ACTORS EQUITY ASSOCIATION (AEA), founded in 1913 was the first of the American Actors’ Unions and now represents more than 45,000 actors, singers, dancers, and stage managers nationally. Equity members are dedicated theatre professionals who uphold the highest artistic standards. Historically, AEA has stood at the forefront of many issues, including: civil rights (from the historic 1947 boycott of the then-segregated National Theatre in Washington D.C. to the 1986 founding of the Non-Traditional Casting Project); preservation of historic theatres (it initiated the landmarking of all of the Broadway theatres); national, state and local funding for the arts (AEA helped to create the National Endowment for the Arts); and arts lobbying to advance, foster, and benefit all those connected with the art of theatre. A member of the AFL-CIO, AEA is affiliated with the Federated International Artists (FIA), an international organization of performing arts unions. For more information, visit AEA’s website at www.actorsequity.org.

Like all futurist literature, Other Than We is a metaphor—to be experienced literally, of course, as a high stakes adventure (will they, won't they, what will be the cost), but to lodge in the mind's heart as a fable from which some personal truth may be extracted which has meaning to each self, alone. We needn't agree on meaning—the writer is the last to suggest what something means—she has meant to create a world that sucks one in, a web of event that like any web is also a labyrinth and somewhat dangerous. She has, of course, intended—but, again, it hardly matters what she has intended—and in any case, the theater is a collective effort. Each character is a collaboration between a unique actor and the words on the page; the world lives, too, in the designers' eyes—by now, the playwright is mainly out-of-the-picture—the director (in this case, me) is trying to expedite and clarify the roads taken, driving the action deeper. (And this play has drive; the stakes could hardly be higher.) Nevertheless, the author had an intention she stands by—even if she won't say, cannot say, exactly what it was—because the intention, too, is taken up by forces inside her, outside her control. After the initial impulse and effortful investigation, once the words start speaking in her head, she attends; she does not lead.

Still and all, I wanted to go beyond my previous play, Extreme Whether, whose epilogue presents the choice before us, a fragile green world (a Green New Deal, I can say), or a catastrophic climate in which all life is precarious at best. The new play is set in a future where humans continued on as we do now, going about our business, using things up, seldom conscious—even the most conscious among us—of the consequences of our actions because we have always lived like this. (I am speaking of the privileged, the “developed” nations, the culprits.) The result has been climate collapse, and our toxic waste products, the nuclear radiation in our bombs, the poisons in our fuel have polluted the world. It is not just temperature rise, but all climate systems run amuck, that destroys lives. Of course, the privileged have taken shelter in the Dome, a hermetically sealed place. Those who disobey, or are no longer of use, are exiled. The Dome, of course, is highly surveilled and its shadowy rulers are trying ultimately to monitor and control every thought. Food is scarce and the solution ghoulish. “Women are wearing out,” the play's opening line, gives insight into the condition of the birthers.

There is resistance, of course, a shadowy, barely trustworthy underground. And there are rebels, those who in every tragic situation risk their lives for a vision they cherish in which human life, and all life, will at last be valued. The play is the story of four of them embarked on a foolhardy mission that may spell their doom but which might yet yield a new, fragile start to the project of conscious life.

Because I have had the great pleasure of working with George Bartenieff, Tony Giovannetti, Arthur Rosen, Sally Ann Parsons and Carisa Kelly over many years, I relied on our common concerns and their capacities to realize our visions. Donald Eastman is a new and fortunate collaborator. Christen Clifford, Caitlin Cassidy, Clea Straus Rivera, and Paul Pryce are actors who helped develop the script. Dalia Basiouny, Naomi Wallace and Kathleen Chalfant were early readers. Nina Kamberos, Egret Imprint, will publish the text. Many people’s words and thoughts influenced this work. Among the writers I do not know but whose books I devoured, I acknowledge the anthropologist Sarah Blaffer Hrdy, fiction writers Ursula LeGuin, Octavia Butler, and James Baldwin (for his humanism), plus the many scientists, climate activists and nature writers whose works document often in elegant, heart wrenching prose our climate crisis. I was raised in a theater world where the word “transformation” was taken literally and intended to be given form. Joseph Chaikin’s Open Theater, Judith Malina and Julian Beck's Living Theatre were my training grounds. Also, as a young woman, I met Noam Chomsky when I interviewed him for a CBS-Camera Three arts program on the lawn at M.I.T. His work continues to influence me, and we have remained in touch over the years. I spent many hours with two of his recent books on linguistics, Why Only Us, and What Kind of Creatures Are We. The title of this last book becomes an anxious question in the final transformative scene of this play. I was very lucky, too, in my friendship with the cognitive psychologist and ecofeminist Dorothy Dinnerstein, author of the groundbreaking The Mermaid and the Minotaur, with whom I shared hours of intense conversation, often while side stroking together in Long Island’s sound, about her insistent question, “why we cannot see what we must see in order to survive.” Dorothy posited the need for a thinking-heart, a mind that could feel-think, and if there is one dominant idea in this play, that is it.

—Karen Malpede
George Bartenieff (Opa, co-director, producer), legendary actor-producer of new plays, began his career at age 14 on Broadway in The Whole World Over, directed by Harold Clurman with Uta Hagen and Herbert Berghof, and this summer he played the lead in that same play at HB Studios. He is co-founder of Theater Three Collaborative and has created and acted leading roles in eleven collaborations of new plays with Karen Malpede, including his acclaimed Uncle in Extreme Whether, and Victor Klemperer in I Will Bear Witness, which he toured to London, Austria and Germany, after premiering at Classic Stage and Theater J. He has created leading roles in seminal productions: under the direction of Alan Schneider, he played the lead roles back-to-back in Krapp’s Last Tape & Zoo Story in the 1965 revival; he was in the original productions of The Brig and Dead End Kids. Recently, he appeared on Broadway in Fiddler on the Roof, and Merchant of Venice, and at the NYSF as Cadmus in The Bacchae. He was co-founder of Theater for the New City where for 24 years he produced over 400 new American plays by Sam Shepard, Irene Fornes, Malpede and many others. In 1992-92, he organized six theaters nationwide to stage annual eco-theater festivals, creating and sharing new work. He co-founded Theater Three Collaborative in 1995. Up-coming TV: Ray Donovan. Four Obie Awards for Lifetime Achievement, Acting, and Producing, Drama Desk, Philly. Teaches Shakespeare at HB Studios. RADA, Guildhall.

Lisa Birnbaum (Michelle) is thrilled to be a part of Other Than We! TV Credits include Madam Secretary (CBS), Deception (NBC), Law & Order (NBC), and Guiding Light (CBS). Lisa also teaches acting at NYCDa. Lisa received her M.F.A. from the Yale School of Drama. Many thanks to Vanguard, the Birnbaum clan, and her NY fam.

Emily Fury Daly (Eve) Emily is a Wisconsin native and recent New Yorker having graduated with her MFA from the University of California-Irvine in 2018. She has worked regionally at such places as Pacific Conservatory Theatre (Sense and Sensibility), Chautauqua Theater Company (Noises Off, Romeo and Juliet), The Great River Shakespeare Festival (Macbeth), Pittsburgh Public Theater (Indecent), and American Players Theater (As You Like It, The Recruiting Officer, Measure for Measure). Emily is represented by Avalon Artists Group and is very excited to be working with Theater Three Collaborative for the first time! Love to the Dalys.

Tommie J. Moore (Tenaka) Tommie has performed in over 30 plays. His film work includes; Robinson (rookie FBI agent) in the feature film Al Qarem; Larry in the web series LabCats, A security guard in the short film Close; And most recently Abraham in the film The Lure. In 2020, he will be Off-Broadway with his one-man play Dare to be Black (The Jack Johnson Story). Mr. Moore is currently in the original cast of Layon Gray's Cowboy. In which he plays the lead character, Bass Reeves. Follow Tommie on Instagram @tommiejmoore | Facebook.com/tommiejmoore | Facebook.com/daretobeblack

Donald Eastman (Set Design) is thrilled to return to La MaMa with Karen Malpede for Other Than We. He returns to La MaMa later this season with The Transfiguration of Benjamin Banneker written and directed by Theodora Skipitares. Other premier productions include the plays of Tazewell Thompson, Eduardo Machado as well as two decades of design for Maria Irene Fornes. Upcoming productions include Freedom Ride at Chicago Opera Theatre and Jeanine Tesori and Tazewell Thompson's BLUE for Washington National Opera. Donald is the recipient of numerous awards including an OBIE Award for Sustained Excellence of Design and is a grantee of the NEA/National Opera Institute.

Tony Giovannetti (Lighting Designer) has designed lights for all TTC production since 1995, including the premier of I Will Bear Witness at Classic Stage Company, and most recently he joined us in Paris for our performances of Extreme Whether at ARTCop21 where he solved a variety of design problems. He has designed many productions for Meredith Monk, Lee Nagrin and others, working inside and at sight specific locations outside. He is head of the electrics department at the Metropolitan Opera and has designed lighting for numerous outdoor summer concerts. Bessie Award winner for lighting design.

Catherine Greninger (Digital Media Specialist) designs and maintains our website and digital communications. A graduate of Pratt Institute and current student at SVA, she enjoys her time involved with the theater life while pursuing her passion in experimental motion graphics.

Stuart Howard (Casting) has been casting in NYC for over 30 years. He casts for Broadway, Off Broadway, National & International tours and regional productions around the U. S. including Shakespeare Theatre and Studio Theatre (both in Washington, DC), Houston's Alley Theatre, Seattle Repertory, Delaware Theatre Company, and Red Bull Theater in NYC. In April, 2020, Red Bull will present Jesse Berger's production of Jeffrey Hatcher's new adaptation of Ben Jonson's The Alchemist.

Nina Kamberos (Publisher) is the founder and editor-in-chief of Laertes, a press for literary translation located in Chapel Hill, North Carolina (www.laertesbooks.org). In early 2020, she will have the honor of publishing Other Than We as an Egret Acting Edition, an imprint for engaged and provocative drama. It will also be included in the forthcoming anthology, Department of Dreams: Recent Dystopian Plays from Across the World. Through Egret Acting Editions & Literary Agency, Nina will act as a representative for Karen and Other Than We. She will also commission translations into French, Turkish, and German to begin to introduce this work to a wide international audience.

Carisa Kelly (Costume Designer) has been collaborating with Sally Ann Parsons on Theatre Three Collaborative productions since 2013 including Extreme Whether presented at La MaMa. Carisa's work has been seen at The Berkshire Theatre Group (Outside Mullingar), Primary Stages (Fade), Second Stage (Mala Hierba), MINT Theatre (The New Morality, Phillip Goes Forth), HERE Arts Center and the 52nd St Project, where she loves to help bring kids' plays to life. A Seattle native she worked with Wooden O'Theatre, Book-It-Repertory Theatre and was the resident design assistant at The Seattle Repertory Theatre. Work in film includes Diane (Kent Jones), Don't Think Twice (Mike Bribglia) and The Ticket (Ido Fluk). She holds an MFA from NYU's Tisch School of the Arts.

Luba Lukova (Graphic Designer) Luba's art is exhibited around the world and is included in the permanent collections of the Museum of Modern Art, New York; Denver Art Museum; Bibliothèque nationale de France, Paris; Hong Kong Heritage Museum; the Library of Congress; and the World Bank, Washington, D.C. She has created posters for Theater Three Collaborative and La MaMa for more than 20 years. www.lukova.net

Sally Ann Parsons (Costume Designer) has designed all TTC productions since the original The Beekeeper’s Daughter in Veroli, Italy, 1994. She designed costumes for Daniel Nagrin’s many solo works, including The Peloponnesian War sand was part of his experiment in improvisation, The Work Group. She was a longtime collaborator with the downtown theater artist, Lee Nagrin, the third of Theater Three Collaborative. She costumed Don Redlich’s company for many years, including a number of pieces choreographed by Hanya Holm, designed many solo works for the performance artist Margaret Beals, as well as music theater works for Eric Saltzman. She designed for Elina Mooney, Phoebe Neville, Irene Feigenheimer, Barbara Roan, Billy Siegenfeld, Lee Conner, and Lorn MacDougall. She owns and is the creative director of Parsons-Meares, Ltd, a theatrical costume shop established in 1980 with her husband, James Meares. Parsons-Meares, Ltd. creates costumes for Broadway shows, dance, opera, as well as various spectacles including ice shows and circuses. She is a Tony Award winner for Excellence in Theater.
