

What is a Chemical Stress Echocardiogram?

A Chemical Stress Echocardiogram is a special type of echocardiogram, or ultrasound of the heart, which examines the heart at rest and then after stress triggered by a medication (Dobutamine or Adenosine) that causes the heart to beat as if exercising. This test is for patients who are unable to exercise on a treadmill.

(480) 641-5400
cvam.com