Carolina natives are currently serving as Lone Soldiers, those who join the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) with no immediate family in Israel. Among them is Charlotte’s Yossi Berendti.

In light of the coronavirus pandemic, thousands of IDF soldiers have been ordered to remain on base for an indefinite period of time to minimize their exposure to the virus. The current crisis means that many IDF soldiers, among them some 1,000 Lone Soldiers from the US, including the seven from North Carolina, will not be home with their families for the Passover holiday.

The IDF is taking these necessary measures to remain vigilant against COVID-19 and maintain operational preparedness. The IDF undertakes the responsibility of not only fighting against foreign armies but also assisting with national civilian missions. While quarantined on their bases, IDF soldiers are helping the Israeli national effort through blood drives and by managing two—soon to be four—hotels that have been converted into quarantine and rehabilitation centers for the civilian population.

Friends of the Israel Defense Forces (FIDF) has implemented programs to address the emergency needs of soldiers quarantined on bases and at home. FIDF staff in Israel is distributing tens of thousands of hygiene kits, gym supplies, which consist of various weights and equipment; yoga mats; snack and sweet packages; Sony PlayStations; and more to the IDF soldiers. FIDF continues to work closely with the IDF to support the soldiers’ increasing well-being needs as the situation progresses.

In addition, FIDF has established a dedicated information center for Lone Soldiers and their loved ones, as well as a special quarantine facility in the Givat Olga recreation center to provide the best care and attention for their needs.

There is still an urgent need for more hygiene kits to be sent to the soldiers, and this is one of FIDF’s top priorities at this time. On top of this aid being provided to soldiers across Israel, FIDF is also prioritizing the FIDF DIGNTY Program, which helps ease the burden on soldiers and their families, who struggle to cover their daily expenses.

Soldiers and their families with financial difficulties are challenged even more because of the coronavirus pandemic and are in immediate need.

As you may recall in a recent CJN article, we introduced you to the R U OK, Shalom Park? Community Awareness Initiative. It’s all about the importance of reaching out to people you know who might be showing signs of needing some emotional support. It encourages each of us to step out of our comfort zone and take that brave step to have that conversation — where you check in with someone who you think might be struggling with a mental health issue or be in some type of emotional turmoil. We want everyone to feel confident they know the signs someone might need support by listening to what they’re saying, seeing what they’re doing, or knowing what’s going on in their life. Whenever you notice a change, no matter how small, we want you to trust your gut and start an R U OK? conversation.

As May is Mental Health awareness month, this message could not be more relevant, and most appropriate. For as of this writing, you are likely hunkered down at home practicing social distancing. And the world we are living in is no longer the same nor sane. The rules have changed and we are adapting to new ways of functioning. The cornerstones of mental health, having a sense of control and having structure in your daily lives, are temporarily gone. So where once the recommendation would be to have this conversation, in person or face to face, with your current situation that is not a reality.

The conversation, however, is now not only important but critical. The Coronavirus pandemic has significantly increased stress, anxiety, and depression. Feelings of isolation have seeped in and it can heighten feelings of sadness and depression. Conflicts with family members, spouses, and significant others are not uncommon and can lead to increased anger and violent behavior. Excessive stays at home will no doubt cause children to act out. We are facing unique times and challenges. Many of these challenges were lying dormant but have now been exacerbated by these uncertain, unpredictable times. If any of this behavior sounds or looks familiar to someone you know and care about, we urge you to have the conversation. Make a phone call, skype, face time, or use whatever platform you can to check in and connect with those struggling.

By starting a conversation and commenting on the changes you’ve noticed, you could help that family member, friend, or co-worker open up. If they say they are not ok, you can help them find resources and strategies to better manage the load. If they are ok, that person will know you’re someone who cares enough to ask.

And then, ask yourself, R U OK? Because the reality of the COVID-19 pandemic is that many of us who typically manage our stress without it interfering in our everyday lives are also feeling the effects of the change in our world. You might have heightened concerns about your financial situation or feeling the lack of social connections or grappling with the tension of strained family relationships from being confined to your home. You are probably having a normal reaction to the current situation but if you are feeling stress and anxiety, reach out for help. Identify someone you feel you can talk to or just connect with a friend.

Also, remember it is OK to acknowledge what is happening and the impact it is having on your emotional state. At home, talk to your family members. Be open and honest and acknowledge the stress that everyone is experiencing, recognize the challenge of being at home together all the time. Then talk about ways that will help each of you to manage the challenge.

And, if you need additional assistance, reach out to JFS. They can connect you with a friendly caller volunteer or with a therapist, if needed, to help you navigate through these unusual times. Email info@jfscharlotte.org for more information.

Bal Tashchit and Beyond: Plant A Garden, No Matter How Small

During this time when nothing seems “normal,” we can experience joy in the unfolding of spring on its usual schedule – the transitions from daffodils to tulips and the flowering of dogwoods to the trees leafing out. The fresh (and pollen-filled) spring air and rain showers will soon give way to the heat and humidity of a Charlotte summer. We can get outdoors, take a walk with our family while observing social distancing requirements, or work in our yards. A 93-year-old Charlotte resident and Holocaust survivor, Irving Bienstock, fulfilled his dream of visiting an Israeli Defense Forces (IDF) on February 11, when he got a tour of the Yarden Camp in the Golan Heights. His visit came to fruition with the help of the founder of the Israeli Defense Forces (FIDF) and members of his local community, headed by Dana Kapustin.

Irving Bienstock and his family escaped Germany in January 1939 and arrived in the United States in April 1940. Five years later, in April 1945, he returned to the war — this time as an American soldier on the USS Wakefield. Since the founding of the State of Israel, Bienstock’s wish as a Holocaust survivor and veteran American soldier had been to visit active members of the Israeli military on an IDF base. “I grew up as a Jewish boy in Nazi Germany and when I saw a policeman or soldier, I would turn and run the other way,” Bienstock said. “I was proud to spend two years in the U.S. Army during the war, but it was still a Jew in a foreign army. This is my last chance to see my army. Today, to see a Jew in uniform serving the Jewish state is a victory, and it feels we have come such a long way.”

During the visit to the base, Bienstock and the other participants, including several of his friends and members of the local Charlotte Jewish community, had an introductory meeting with Yarden Camp’s Eagle Battalion of the Combat Intelligence Collection Corps, which serves as Israel’s eyes on Syria. Bienstock presented a short movie about his life to the Battalion and spoke to the soldiers about his story and concerns over rising Antisemitism in today’s world.

Bienstock even had the opportunity to speak in German to one of the soldiers, Cpl. Shawn, who is originally from Germany and currently serves in the Eagle Battalion as a Lone Soldier—one who enlist in the IDF without any immediate family in Israel.

The Combat Intelligence Collection Corps was adopted by the FIDF Southeast Region as part of the FIDF Adopt-A-Brigade Program. FIDF’s unique Adopt-A-Brigade Program allows supporters to go beyond their donations and get more involved by providing financial assistance to soldiers in need, caring for Lone Soldiers with no immediate family in Israel, and funding rest and recuperation breaks for combat brigades. Program supporters can visit the soldiers in their adopted units on IDF bases and communicate with unit commanders. In 2019, FIDF supporters formed unbreakable bonds with the soldiers of 10 brigades and 75 battalions, squadrons, and flotillas.

Legacy Story

Jeff and Lee Bierer

By Lee Bierer

Jeff and I grew up in environments where being Jewish was very commonplace. I was raised in Newton, MA where the town’s motto “the Garden City” became “the Garden City, where there’s a Rose ‘in’ Bloom (Rosenbloom) on every corner.” Surrounded by active Jewish communities, neither of us felt much need to affiliate. However, when we moved to Charlotte in 1995, we immediately visited Shalom Park, signing David and Lucy up for JCC basketball and religious school. We left family and friends up north and we were delighted to be welcomed warmly here. We both smile remembering the “Shalom Y’All” welcome package we received.

In 1995-1996, there was a big influx of families moving in, many who had stories similar to ours and many who jumped in and got involved in the Jewish community. Jeff was invited to join the Board of the JCC quickly and co-led the strategic planning process resulting in the expansion of the JCC. We were also invited to join the inaugural class of The Bernstein Leadership Group back in 1998. Participating in that group with engaged and motivated peers inspired us to get more involved.

I was involved in initiating and organizing the Jewish Community Cultural Arts Festival and I’ve worked for the Foundation of Shalom Park, Jewish Family Services, served as President of TBE Sisterhood, and been a 3rd grade teacher at TBE for the last 15 years. Since Jeff’s early work at the JCC, he has served on Boards at Temple Beth El, TBE Brotherhood and the Foundation for the Charlotte Jewish Community (FCJC) where he helped develop and launch the Create Your Jewish Legacy while Board Chair.

Shalom Park has been our North Star and been the origination of many of our long-lasting relationships. We have contemplated moving as David is married and living in Minneapolis and Lucy is in Washington, DC. But we’re keenly aware that we won’t be able to duplicate what we have right now; the small moments of walking into the hallway recognizing what we have here is special. We have created a Bierer Family Fund, from which the four of us issue grants each year to charities we prioritize as most deserving. Our hope is to inspire a culture of philanthropy that our children carry on after we’re gone.

We want our community to thrive and warmly welcome the next generation.

Preparing Young Zionists for College and Beyond
One High Schooler’s Perspective

By Talia Levine

Last month, I attended the National Club Z Conference in San Francisco. To say it encouraged me to become more involved with Israel is an understatement. Throughout this experience, I became more educated about Israel’s rich history and developed a deeper understanding about the conflicts in Israel today. For me, Club Z’s National Conference was a celebration of our Jewish homeland, Israel.

Club Z is an organization committed to educating the next generation of Jewish Zionist leaders. They have chapters in Los Angeles, Bay Area, Brooklyn, and more recently, Charlotte. The Charlotte chapter started at the beginning of the 2019 school year and has attracted 24 active members. We meet once a month to discuss topics ranging from the roots of Antisemitism to media bias involving Israel. To help educate us, Club Z brings in both Jewish and non-Jewish leaders who specialize in these issues. Our Charlotte shlichah, Lia Abgarova, runs the majority of our discussions and gives us background information on the topic before we hear from a speaker. Our meetings also give me an opportunity to reconnect with my Jewish friends.

Club Z’s National Conference was one of the most inspiring events of my life. From the motivating speakers to the incredible sense of community, I truly felt at home among the Zionist leaders. I got to meet Colonel Kemp, who is a retired British officer who spent most of his life as a commander in the British Army. After the military, he turned his attention toward combating terrorism and now is an author and motivational speaker. At Club Z, we had the opportunity to hear his story and ask questions. After his Q and A session, my friends from Charlotte and I approached him to receive advice and discuss current Israeli politics with him.

We also met Olga Washington, who is a Christian Zionist born in apartheid South Africa who has her own insight about the Jewish homeland. She became an inspiring role model for me with her thoughtful presentation and unique perspective of Israel. Her experience as a Christian advocating for a Jewish homeland left me with a different concept of Zionism than I previously had. Zionism is not an exclusively Jewish love for Israel, but rather a belief that Israel is the Jewish homeland.

Apart from the speakers, we got to participate in breakout sessions led by different leaders. During this time we got to dive deeper into subjects such as BDS, legalities of Jewish protection, and if settlements are obstacles to peace. My favorite session was led by college students Phillip Yuchenko and John Rice-Cameron, son of former National Security Advisor, Susan Rice. Here, we learned how to safely voice our opinion and educate others about Zionism in a respectful way. I hope to use these tools in the future and become a Jewish leader as I continue into college.

Not only did I learn about Zionism and how to support Israel, but I made meaningful friendships that I hope will last for years to come. I am so lucky to surround myself with these inspiring students. Our dance parties, midnight ice cream socials, and Starbucks runs helped me become closer to everyone from Charlotte. I also made new friends from Charlotte and I approached him to receive advice and discuss current Israeli politics with him.

I would like to thank Club Z founder Masha Merkulova for putting together an incredible Conference with inspiring and memorable speakers that I will never forget. Next, I would like to thank Ellen Engelhardt and Lena Yuchenko and John Rice-Cameron for making this the best weekend ever.

For more information about Club Z, please visit the website www.clubz.org/locations or email at Charlotte@clubz.org. You can also call Chantal Rubin at 704-451-3230.

Charlotte shlichah, Lia Abgarova, and Education Director, Naya Lecht, who both deserve an award for engaging 24 teens each month and working tirelessly to ensure a quality program every time. Lastly, a shout out to all of my Charlotte Chapter friends for making this the best weekend ever.

#Quarantine2020 didn’t stop our students from gathering to hang out and learn. Like most educational programs, we turned to Zoom to hold class and stay connected as one community.

Our 8th and 9th graders logged on at 7 PM, socialized for about 15 minutes and then with a quick click of a button, they were separated into five different classes. During these final few weeks of Hebrew High, students had the option of choosing a class during the track entitled Yisraeli Sheli: My Israel. These are the class options that they had to select from:

- The Many Faces of Israel
  This class will take a hands-on approach to exploring the many subcultures that are woven into the fabric of Israel, both Jewish and non-Jewish. Through hands on activities such as henna tattoos, we will examine the lives and customs of the many people who call Israel home.

- Discovering Israel: Land, People, Innovation
  Travel the land of Israel from the heights of Haifa to the lively streets of Tel Aviv to vast deserts and the Dead Sea. Bring it back home by planting seeds for your own Jewish future. Then learn about diversity within Israel and the people who call it home through discussing the LGBTQIA+ community, the multitude of religions, their refugees, their military, and more. You will explore Israel through the lens of your own identity. Then become a part of Israeli culture by learning about the mind-blowing inventions that were created in this start-up nation, including humanitarian, medical, security, and food innovation that are changing the world through crafting your own invention shark-tank style.

- What You May Not Have Known About Israel: The Good, the Bad, and the Edible
  Some things you may not know about Israel: the top TV shows and songs; the best restaurants and favorite foods; military history; how the government is formed, and more.

- Israel: From Mandate to Country
  Learn about the origins of the modern state of Israel from the British Mandate to the present. This course will cover internal and regional politics, our connection to Israel, dispelling myths about Israel, and learning how to stand up to movements such as BDS (Boycott, Divest, and Sanction) using facts. In addition, we will cover the land of Israel in modern Jewish thought.

- A Taste of Israel
  Come explore Israel by cooking and eating our way through our beautiful country. We will learn how to make authentic Israeli dishes which could include hummus, shakshuka, falafel, or Israeli salad. You will have the opportunity to learn more about where some of these foods come from and why they are unique to Israeli culture. It is sure to be a delectable class.

In addition to our 8th and 9th graders, the Hebrew for Credit, Temple Beth El and Temple Israel Confirmation, and Post Confirmation students have not missed a beat as classes continue over Zoom. Hebrew for Credit is “zooming” through their curriculum while 10th grade students prepare for their Confirmation service. Finally, Post-Confirmation students held their last class online and Rabbi Judy spoke about “Confronting Corona Through a Jewish Lens - Our Own Questions and Those Being Asked Across the Globe.” Despite not being able to be together in person, our students loved seeing their teachers and each other. We can’t thank our teachers enough for reformatting their classes to meet online and dedicating their time and energy to our teens.

Charlotte BBYO Teen Elected to BBYO International Board at BBYO International Convention (IC 2020)

Thousands of teens gathered in Dallas to affirm their roles as societal change makers at IC 2020, the largest celebration of teen culture and leadership in the world. One hundred and thirteen Eastern Region BBYO teens (52 from Charlotte) joined more than 5,500 teens, educators, thought and business leaders, celebrities, political figures, and philanthropists from around the world, making it one of the largest Jewish leadership events in North America and the largest gathering of Jewish teen leaders worldwide. Taking place over Presidents’ Day weekend, February 13-17, BBYO International Convention 2020 offered countless opportunities for Jewish teens to connect with their peers, grow as leaders, and commit themselves to new causes, social challenges, and bold initiatives.

For the Charlotte community, Sunday’s elections of the 2020-2021 AZA and BBG International boards were a highlight. Daniel Pearlman, 17, of Myers Park high school and proud member of Hank Greenberg AZA was elected as Grand Aleph Shaliach (President of Jewish Enrichment). Daniel is the son of Audrey and Guy Pearlman. In this role, Daniel will be a part of a twelve-member international teen board that will help organize BBYO’s vision for the coming year and provide leadership and support to teen leaders in local communities throughout the BBYO system.

Daniel said, “I am so honored to be given the opportunity to serve on the 96th Grand Board of the Aleph Zadik Aleph this upcoming year. I am thrilled to work with such a lively movement of Shlichim (Vice Presidents of Jewish Enrichment) and join a team from around the globe. Engaging Jewish teens in meaningful experiences is something very important to me and I could not ask for a better platform to capitalize this experience. I am so grateful to my family, friends, and staff who have been guides and mentors to me and I cannot wait to work with so many inspirational people, alongside my board.”

“We are so incredibly proud of Daniel and all that he has achieved in his election as Grand Aleph Shaliach. Daniel has a great gift in being able to create Jewish experiences for his peers and aiding them in their exploration of their Jewish identity. We are excited that Daniel now has the opportunity to share that gift with the entire world and help others create Jewish moments in their regions,” said Ryan Woloshin, Eastern Region Director.

Among the many speakers to address the crowd at IC 2020 were: David Dobrik, YouTube Creative; MK Stav Shaffir, Member of Knesset, State of Israel; Craig Kessler, Chief Operating Officer, Topgolf; Sophia Bush, Actress, Activist, Director, and Producer; Chris Ulmer, Founder, Special Books by Special Kids; Bari Weiss, Editor, The New York Times; Cornell Brooks, Director, Social Justice Collaborative, Harvard and Former CEO, NAACP; and youth activists, Claire Sarvard and Former CEO, NAACP; Craig Kessler, Chief Operating Officer, Topgolf; Sophia Bush, Actress, Activist, Director, and Producer; Chris Ulmer, Founder, Special Books by Special Kids; and the largest chamber filled with all precious and pleasant riches.”

BBYO On Demand

BBYO has introduced a brand-new, first-of-its-kind virtual experience for Jewish youth, similar to an interactive “Jewish Netflix” for teens to access unique online experiences and programs. As “social distancing” becomes the norm for young people around the world, BBYO is offering its global audience a platform to connect, learn, have fun, and be inspired in a new digital space. The recently launched BBYO On Demand will serve as a top-rated global engagement platform featuring activities, speakers, and hangouts that are limited only by the imagination of teens themselves.

“When it seemed like society was shutting down all around me, BBYO was the first one to step up and help teens feel less isolated in their homes,” said BBYO member Yael Serfer from North Texas Oklahoma Region. “More than anything, teens need social connections to thrive — and BBYO On Demand provides that for us.” Joseph Rasamat from BBYO New England Region added, “Before my school was even able to set up online classes, BBYO already had programs up and running to keep me engaged. As always, BBYO is at the forefront of bringing people together and making teens feel like they’re a part of something bigger.”

Teens are invited to build, submit, and host their own episodes, mini-series, classes, tournaments, hangouts, or special events on BBYO On Demand. The platform will also enable local BBYO groups to keep meeting regularly, program together, and continue to share the power and meaning of BBYO while “socially distanced” from one another. Over the coming days and weeks, BBYO On Demand will continue to evolve and expand with exciting new program offerings on a schedule that accommodates global time differences.

“We’re navigating a very different reality than we anticipated just a few weeks ago,” said Jill Hulnick, Chief Impact Officer of BBYO. “As we ride out the local and global developments impacting school schedules, extracurricular activities, and regular routines, we’re committed to our mission of helping Jewish teens and young adults around the world stay connected to one another by sharing ideas, learning together, making the world a better place and having a fun time while doing it.”

For more information about BBYO, BBYO on Demand or summer experiences, please contact Lauren Revenson at irverson@bbyo.org. You can check out BBYO on Demand at bbyo.org/ondemand.

“Through wisdom is a house built, and by understanding it is established; and by knowledge are the chambers filled with all precious and pleasant riches.”

Proverbs 24:3-4
Three thousand Jewish teens from 562 CTeen Chapters from around the world joined together for a weekend of Jewish Pride February 27-March 1. The unity, joy and energy that was overflowing throughout the whole weekend was tangible.

From France to Maryland and from England to Charlotte, teens gathered for this four day annual retreat to strengthen their Jewish pride and nurture their souls. A common thread that existed throughout all activities and workshops is that the teenage years are powerful and if channeled in the right way, teens have the ability create things and lead our society down an amazing path. In addition, each teen has a unique mission to fulfill that only he/she is able to accomplish.

The highlight of the weekend was when CTeen took over Duffel Square in Times Square. There was a Havdallah ceremony and concert where the teens were able to express their joy and pride. The teens experienced an environment that was no judgement zone along with an opportunity to just be real and themselves. The inspiration and joy was felt throughout the whole weekend.

We were so lucky to take two teens from Charlotte this year as we experienced this incredible weekend. From the words of Daria Lapidot-Boaz, “Going on the CTeen Shabbaton blew my mind. The three day eye-opening trip was full of excitement, and happiness. In those short couple of days, I was able to make connections with teens from around the world. Even though we weren’t from the same place, didn’t speak the same language, or have anything in common, what brought us together was our Jewish pride. Instantly we connected and I formed such close bonds with them. I never expected to feel so overwhelmed seeing 3,000 Jewish teens from all over the world gather in Times Square to bring in the start of the week together during Havdallah. I’m beyond thankful I was able to experience the CTeen Shabbaton. I’m excited to come back to my Jewish community and apply all the things I learned to better my community and the communities around us.”

Hannah Ross shared her excitement with the following, “The CTeen Shabbaton was the best experience ever. It was so amazing to see all these Jewish teens come together and celebrate their Jewish pride. I’m so thankful that I was able to take part in such an awesome program with amazing speakers, people, and of course a really fun time in Times Square. Everyone should take the opportunity to go to New York for this Shabbaton because it was the best time ever.”

At the Levine JCC we take tremendous pride in the emergency support we are providing for the most vulnerable in our community.

Starting Wednesday, March 18th, Oasis Senior Enrichment Program participants received a delivery of emergency food support prepared by Izzy’s Catering. The first delivery included items like baked ziti, lentil soup, fruit, snacks, and games. This enabled seniors to stay out of harm’s way in the public, and ensured they have what they needed to survive. On Wednesday, April 1st, a second delivery of two weeks’ worth of food was made in partnership with Frank Scibelli Food Group (Mama Ricotta’s, YAFO Kitchen, Midwood Smokehouse, etc.)

This is but one example of many over these last few weeks that exemplify who we are and have always been as an agency. We are an agency with a heart, a righteous agency, one who understands and values the individual, regardless of their skin color, what religion they practice, what occupation they hold in our community, or their age. For us, it has been and will always be about the content of our character and the values upon which we live that drive us forward.

The Oasis seniors who live alone were overwhelmed by our food delivery and its selections. They were excited to also see a yoga routine (compliments of Cindy Capwell), word puzzles, and hand sanitizer included in their bags. The recipients were in awe of the Levine JCC’s quick response during this time of uncertainty, and they were appreciative of and grateful for our efforts.

“I just want to tell you how overwhelmed I am by the packages that I received from the JCC Oasis. They are wonderful and I can’t tell you how much I appreciate that.”

Nancy Kornhauser, Oasis Member

“I for one am very appreciative of all that the Oasis is trying to do for us during this very unusual time. Did not realize how much I miss going there, especially the exercise classes which has really helped me. Hope we will be back soon.”

Lucia Mitchell, Oasis Member

“Many thanks to Gloria and Bob for their “checking on you” calls. Grateful for the concern. I’m also especially happy to get the chair yoga video and senior exercise video. Love that I can do these at home. I think you were reading my mind. You are all so kind to keep tabs on us. Be well, stay safe, and look forward to seeing you hopefully soon!”

Joan Spector, Oasis Member

“I was moved to tears by the thoughtfulness of the JCC Oasis Program. This program means a lot to me as I count on the members of Oasis, and the excellent staff, all inclusive, to assist me in keeping my nearly 80-year-old self in good health, both physically and mentally. Which is exactly what the Oasis program does for me. Again, thank you and Sharrir and your marvelous staff for the food, for your care and concern and I look forward to a speedy return to the Oasis program. I wish for you what you wish for me: a safe and healthy time away and a return to normalcy soon.”

Iris Schnipper, Oasis Member

“Thank you to everybody that contributed. Please give them my thanks. You know that I am not very religious, but that thoughtful Shabbat video really touched my heart. Just hearing your voices and seeing your faces means a lot to me. Thank you.”

Cathy Bogan, Oasis Member

“Hey guys, just a note to tell you that the penne with vodka was sensational! Thanks a million for caring. Stay well and healthy!”

Joan Spector, Oasis Member
The technological advances in virtual reality allowed Temple Israel to seamlessly transition to a regular program of virtual prayer and worship during the COVID-19 pandemic. Temple Israel offers religious services, via Livestream and Zoom, 7-days a week! All one need's to do is visit our website (templeisraelnc.org), follow the simple instructions, and voila! you are immersed in world of traditional Jewish worship.

There is no substitute for the actual human touch, but as Jews have done for thousands of years in difficult situations, we make do! We do so with an eye to the future knowing Ha-kol Ya’avor-this, too, shall pass!

Rabbi Howard Siegel

Mission Uninterrupted. Temple Israel pivoted to a remote work environment the week of March 16th, 2020, quite seamlessly given an intentional, proactive roadmap approach to a holistic technology platform, hardware, software and bandwidth throughput. This optimizes Temple Israel's ability to be nimble and flexible, furthering our vision and mission and stewarding our congregational family.

Our team has reframed our perspective and continues to experiment with various virtual platforms, livestreaming and Zoom, as we remain steadfast offering a robust menu of services, Minyanim and educational opportunities, from our Temple Israel Religious School students to our adult education offerings.

We are open and welcome you to tune in with the continuance of synagogue life during these challenging times!

In 2 Samuel 10:12, Joab says, "...חֲזַ֤ק חֲזַ֤ק וְנִתְחַזַּ֣ק..."
"Hazak, hazak, venithazzek", which might be translated as, "Be strong, be strong, and we will take strength from you."

Go from strength to strength! Stay healthy, be safe and be strong!

UMatter Week Launched at Charlotte Latin

What is UMatter?

UMatter is an initiative developed by Friendship Circle, an organization that provides support to those who experience social isolation, with a focus on individuals with special needs. UMatter helps teenagers take a step back from daily stresses and refocus on life's positivity. Our goal is to build a support network and eliminate the stigma surrounding mental health in our community. We believe that everyone is created with a Godly purpose and has something to contribute to the world. It’s up to each of us to know, and show, that You Matter. Where Families Come Together

What is UMatter Week?

UMatter Week is a week-long series of events held at a school that focuses on positivity and promotes self-worth. After a local high school experienced two suicides in one school year, we knew it was time to step in and change the conversation. We wanted to share what we’ve learned from our friends at Friendship Circle: we’re each unique, have something wonderful to contribute to the world, and we can bring out the best in someone else just by being our true selves. With the opportunity for this week to have impacted even one life, we consider it a tremendous success. As it says in the Jerusalem Talmud: “…Whoever saves one life, it’s as if he has saved an entire world.”

Meet Olivia Halperin, a UMatter ambassador at Charlotte Latin who launched a UMatter week for her entire Upper School. Each day incorporated another activity including an interactive “I Thing I Wish You Knew” Wall, yoga de-stress meets, Teacher “TED-Talks” about a personal challenge they faced and overcame, and a UMatter laptop sticker giveaway.

UMatter is a project of Friendship Circle and an initiative powered by the Jewish Federation’s Impact and Innovation Fund.

Friends Without Borders
Friendship Circle Takes Its Friendships Online

Friendship isn’t something that stops with social distancing. In fact at Friendship Circle we said: Physical distancing but not social distancing.

On March 16, the day CMS closed, Friendship Circle went into high gear. We moved all Friendship Circle programs online, including Friends@Home visits, and have held activities twice a day. A huge thanks to our Family and Program Coordinator, Ms. Sue Schreiber, and all our program instructors.

While we don’t know how long this will continue, it’s wonderful to have a chance to see our friends each day and make sure they’re not lonely or bored and are staying positive.

Friendship Circle is a beneficiary agency of the Jewish Federation of Greater Charlotte. To learn more visit www.FriendshipCircleNC.org.

SYNAGOGUES & CONGREGATIONS

Temple Kol Tikvah Welcomes New Rabbi

Temple Kol Tikvah joyfully welcomed its new religious leader, installing Rabbi David Lipper in an evening of community and connection.

The congregation and community leaders gathered in the Davidson synagogue on February 21 to mark the transition and to welcome Rabbi Lipper and his wife, Dora.

The service included messages from Davidson Mayor Rusty Knox, Davidson College President Dr. Carol Quillen, Davidson College Chaplain Rob Spach, and Temple Kol Tikvah President Daniel Tobias.

The Kol Tikvah community celebrated with a unique Havdallah service the next night – a dueling pianos event in Cornelius.

Over 300 Passover Seder2Go Kits Delivered Across Greater Charlotte Area

The last time Rabbi Yossi and Mariashi Groner didn’t lead a Passover Seder for Chabad of Charlotte was in 1979.

For the first time in almost 10 years, Friendship Circle was unable to offer a Passover Seder experience for families of children with special needs.

After five years of hosting a community Seder at Chabad of Ballantyne, this year could be no different.

For Chabad in Uptown Charlotte, the Passover Seder has been a staple in its programming for young Jewish professionals new to Charlotte and new to experiencing Passover away from their families.

A similar story rings true for the Chabad Center in Lake Norman.

Resolving to minimize the stress of preparing for Passover, this year the first time for many, Chabad of Charlotte, Ballantyne, Uptown, Lake Norman, and Friendship Circle banded together to deliver hundreds of Passover “Seder-2-Go” kits with the essentials and helpful materials.

Kits included Seder guides, Seder plates and maror, charoset, and shankbones, and several conversation starters to make this year’s D-I-Y Seder a little more meaningful.

Thanks to the following individuals for helping make the Seder2Go kits possible: Ed and Leslie Rusgo – Friendship Circle of Charlotte; Benjamin Schwartz, Leroy and Cheryl Rosenberg, Joseph and Ruth Brown – Ballantyne Jewish Center.

New Jewish Learning Institute Course This Coming May

Online JLI of Charlotte Will Explore Biblical Secrets

Beginning on May 5, JLI of Charlotte will be offering a new six-session course from the Rohr Jewish Learning Institute (JLI), titled Secrets of the Bible: Iconic Stories and Millennial Depictions, and Their Lessons for Life.

“People tend to read biblical stories as they do primitive mythology,” Rabbi Yossi Groner said. “Our course invites participants to look deeper and discover the unique life lessons and relevant life stories that these stories were designed to convey.”

The course presents a whole new way of reading the stories, including the colored coat, the golden calf, and Korach’s rebellion. For each of these stories, it seeks to answer the questions: What is the deeper meaning behind the story? How does it shape the Jewish worldview? And what wisdom does it hold for us today?

Throughout its six sessions, Secrets of the Bible explores major life themes, including humankind’s relationship with God, understanding our role in the world, and the nature of our existence. The course then turns to understanding these stories in light of modern times, using an innovative and interactive approach.

“Secrets of the Bible presents wonderful ancient biblical stories in fresh and modern ways that deal with universal human dilemmas,” explained Dr. Erica Brown, director of the Maybergen Center for Jewish Education and Leadership at George Washington University. “The wisdom it shares should not remain a secret.”

“Secrets of the Bible brings to an intelligent modern audience the texts and lessons so formative to so many cultures worldwide that they cannot be ignored even if one is looking on from without,” commented Dr. Joel Rosenberg, a professor of biblical literature at Tufts University. “By embracing post-biblical Jewish tradition, the course recognizes an interpretative process that begins with the Bible itself (interpreting its own past) and goes on to awaken the interpretive impulse in later readers exploring the experience of their own era.”

The evening course will run for six consecutive Tuesdays at 7:30 PM, and the morning class, which begins on Wednesday, May 6, at 11 AM, will run for six consecutive Wednesdays.

Like all JLI programs, this course is designed to appeal to people at all levels of knowledge, including those without any prior experience or background in Jewish learning. All JLI courses are open to the public, and attendees need not be affiliated with a particular synagogue, temple, or other house of worship.

Due to the current situation, this course will be offered via video conferencing. When students register, they will receive a text book delivered to their home, as well as, information on where and how to log on to this course. The online class will allow for live interaction with students as well as Q&A.

Fee for the course is $99 per person and $180 per couple.

Interested students may write to brenda@chabadnc.org or visit www.myJLI.com for registration and for other course-related information.

Chabad of Charlotte Goes Virtual to Bring Live Judaism to the Community

Chabad of Charlotte has been using advanced technology to bring live classes and programming within the Chabad of Charlotte community during the challenging days of “Stay at Home.”

Daily live talks and learning sessions include: Points of Light, Talmud study, and even pre-Shabbat classes.

The highly rated C-Kids program went online as well as interactive mitzvah practices.

“We are committed to make our home into a sanctuary for God and not just depend on the synagogue as a place to engage with our Judaism. We pray to God to end this pandemic and help our medical professionals fight it, and that scientists will discover a vaccine to protect our population. At the same time, we utilize the time spent at home, whether alone or with family, to sanctify it with Godly divine commandments and the observance of mitzvot. To see recordings of these classes or to watch live, please visit our website, www.chabadnc.org and our Facebook page which appears on our webpage.

of interest.

“The IDF has always been the protector of the State of Israel, and today more than ever, as we battle the Coronavirus around the world. The IDF can never take a break – not for an hour, not for a second,” said IDF National Director and CEO Maj. Gen. (Res.) Meir Klifi-Amir. “The IDF’s supreme duty is to keep Israel’s borders secure and its civilians safe. To that end, the IDF needs to remain in full readiness, and be prepared for any challenges that may arise. The IDF must not take any risk that its soldiers or entire military units will be incapacitated. For this reason, the IDF soldiers, families of fallen soldiers and service members will be in full readiness, and be prepared for any challenge. The IDF can – and must – take any risk that its soldiers can enrich your life. Count up the ways that Jewish learning can open up your mind and spirit. Count up all the ways that you can connect – to those that you love. Count up the ways that you can reach out to those that you love. Count up the ways that you can extend your hand with kindness. Through doing so, we will certainly discover meaning from the ways in which we make meaning.

A twenty-second prayer for washing our hands

We wash our hands for protection, in preparation, in prayer, for ourselves and our health, for our families and those we love, for the wellness of those providing healthcare services and other essential needs, for our world and its wellbeing.

God, source of life, grant a complete healing (נאה ושלום) to all.

Temple Solel Loves Our Neighbors

Recently we remembered historical examples where we escaped from death during Purim and slavery during Passover. The caveat we are encountering now is the biggest present plague of our current lifetime. However, COVID-19 is more than illness and natural death – and no small thing when families, friends, lives, jobs, businesses, and even relationships are stressed.

Temple Solel has faced losing two of our members with families unable to have a proper funeral service. The losses are so great, but even our traditions are being challenged by this plague. How do you make and bring food to people? Sit Shiva?

In life, we choose to support, love, adjust, and provide others means to keep our congregation connected. We had our first ever Zoom Shabbat service online. Even though it was awkward, there was a familiarity that brought us great comfort. We also divided up our list of members between our small board to make sure we reach out and see how people are doing. We have wonderful members who have reached out offering to buy groceries. There were ways we learned that we still provide meals to people experiencing a difficult loss or illness in need of help.

One of the guiding commandments of Judaism is “Love your neighbor as yourself,” but how often do we read it in context. In Leviticus 19:17, it reads, “Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thy heart; thou shalt surely rebuke thy neighbor, and not bear sin because of him. 18 Thou shalt not take vengeance, nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people, but thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself: I am the Lord. 19 Ye shall keep My statutes.” (JPS Tanakh 1917)

Many of us don’t even know our neighbor’s names. People have mentioned the isolation led them to reach out to people either by phone or standing a six foot distance apart (please). Thankfully, this time of year holds beautiful blooms, and Carolina blue skies. Being outside is a gift during this time of isolation. It was a safe option many of our members chose to see each other whether on a patio, driving by in a golf cart, or meeting to take a walk.

We are responsible for both the evil and the good in this world in every choice we make. Let’s choose hope so we have the ability to believe for something we cannot see right now, but might be able to experience in the future. Part of changing the future is making sure we help others. It is a wonderful benefit of such a horrible pandemic.

Before the outbreak, our President, Shelley Pawlyk, who is also a Senior Ordained Chaplain with the International Fellowship of Chaplains, was asked to be on a panel at Winthrop University entitled, “Does God Care About My Mental Health?” There were over a hundred students in attendance. Staff Counselor and Outreach Coordinator, Jess Hadgens, MA, LPCA, NCC, was the organizer. She included leadership representation from the Christian community, Bahia, and Jewish faiths to answer questions submitted by students and based on trends they have seen in the counseling office. Example questions addressed by the panel were:

1) Does struggling with my mental health mean that God is punishing me or testing me?” (no) 2) “Does continuing to struggle with my mental health mean I haven’t prayed or listened to God enough?” (no) 3) “Does seeking help for my mental health struggles through counseling or medication mean I don’t trust God?” (no)

The common thread between the faiths represented is that God loves and does care about our mental health. The panel mentioned multiple times to consider how quickly we might consider taking medicine for a headache or high blood pressure, or accept treatment for diabetes, but are so reluctant to seek professional care for mental health. It was a very heartfelt event which elicited a positive response. Now more than ever during these challenging times, if you need help or feel isolated, please reach out and ask for help. There are other people who are feeling the same way as you are. Share in these burdens until we come to our new normal. Temple Solel holds regular Shabbat services at 7 PM on the second and fourth Fridays of each month via Zoom during the pandemic and hopes to resume services when appropriate at Belair UMC Family Life Center, 8095 Shelley Mullis Rd., Fort Mill, SC 29707. Jewish NFL Star Mitch Schwartz Embraces His Inner Chef During Coronavirus Quarantine

By Emily Burack

Jewish NFL Star Mitch Schwartz Embraces His Inner Chef During Coronavirus Quarantine

In 2016, along with his brother Geoff, also a former NFL linemen, he wrote the cookbook Eat My Schwartz: Our Story of NFL, Football, Food, Family, and Faith. They tell stories about their upbringing, being the first Jewish brothers in the NFL since 1923 and their favorite Jewish traditions.

Schwartz shares that the Seder is one of his favorites, and how he wishes it could ‘occur during the [football] season’ so he could host a Passover meal for his teammates.

But the bulk of “Eat My Schwartz” is food content with recipes by the brothers. Cooking has always been a passion for Schwartz, starting when he was a teen. He explained in 2018 that he had been watching cooking shows, and his interest grew. From watching cartoons and sports – I still watch sports – into watching a lot of Food Network and Cooking Channel and finding a way to feed myself.

Outside of his social media, Schwartz has a food blog – called Mitch in the Kitchen, obviously where he posts his recipes and instructions. He responds to fans who comment and is genuinely enthusiastic about his subject. Here’s his brisket pot roast from last week.

He started Mitch in the Kitchen as a way to express his passion for cooking, but also to connect with fans. “They obviously have an interest in you, how you play, but you’re also interested in what you’re doing in your personal life, and they want to get to know you better,” Schwartz told The Athletic. “The survivors have taught us, someone is cooking a meal, whether it’s once a week or every night. I’ve online has a vested interest in good food, so it’s just a fun way to interact with people and reach out. The response has been great.”

In typical offseasons, Schwartz hosts his teammates for a meal that’s “free from – there are never any leftovers.”

“Get a little toasty, but that’s the fun of cooking. Whether it’s my wife and making her a good meal or cooking for friends and family, you’re doing something different and it makes you feel happy. It’s definitely a good feeling,” Schwartz said.

On Twitter, he also answers questions from fans about food and offers words of encouragement for others that are trying his recipes:

“His advice for those trying to cook for the first time during quarantine? “Just have fun with it,” Schwartz told his local news station. “You’re going to mess up, you’re going to overcook something, you’re going to undercook something. It’s all trial and error. It’s all fun.”

Amen to that.

In Response to Corona – Jewish Studies at Queens Does Not Miss a Beat

Judaism has always been adaptive. In recent times, we moved from having a travelling Tabernacle in the desert to building the First Temple in Jerusalem. When our holiest Jerusalem sanctuary was destroyed and we were exiled from our holy land, we created Judaism anew with synagogues, with houses of study, and with Torah at the center. As a Jewish people, we have learned how to carry community with us and creatively reinvent ourselves wherever we have lived.

As we confront COVID-19 required that same level of Jewish creativity locally and globally. We are proud of the way that our Charlotte Jewish institutions mobilized to create virtual community and we were thankful to be part of that landscape. More than 100 Jewish institutions joined our first night Queens Jewish Studies Virtual Social Justice Seder. Segments of the Seder were led by Queens alumni (Noah Goldberg calling in from Israel), current Queens students and their families, and alumni from other institutions. Queens parent Patty Torcellini led us on guitar. Queens Chaplain Reverend Joy Haynes spoke of poverty in Charlotte and Reverend Willeke Keim, our Justice Organizer, reflected on liberation and racial justice. Talli Dippold wrote an original piece reflecting on lessons surrounding liberation that our Holocaust and Romani friends have taught us.

Our Jewish Studies courses and our workshops with CMS teachers and public students continue the learning. During this time of social distancing and even as we slowly return to a new way of teaching, Queens University Jewish Studies and the Greenspon Center for Peace and Social Justice will be here to meet you and help enhance human rights educational needs. We invite you to participate in our online programming:

- Peaceful Pause Programs -

On each Sunday at 5 PM, we offer a weekly peaceful pause when you can enjoy short reflections on topics of hope and resilience. Sessions are recorded and made available afterwards on our website.

- Midrash Mondays Wine and Wisdom Program - Join Rabbi Judy each Monday from 5-6 PM for a weekly happy hour that will be lifted by an encounter with our sacred texts.

- Hope in the Midst of the Holocaust Series – Stay tuned for 30 minute online sessions that will include art, music, poetry, and literature.

We aim to share the beauty of Jewish studies and Holocaust and human rights education, and the passion of Social Justice Advocacy with the community. To get connected with our course offerings and volunteer opportunities, please visit our website www.stargreensponcenter.org or contact Talli Dippold at dippoldt@queens.edu.

No, Your Quarantine Is Not Comparable to Anne Frank’s

By Sophie Levitt

This story originally appeared on Alma.

There are quite a few things I’ve been learning all over my social media feeds ever since the spread of COVID-19 forced everyone to social distance. There are the jokes about no longer wearing a bra, comments about being confused over what day it is, and comparisons to Anne Frank hiding in an attic.

One of these things is not like the others.

The U.S. government recommending individuals to practice social distancing in order to prevent the spread of a deadly virus is not at all similar to being forced into hiding to avoid the impending threat of a state-sponsored genocide. In fact, to make the comparison is egregiously offensive. So why do I keep seeing people doing just that?

On Twitter, if you search “Anne Frank” you will find an abundance of users tweeting about how they now know exactly how Anne Frank felt after a week in quarantine. Some of these tweets go so far as to say that Anne Frank had it much better than us right now. And I feel like I am losing my mind.

There are so many things wrong with this; let me count the ways.

First, timing. Anne Frank’s father owned a concentration camp. It pains me to emphasize the incredibly privileged position Jews who could sneak in items. They also needed to keep the secret annex dark because light would attract attention, and it was silent because noise would do the same.

Americans in quarantine can still go grocery shopping and do other essential tasks. We can go for walks in non-crowded spaces. We can exercise, stay in contact with our friends and family. We have social media, FaceTime, and Zoom calls to help.

Meanwhile, families like Anne Frank’s were forced to practically disappear from the world to avoid being caught and taken to a concentration camp. It pains me to have to say this, but these conditions are not remotely similar to each other.

Of course, it is also important to emphasize the incredibly ls that Jewish lives are affected by this event. The only similarity I can draw is that both situations are spreading a deadly illness. One is a literal sickness and the other is a figurative one: Nazism. However, that’s not the comparison I ever wanted to make.

Some of these tweets even imply that Anne Frank was lying. One can claim it’s just a “joke,” but with Holocaust denial rising steadily, tweets like these just encourage it.

Tweets like these are damaging to the Jewish and Romani communities, and are mocking the Holocaust and the current pandemic.

The murder of over six million Jews and 500,000 Romani people is continually minimized with every tweet. With every retweet and like, their genocide continues to be diminished.

It is already hard enough to deal with the tragedy and consequencs of this pandemic. We need to stop worsening it by degrading the memory of Anne Frank to simply the girl in quarantine and stop minimizing the memory of the Holocaust by comparing it to what is going on now.
