THEME AND CONFERENCE HIGHLIGHTS

Our topic, “Monuments and Memory,” was inspired by the ongoing controversies throughout the South about Confederate monuments, and so joins other recent INCS conferences that have invited self-consciously (as opposed to naively) presentist approaches to studying the nineteenth century. But the nearly 60 paper presentations do not limit themselves to such approaches any more than they limit themselves to the timely and important topic of public monuments. Many explore myriad ways that cultural memory about the nineteenth century has been shaped after the fact, for better and for worse. Others engage with personal memory, tracing the ways that nineteenth-century writers, artists, and “ordinary people” sought to remember the dead, their childhoods, their children, or their travels and experiences. Others still study the diaries, photographs, and ephemera through which such people commanded themselves to remember, and demanded of posterity: Forget me not.

Keynote talks by a historian, a literary scholar, and a multimedia artist punctuate the paper sessions. A plenary panel discussion considers monumentality from various disciplinary perspectives and explores different textual manifestations of historical and cultural memory. Three featured panels and round-tables ask what it means to live in the “wake” of the nineteenth-century bourgeois project, provide a forum for a pedagogy of “race” in the nineteenth-century studies classroom, and commemorate George Eliot’s birth in its bicentenary year. We hope you have a memorable conference!

LAUREN M. E. GOODLAD
Saturday, March 22, 11:25-12:55, Plaza B-C
Ontological Reading and the Case of the Occulted Landscape

This lecture takes up Emily Brontë’s Wuthering Heights to ask how the narrative work of landscape inspires new tools for the “ontological reading” of nineteenth-century fiction. As part of a new project on the long aftelives of nineteenth-century fiction and the current turn to ontology, the lecture works forwards and backwards from Brontë’s pioneering treatment of landscape to recent homages, including Marysta Conde’s Windward Heights (1995), David Peace’s Red Riding Quartet (1999-2002), and Caryl Phillips’s The Lost Child (2015).

Lauren M. E. Goodlad is professor of English at Rutgers University. She is the author of The Victorian Geopolitical Aesthetic: Realism, Sovereignty and Transnational Experience (Oxford, 2015) and Victorian Literature and the Victorian State: Character and Governance in a Liberal Society (Johns Hopkins, 2003); co-editor of Mad Men, Mad World: Sex, Politics, Style, and the 1960s (Duke UP, 2013), co-editor of Gothic Undead Subculture (Duke, 2007), and a member of numerous scholarly editorial and advisory boards. Her articles and reviews have been published in journals such as American Literary History, Cultural Critique, ELH, Genre, MLQ, Nineteenth-Century Literature, Victorian Literature and Culture, and Victorian Studies.

NEIL FOLEY

Monuments and Memory: Comparing Public Reckonings with the History of the West and South

Public reckonings with monuments and memorials in the West and South reveal how narratives of conquest/colonialism and slavery are made of silences, how African Americans, Native peoples, and others have sought to change those narratives, and what that tells us about the present eruption of white nationalism.

Neil Foley is the Robert H. and Nancy Dedman Chair of History at Southern Methodist University and the co-director of SMU’s Clements Center for Southwest Studies. His current research centers on the changing constructions of race, citizenship, and transnational identity in the Borderlands, Mexico and the American West, Mexican immigration, and comparative civil rights politics of African Americans and Mexican Americans. His books include The White Scourge: Mexicans, Blacks, and Poor Whites in Texas (Berkeley, 1997); Quest for Equality: The Failed Promise of Black-Brown Solidarity (Harvard, 2010), and Mexicans in the Making of America (Harvard, 2014). He is also the editor of Reflexiones: New Directions in Mexican American Studies (1998).

ADA PINKSTON
Saturday, March 23, 5:30-6:30, Plaza B-C
The Poetics of Public Space and the Aesthetics of Truth

According to The Southern Poverty Law Center, there are currently over 1,500 public monuments and memorials that honor and uphold the narratives of the Confederacy. Recently, over 100 others have been removed. This multimedia talk, which integrates a slide presentation with movement and a short video screening, considers the ways Confederate memorials re-inscribe polarities and reify systems of power in contemporary society. It also demonstrates how pedestals left empty after the removal of the monuments can serve as metaphors for silenced moments in history.

Native New Yorker Ada Pinkston is a multimedia artist, educator, cultural organizer living and working in Baltimore, Maryland. Using monoprint, performance, experimental video, and collage techniques, her art explores the intersection of imagined histories and sociopolitical realities on our bodies. It has been featured at The Baltimore Museum of Art, The Walters Art Museum, The Peale Museum, Transmodern Performance Festival, PS.1, The New Museum, Light City Baltimore, and the streets of Berlin. She is a recipient of an Andy Warhol Foundation Crit Fund Grant in Visual Arts, administered by The Contemporary in Baltimore (2017); and a Robert W. Deutsch Foundation Ruby’s Project Grant in Visual Arts in (2017). Her most recent collaborative project includes founding the LabBodies Performance Art Laboratory in Baltimore, Maryland.

PLenary PANEL DISCUSSION
INTERDISCIPLINARY PERSPECTIVES ON MEMORY AND MONUMENTALITY
FRIDAY, MARCH 22, 11:30-12:45, PLAZA B-C

MODERATOR:
Elizabeth Bacon Eager, Southern Methodist University

PARTICIPANTS:
JO GULDI, Southern Methodist University

Jo Guldi is a historian of Britain and the infrastructure state and a digital historian. She authored Roads to Power: Britain Invents the Infrastructure State and co-authored The History Manifesto, which was named by the Chronicle of Higher Education as one of the twenty most influential books across all fields in the last twenty years. Her current project involves text mining and Hanford’s parliamentary debates.

Participant list continues on page 10

Daniel Hack, University of Michigan

Daniel Hack is Professor of English at the University of Michigan. He is the author of two books: The Material Interests of the Victorian Novel and Reaping Something New: African American Transformations of Victorian Literature, which received Honorable Mention for the 2018 Best Book Prize of the North American Victorian Studies Association. He is also, along with Rachel Abelow, editor of the journal Victorian Literature and Culture, which received Honorable Mention for Best Special Issue of 2018 from the Council of Editors of Learned Journals, for its “Keywords” issue, which he will be discussing today. His current, ill-defined project is on literary allusion, foreshadowing, quixotism, and the meaning of life.

Nancy Henry, University of Tennessee

Peter Mondelli, University of North Texas

Peter Mondelli's research considers the impact of print culture and bourgeois capitalism on nineteenth-century Parisian opera. Other areas of interest include orality and literacy in late eighteenth-century song, early music, and musicology in fin-de-siècle France, and the relationship between music studies and the posthumanities. Recent publications include articles in Acta Musicologica, The Opera Quarterly, and The German Quarterly. He is currently finishing revisions on his first book – Opera, Print, and Capital in Nineteenth-Century Paris.

Ariel Ron, Southern Methodist University

Ariel Ron is a historian of nineteenth-century U.S. political economy. His articles have appeared in the Journal of American History and other scholarly publications, and a book, Grassroots Leviathan: Agricultural Reform and the Rural North in the Slaveholding Republic, is forthcoming from Johns Hopkins University Press.

Lauren Woods, Southern Methodist University

Lauren Woods is a conceptual artist based in Dallas, Texas, whose hybrid media projects engage history as a lens by which to view the socio-politics of the present. Some of her work, which has been exhibited throughout the United States and internationally, explores how traditional monument-making can be translated into new contemporary models of remembrance with new media. One of her better-known works is Drinking Fountain #1, a new media monument to the American civil rights movement, located underneath the remnants of a recently rediscovered Jim Crow “White Only” sign in the Dallas County Records Building in Dallas, Texas, the installation is part sculpture, part intervention, and part of a larger public artwork. She has been the recipient of grants and awards from numerous institutions including the Creative Capital Foundation, The Tribeca Film Institute, College Art Association, Alliance of Artists Communities and The San Francisco Foundation.

George Eliot at 200: Middleness, Memorials, and the Unremembered

Bordeaux

In 1998, Constance M. Fulmer and Margaret Barfield gave the title A Monument to the Memory of George Eliot to their edition of Edith Simcox’s “Autobiography of a Shrimmaker.” In the same spirit testimonial and appreciation, we propose a panel — itself a memorial if not a monument — in honor of the 200th anniversary of George Eliot's birth on November 20, 1819.

In the Wake: After Bourgeois Life

Normandy B

What does it mean to come after? Drawing on Christina Sharpe’s description of “wake-work,” these short interventions draw on studies of trauma, ecology, race, and empire to imagine what it means to dwell in the wake of a bourgeois world that was itself built on dispossession and injury. They’ll go further to ask how acts of historical memory might help us think our present world otherwise. 10-minute provocations followed by open discussion.

Participants:
Allen MacDuffie, University of Texas, Austin
Carolyn Lesjak, Simon Fraser University
Allison Carseen, Boston College
Rithika Ramamurthy, Brown University

Moderator:
Nathan K. Hensley, Georgetown University

Teaching Race in the Nineteenth Century: A Roundtable

Somerset

How do we talk about race in the nineteenth-century studies classroom? How can we guide students through difficult conversations about racialized, and racist, narratives like the one constructed in “The East Offering Its Riches to Britannia”? Where can we connect students’ study of the nineteenth century with their own experiences of race, racism, and intersectional identities? The goal of this roundtable is to pose practical and pedagogical questions related to “teaching race” and to develop, through collaborative discussion with attendees, a toolkit of pedagogical practices and a shared bibliography of resources, readings, and assignments.

Participants:
Mary-Catherine Harrison, University of Detroit Mercy
Narin Hassan, Georgia Tech
Andrea Kaston Tange, Malecaster College
