THE 'AT' EVALUATION

Assistive technology is a very broad and diverse definition for the many resources available to those with disabilities: The field of assistive technology (AT) and augmentative and alternative communication (AAC) involves many different disciplines: speech and language pathologists (SLP), occupational therapists (OT), board-certified behavior analysts (BCBA), physical therapists (PT), and others. It is important to find the right professionals who will work well with your family to ensure a successful outcome. An interdisciplinary team approach, with multiple perspectives, works the best!
