AIMS Programs & History

The American Institute for Maghrib Studies (AIMS) was founded in 1984 to promote the systematic study of North Africa among interested scholars, specialists, students, and other professionals concerned with the region. AIMS publishes the Journal of North African Studies (Taylor & Francis Group), sponsors annual academic conferences in North Africa, provides funding support for scholars to undertake research in the region, maintains overseas research centers in Tunis & Sidi Bou Said (CEMAT), Oran & Algiers (CEMA) and Tangier (TALIM), organizes a yearly dissertation-writing workshop for students in the United States, and provides other professional resources and opportunities to its members. Since 2011, AIMS’s mission has expanded to strengthen scholarship in North Africa and work with Maghribi civil society.

AIMS is a member of the Council of American Overseas Research Centers (CAORC), which is housed at the Smithsonian Institution in Washington DC. Founded in 1981, CAORC is a private not-for-profit federation of 27 independent overseas research centers that promote advanced research, particularly in the humanities and social sciences, with a focus on the conservation and recording of cultural heritage and the understanding and interpretation of modern societies. AIMS is the only CAORC affiliate that administers three overseas centers, covering an entire region.
2017 AIMS Conference
Making Space in the Maghrib
Djerba, Tunisia

July 8-9, 2017

The 30th Annual AIMS Conference was successfully organized in Djerba, Tunisia. Conference organizers Elizabeth Bishop, Jacob Mundy and Brock Cutler designed an interdisciplinary workshop that invited participants to engage with notions of space in research projects spanning from municipal politics, natural resources and labor to gender. Because of the intellectual direction of the workshop, the conference was moved to the island of Djerba in southern Tunisia, representing the first time an AIMS Conference in Tunisia has taken place outside the capital. The time in Djerba allowed for a productive, stimulating, and constructive discussion among participants and observers. In addition to the traditional presentation and discussion format, a documentary screening was included, which focused on water and environment in Southern Morocco by Chouette Films and was followed by a discussion with the filmmaker. Our colleagues from the Tunis Office of Harvard University’s Center for Middle East Studies in Tunisia, CEMAT-affiliated scholars working in Djerba, the ORC Directors from TALIM and CEMA, as well as the acting CAORC Executive Director Rick Spees joined us during the many sessions and discussions. The conference was made possible by colleagues at AIMS in North Africa and the US, our Board of Directors, and CAORC.
Long- & Short-Term Grants for U.S. Citizens

Long- and short-term grants for primary research conducted in the Maghrib are available to American graduate students enrolled in M.A. or Ph.D. programs, independent scholars, and faculty. Short-Term Research Grants support projects from one to three months for a maximum of $6,000. Long-Term Research Grants fund projects beyond three months and award a maximum of $15,000.

Annual Dissertation-Writing Workshop

17th AIMS Dissertation Workshop
September 29-30, 2017

This year, Jessica Lambert (Boston University Department of Anthropology, AIMS Graduate Student Association President) organized the 17th AIMS Dissertation Workshop at Boston University on September 29th and 30th. The workshop was generously supported by AIMS and hosted by the Institute for the Study of Muslim Societies and Civilizations at Boston University. Several other departments and centers provided additional financial support for the workshop, including the Boston University Departments of Anthropology and Romance Studies as well as the African Studies Center. Along with Jessica, AIMS board members Allen Fromherz (Georgia State University, AIMS President), Camilo Gomez-Rivas (University of California Santa-Cruz, chair of the AIMS Graduate Student Association Committee), and Diana Wylie (Boston University, AIMS Secretary), selected 8 highly-qualified participants from a pool of almost 30 applicants. The participants came from Anthropology, Religion, Political Science, and History, with topics ranging from decolonization, infrastructure, and sovereignty in Algeria to language, race politics, and identity in present-day Morocco.

This year’s keynote address was delivered by Angel Foster (University of Ottawa). On Friday afternoon, she spoke to the workshop participants and Boston University graduate students about emergency contraception in Tunisia. Professor Foster’s talk was followed by almost an hour of lively discussion and questions that united the workshop participants’ diverse fields of study. For Saturday’s presentations, each participant was paired with a faculty discussant who generously volunteered their time and provided thoughtful responses to the participant’s written work and presentation. The discussants included Diana Wylie (Boston University), Charles Lindholm (emeritus, Boston University), Odile Cazenave (Boston University), Cynthia Becker (Boston University), Wilfrid Rollman (Boston University), Hugh Roberts (Tufts), David Crawford (Fairfield University), and Ali Akhtar (Bates College).

The faculty discussants offered additional support and feedback during the open discussion portion of each panel, so participants received comments from experts with different regional experience and from a range of disciplines. The participants additionally read each other’s papers prior to the workshop and their questions and comments throughout the weekend and during each panel discussion greatly enriched the overall quality of the workshop.

This workshop would not have been possible without the generous backing of AIMS. Board members Allen Fromherz, Diana Wylie, Camilo Gomez-Rivas, and Jonathan Wyrtzen gave helpful guidance at every stage of planning. Terry Ryan provided invaluable support in the organization of the workshop itself. Former AIMS Graduate Student Association Presidents Jessica Newman and David Stenner provided advice and feedback from previous workshops. Throughout the weekend, the faculty discussants enthusiastically took part in panel discussions and group dinners, and their formal comments and informal conversations deepened the connections between the graduate student participants and their future colleagues. Finally, the graduate student participants’ thoughtful comments on each other’s work, engagement with faculty discussants, and the camaraderie that developed throughout the weekend is a hallmark of this workshop and a key component of AIMS’ role in establishing an interdisciplinary cohort of scholars working on North Africa.

Department of Information and Library Science
The Journal of North African Studies (JNAS) is a forum for scholars of and from the region. Its contents cover both country-based and regional themes, which range from historical topics to sociological, anthropological, economic, literary, diplomatic, and political studies as well as current affairs. JNAS views North Africa as an important and coherent region of the Mediterranean basin that is linked to West Asia, sub-Saharan Africa, and Europe.

Headed by Co-Editors-in-Chief George Joffé (School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London), Phillip Naylor (Marquette University), and Gregory White (Smith College), JNAS is an exceptional peer-reviewed publication for faculty of all ranks, independent scholars, and graduate and undergraduate students. Besides its complement of articles and book reviews (available online), during the past two years JNAS featured ‘special issues’: ‘The Aesthetics and Politics of Contemporary Cultural Production in Morocco’ (January 2016); ‘Maghrebi Artistic and Literary Expressions in the 21st Century’ (March 2016); and ‘special sections’: ‘Medias in Morocco’ (June 2017); and ‘Loss, Displacement and Exile in Algerian Cinema’ (December 2017). Five issues were published annually. Beginning in 2019 (volume 24), six issues will appear, illustrating JNAS’s growing popular appeal.

JNAS solicits article submissions and book reviews. Its staff especially invites AIMS members’ participation. Regarding special section/issue proposals, guest editors are responsible for preparation (including peer review) and publication of their collection in consultation with the editors-in-chief.

Published by Routledge of the Taylor & Francis Group, JNAS uses the ScholarOne digital platform for submissions. Refer to JNAS’s homepage:
https://www.tandfonline.com/loi/fnas20.

In order to expedite publication, article submissions must follow ‘Instructions for authors’ on the JNAS homepage: https://www.tandfonline.com/action/authorSubmission?show=instructions&journalCode=fnas20 The editorial staff thanks all AIMS members who have contributed to JNAS. We look forward to your continued support of your journal.
AIMS works to bring together Maghribi and American scholars of North Africa through several programs, thus encouraging interaction and exchange among a wide range of scholars.

The Sahara Lectures (CEMA)

Visiting Scholars Lecture Series (CEMA)

Since its opening, CEMA has fostered intellectual collaboration via its regular Visiting Scholars lecture series, allowing American and international scholars in the field an opportunity to present their ongoing research, and to gain valuable feedback from their Algerian peers. Noteworthy lectures in 2016 and 2017 included: “The Vitality of Comics in Algeria,” “Arabic Influences in Mexican Literature,” “Volubulis: Between Romans, Awraba, and Idris I,” “The UDMA Party: A Contribution of the History of Algerian Nationalism,” and “Operation Torch: North Africa and the Allied Path to Victory.”

Political Transition Lecture Series (CEMAT)

Since 2011, CEMAT has invited international experts on the study of democracy and democratic transitions and Middle Eastern politics to travel to Tunisia and lecture, in conjunction with Tunisian scholars, at universities, scholarly institutes civil society organizations as well as think tanks about the various stages of Tunisia’s democratic transition. Topics included: the significance of founding elections after breakdown of authoritarian rule, the role of political Islam in democracy, Tunisia and regional relations with its North African neighbors, Democratic Consolidation, Constitution Drafting in the Arab World, and Pacted Transitions and Democratic Consolidation. Each invited lecturer spoke at CEMAT with a Tunisian professor, at a university or institute in Tunis, and at a university outside of Tunis (Jendouba, Sfax, Kairouan), gave media interviews while some met with the U.S. Ambassador. In 2016, and by invitation of AIMS President Professor John P. Entelis, CEMAT hosted democracy expert Professor Adam Przeworski from New York University at CEMAT, who delivered a talk on Elections as a Mechanism of Conflict Resolution.

Thursday Tunis Talks (CEMAT)

CEMAT’s Thursday Tunis Talks (TTTs), an Anglophone lecture-series that has been organized on a regular basis since 2012. TTIs provide a variety of multi-disciplinary lectures by AIMS grantees, scholars in the field, CEMAT Scientific Council members and CEMAT scholars catering to the growing Anglophone community in Tunis. Talks include research presentations, book signings, largescale lectures and lively discussions on current topics concerning Tunisia and the Maghrib.
Lecture Series at TALIM

TALIM invites US scholars doing research in Morocco to Tangier to design presentations on themes of their own choosing. For scholars who cannot travel to Tangier, they are invited to contribute short articles on their research to the TALIM Director's Blog. TALIM partners with Tangier-based or visiting institutions to host talks or co-sponsor seminars. Examples of 2014 partners include Tangier University and its King Fahd Translation School, the Association Mimouna, the Seville-based Council of International Education Exchanges (CIEE), the Moroccan America Studies Association, the Transatlantic Council of the German Marshall Fund, and the organizers of the annual Tangier Book Fair and the “Performing Tangier” Conference. In parallel, TALIM offers tailored lectures to our neighbors in the Medina, the women who are current students or graduates of our literacy program. TALIM organizes talks on themes of interest to their daily lives, such as women’s health, the environment, and women’s legal rights under Morocco’s new Moudawana family code.

Languages and Societies in the Maghreb (CEMA)

Launched in 2013, CEMA’s Languages and Societies in the Maghreb lecture series is organized by CEMA Associate Director Dr. Karim Ouaras, a sociolinguist himself. The series highlights the latest and most exciting contemporary research on language in the Maghrib. These lectures in sociolinguistic, discourse analysis, semiotics, and anthropological linguistics underscore North African linguistic complexity. Noteworthy lectures in 2016 and 2017 included: “The Politics of Multilingualism in Algeria,” “Words and Sociological Change in Algeria,” and “The Semiotics of Contemporary Algerian Poetry.”

AIMS Sponsored Panels at MESA

Each year, the AIMS Board meets in conjunction with the Middle East Studies Association (MESA) Annual Meeting. The 2013 meeting took place in New Orleans, Louisiana in October. Throughout the MESA meeting, AIMS sponsored a film and three panels. Additionally, there were 8 presentations by recipients of travel awards and 42 AIMS Member Papers, representing the stellar contributions of AIMS members to the field of Middle Eastern Studies.

A Scientific Council Lecture Series: Spaces and Territories in the Maghreb (CEMA)

This multidisciplinary lecture series underscores the role of place, space, and territoriality in the Maghrib, underscoring movements of culture and ideas across space and time. Noteworthy lectures in 2016 and 2017 included: “Spatial and Nominal Categorization in the Algiers Casbah,” “Hypotheses on the Invention of a Territory,” “Cities and Social Movements in Morocco,” “Transnational Commerce and Urban Space in Algeria,” and “The State of the Maghrib Union.”

Witnesses to the Algerian War of Independence (CEMA)

In early 2015, CEMA partnered with the Algerian National Center for Research in Social and Cultural Anthropology (CRASC) to create a venue from which participants in the Algerian War of Independence could present their experiences, including key events that pushed them to join the national independence struggle, activities during the revolution, and their professional trajectories immediately following independence. In 2016, Ramdane Asselah, founding member of the nationalist underground group, the Organisation Secrete presented “The Memoires of an O.S. Militant.”
One of AIMS’ primary objectives is to encourage and strengthen Maghribi scholarship at all levels. Through workshops, training sessions and scholarships, and via student exchange programs, AIMS bolsters the quality and extent of scholarship taking place in North Africa.

The Thomas Jefferson Scholarship Program

The Thomas Jefferson Scholarship Program’s Undergraduate Program (UGRAD) and Tunisia Community College Program (TCCSP) gives talented Tunisian students the opportunity to study in the United States for one academic year or to receive technical training at an American community college for a year. Through these studies, which include volunteer service and presentations to American students about Tunisian culture, Tunisian students build strong inter-cultural connections with their American peers and receive valuable academic and technical skills, which promote innovation and economic development in their home country. CEMAT, through a sub-grant with the International Research and Exchanges Board (IREX), supported this important scholarship program with assistance in recruitment and selection of candidates, and is proud to have aided in the selection of 103 finalists from a pool of approximately 865 candidates for the 2014-2015 academic year.

The Harry Frank Guggenheim Foundation Social Science Training Workshop for North African Scholars

Since 2012, the Harry Frank Guggenheim Foundation has partnered with CEMAT and CEMA to organize social science skill-building seminars and reading workshops for North African scholars working. Led by senior scholars, the seminars have focused on research project development, and honing methodological tools. In 2016, North African students from Algeria, Morocco, and Tunisia participated in a two-part workshop, organized by Professors Benjamin Brower (University of Texas at Austin) and Todd Shepard (the Johns Hopkins University), to finalize project proposals for the HFG’s Young African Scholars Program.

CEMAT Grants for Graduate Research in U.S.: The Jeanne Jeffers Mrad Memorial Fund

In 2011, the American-Tunisian Association (ATA), a non-profit association based in Washington, D.C., established a special fund to honor Jeanne Jeffers Mrad, the founding director of CEMAT. The fund facilitates travel for Tunisian scholars to the United States for short-term research and conference attendance. CEMAT facilitates the application process and awards are selected on a competitive basis by the ATA Board. Since 2011, ATA has awarded seven grants.
University of Pennsylvania/The Lauder Institute Intensive Arabic Language and Cultural Corporate Program

CEMAT offers various models of intensive Arabic Language Study in Tunisia, building on 8 years of experience in curriculum development, intensive linguistic, cultural, and scholarly emersion. CEMAT has developed an immersion Modern Standard Arabic Language Curriculum along with an intensive cultural and corporate program specifically geared towards the scholarly needs and interests of Wharton Lauder students. The five-week intensive immersion program offered 32 Arabic contact hours, while at the same time practicing Arabic during meetings with members of the members of parliament, emerging business leaders and social entrepreneurs, Tunisian academics and civil society representatives.

The program fosters a scholarly environment that expands knowledge about Tunisia and offers cultural and corporate visits where the students have the chance to meet and interact with Tunisian intellectuals. Lauder students explore diverse themes through specialized content courses with the guidance of distinguished Arabic teachers. The program’s themes cover the history and internal transformations of political Islam; the post-revolutionary evolution of Tunisian unions; the state of the Tunisian economy; human rights in Tunisia; youth politics and activism. Also, the students experience the Tunisian family culture through host families located in Sidi Bou Said.
AIMS’ Work In Civil Society

AIMS Director’s Symposium (CEMA)

While the bulk of CEMA’s activities are co-organized with institutions from the Algerian Ministry of Higher Education and Scientific Research, it too works with civil society, and has partnered with a number of local associations dedicated to the memory of the city of Oran. Such was the case with the 2017 AIMS Director’s Symposium, Historical Preservation in North Africa, which CEMA organized with the Association Santé Sidi el Houari and the Association Bel Horizon. The symposium brought together sixteen American, Algerian, Moroccan, and Tunisian historical preservation activists and academics to discuss the various pathways, models, constraints and opportunities to historical preservation in the Maghrib.

Medina Women’s Arabic Literacy Program (TALIM)

With support from a US Embassy Public Affairs Office grant—whose funds are used in part to support TALIM’s literacy instructor and outreach coordinator, and to foster various outreach efforts, especially to youth and under-served communities—50 women from neighborhoods inside the Tangier medina are enrolled in the Legation’s Medina Women’s Arabic Literacy Program. Private Moroccan donations completely support our STEM English scholarship program for medina public high school students, in partnership with the Tangier American Language Center. 50 students are currently enrolled, with 15 «third generation» scholars having started in September 2018.

Council of American Overseas Research Centers (CAORC)

AIMS is a member of the Council of American Overseas Research Centers, a not-for-profit federation of twenty-four research centers promoting advanced research, particularly in the humanities and social sciences. AIMS is the only CAORC affiliate that administers three overseas centers, covering an entire region.

The Harry Frank Guggenheim Foundation

The Harry Frank Guggenheim Foundation, through grants and dissertation fellowships to graduate students, sponsors scholarly research on problems of violence, aggression and dominance.

The Lauder Institute at the University of Pennsylvania

The Lauder Institute at the University of Pennsylvania gives exceptional graduate students the opportunity to pursue an MBA, along with an additional graduate degree, such as a J.D. AIMS’ overseas research centers partner with the Program to offer its students the opportunity to study Arabic in the Tunisia as a part of their global curriculum.

United States Embassies in Algiers, Rabat, and Tunis

The Public Affairs Offices of the U.S. embassies in Algeria, Morocco, and Tunisia work with AIMS’ overseas research centers to provide Algerians, Moroccans, Tunisians, and Americans with opportunities for educational and cultural exchange.

United States Department of Education

In October 2016, AIMS was awarded a four-year Department of Education American Overseas Research Centers Title VI Grant to strengthen and expand U.S. postgraduate research on North Africa. The generous grant funds. In addition to generously funding ongoing administrative operations at CEMA, CEMAT, and TALIM, the grant allows the centers to provide a dynamic lecture series in the social sciences and the humanities. Those lectures can now be streamed at our Maghrib in Past & Present | Podcasts webpage (www.themaghribpodcast.com), as well as on iTunes and PodBean, projecting AIMS’ colloquia, lectures, and symposia into the virtual classroom, and providing expanded opportunities for the dissemination of Maghrib studies in the U.S. and elsewhere.

AIMS Board

Dr. Donna Lee Bowen, Treasurer, 2016-2018

Donna Lee Bowen is Professor of Political Science at and Middle East Studies Coordinator at Brigham Young University. She received her Ph.D. in Political Science at the University of Utah. Her work specializes in studies of family policy in the Middle East. She has published extensively and is the co-editor of Everyday Life in the Muslim Middle East (Indiana University Press, 3rd Ed. 2014).

Dr. Benjamin C. Brower, 2016-2019

Benjamin Brower is Associate Professor of History at the University of Texas, Austin. He received his Ph.D. at Cornell University. He is a historian of modern France and its colonies with a focus on Algeria. His research examines the colonial situation and its impact on the societies of the colonized and the colonizers, with broader interests in European imperialism, questions of secularism and Islam, and understanding violence in history. His current research focuses specifically on the history of pilgrimage to Mecca and the Holy Places made by Muslims subject to French colonial rule.

Dr. Eric Calderwood, 2014-2017

Eric Calderwood is Associate Professor of Comparative Literature and Arabic at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, where he also holds faculty appointments in the Department of Spanish and Portuguese, the Center for South Asian and Middle Eastern Studies, the Program in Medieval Studies, the Unit for Criticism and Interpretive Theory, and the Program in Jewish Culture and Society. He received his Ph.D. from Harvard University in 2011. His research explores modern Mediterranean culture, with a particular emphasis on Spanish and North African literature and film.

Dr. Brock Cutler, 2017-2020

Brock Cutler is Associate Professor of History at Radford University. He earned his Ph.D. from the University of California, Irvine’s History Department. His current research investigates the relationship between the physical environment and the geography of sovereignty in nineteenth-century North Africa. Dr. Cutler’s areas of interest include environmental history, the history of the modern state, and the modern Middle East and North Africa.
Dr. Muriam Davis, 2016-2019

Muriam Davis is Assistant Professor of History at University of California, Santa Cruz. She earned her Ph.D. from New York University. Her research interests focus on development, decolonization and race in North Africa. For the 2015-2016 academic year Dr. Davis was a Max Weber Postdoctoral Fellow at the European University Institute in Florence, where she worked on her book manuscript entitled From Homo Islamicus to Homo Economicus: Markets, Muslims, and the Remaking of Race in Algeria, 1958-1965. Dr. Davis is co-editor of North Africa and the Making of Europe, published in 2017 by Bloomsbury Academic Publishing.

Dr. Hussein Fancy, 2017-2020

Hussein Fancy is Associate Professor of History at the University of Michigan. He earned his Ph.D. from Princeton University. His research and writing focus on the social, cultural, and intellectual history of religious interaction in the medieval Mediterranean. In particular, he is interested in projects that combine the use of Latin, Arabic, and Romance archival sources. He is currently working on his project, Impostor Sea: The Making of the Medieval Mediterranean, which follows the activities of criminal merchants—pirates and smugglers—in order to rethink the relationship between religion and trade.

Dr. Allen Fromherz, President (2015-present)

Allen Fromherz is Associate Professor of History and Director of the Middle East Studies Center at Georgia State University. He received his Ph.D. from the University of St. Andrews, Scotland. His research interests include Medieval History, Medieval Mediterranean and Iberian History, specializing on North Africa and the Gulf.

Dr. Mia Fuller, Treasurer (2015-2018)

Mia Fuller is Associate Professor of Italian Studies at the University of California, Berkeley. She received a Ph.D. from the University of California, Berkeley. She is a cultural anthropologist and urban-architectural historian whose research concerns the interplays of physical space with political power. She has published extensively on architecture and city planning in the Italian colonies, including Libya and Eritrea.
Dr. Camilo Gomez-Rivas, 2016-2019
Camilo Gomez-Rivas is Associate Professor of History at the University of California, Santa Cruz. He received his Ph.D. in Medieval Studies from Yale in 2009. He specializes in the cultures, literatures, and histories of the western Mediterranean. His recent research has focused on the development of legal institutions under the Almoravids and the history of the refugees of the Reconquista.

Dr. Doris Gray, 2015-2018
Doris Gray is Director of the Hilary Clinton Center for Women's Empowerment and Associate Professor of Gender Studies at Al Akhawayn University. She received her Ph.D. in French and Francophone Studies at Florida State University in 2005. She is the author of three books. Before becoming an academic, Doris Gray worked as a journalist, 12 years as a foreign correspondent first in South African and then in Kenya.

Dr. Todd Shepard 2013-2017
Todd Shepard is Arthur O. Lovejoy Professor of History at Johns Hopkins University. He received his Ph.D. in History from Rutgers University-New Brunswick. His scholarship explores how imperialism and transnational developments shaped twentieth-century France. His most recent work is a study of how ‘sexual Orientalism’ re-emerged in post-decolonization French politics and discussion. Todd Shepard is also Co-Director of the Program in the Study of Women, Gender, and Sexuality at Johns Hopkins University.

Dr. Mark Tessler, 2013-2016
Mark Tessler is Samuel J. Eldersveld Professor of Political Science at the University of Michigan. He received his Ph.D. in Political Science at Northwestern University. He specializes in Comparative Politics and Middle East Studies. He has studied and/or conducted field research in Algeria, Morocco, Tunisia, Egypt, Israel, and Palestine (West Bank and Gaza). His scholarly publications examine the nature, determinants, and political implications of attitudes and values held by ordinary citizens in the Middle East. Mark Tessler also co-directs the Arab Barometer Survey project.
Dr. Yael Warshel, 2017-2020
Yael Warshel is Assistant Professor of Telecommunications, Rock Ethics Institute Research Associate and Affiliated Faculty of International Affairs, International and Comparative Education at Penn State University. She earned her Ph.D. in Communication from University of California, San Diego. She is a scholar of African and Middle Eastern media, youth and global conflict specializing in the assessment and evaluation of the role mass and interpersonal communication play in managing political conflicts and Middle Eastern and African media/infrastructures as well as audiences’ uses and practices, as situated within political, economic, military and social contexts.

Dr. Diana Wylie, Secretary (2015-present)
Diana Wylie is Professor of History at the African Studies Center, Boston University. She obtained a B.A. in History from Goucher College (1969), an M. Litt. in History from the University of Edinburgh (1974), and a Ph.D. in the same subject from Yale University (1984). Professor Wylie has published four books and numerous articles mainly on South and North African History. Her current research focuses on urban history with special reference to historic preservation and public space.

Dr. Jonathan Wyrtzen, Vice-President (2015-2018)
Jonathan Wyrtzen is Associate Professor of Sociology, History, and International Affairs at Yale University. He obtained his Ph.D. at Georgetown University. His research focuses on society and politics in North Africa and the Middle East, particularly with regards to interactions catalyzed by the expansion of European empires into this region. His current research examines how World War I unmade the Ottoman political order that had shaped the Middle East for centuries and opened up the possibility for local and European actors to reimagine the region.
