March General Meeting Notes
By Helene Zimmerman

The March 25th General Meeting began with NAMI-SMC’s election of officers and board members for 2015. Elected were: President: Jerry Thompson, RN; Vice President: Sharon Roth, RN; Treasurer: Carol Gosho; Secretary: Maureen Sinnott, PhD, and Board Members: Ann Baker; Christopher Jump; Bill Kerns.

Other announcements included the 11th NAMIWalk and getting friends and family involved; the opportunity to still donate to the 40th Anniversary; the May 21st start date for the next Peer to Peer program; a call for volunteers; the new Mental Health Ministry started by the UU Church of San Mateo, and the promotion of Helene Zimmerman as the Interim Executive Director.

The meeting’s topic, “The Strange but True Story of the Evolution of Psychiatric Diagnosis” was presented by Dr. Cam Quanbeck & Dr. Karin Hastik of Cordilleras. We learned how psychiatric diagnosis has evolved over the past 150 years. Also reviewed was the criticism and controversy surrounding the new DSM-5.

It was a powerful presentation, showing how far we have come, but how far psychiatric diagnosis still has to go.

Don’t miss the NAMI National Convention in San Francisco this year!

Help Us Protect Mental Health Medications In Medicare Part D!

Senators Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, and Sherrod Brown, D-Ohio, introduced the bipartisan Medicare Formulary Improvement Act (S. 648) last week to protect mental health medications in Medicare Part D. These medications are crucial in the treatment of illnesses like schizophrenia, depression, and bipolar disorder.

Currently these medications are in a “protected class” ensuring that when a doctor prescribes them they will not be subject to a denial based on things like cost.

So why do we need this bill?

You may remember last year that there was an attack on the “protected class” designation by the Federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS). In order to make sure that these life-saving medications remain in a “protected class” free from repeal you must raise your voice in support of this bill.

Contact your Senators TODAY asking them to co-sponsor this critical legislation - see http://www.nami.org/About-NAMI/Publications-Reports/Digital-Newsletters for more information.

Phantom Ball
40th Anniversary Celebration

Thanks to all of you who have supported this once-in-a-decade fundraiser. As promised it has been a “most unusual event”…..an event where all the funds raised go to directly support your NAMI-SMC affiliate. (The only cost has been for U.S. postage!)

As the invitation indicated:

The need is real--The event is virtual.

The online auction ended on March 31st, but you can still support the 40th Anniversary Celebration the old fashioned way, by sending a donation.

Special thanks to volunteers Sasa Puchbauer for the invitation design; NAMI member Gary Stang for all the printing; Curtis Stimson for the electronic invitation/distribution and auction site administration.

Thanks also to Maureen Sinnott, Ruan Frenette, Bill Kerns, Jerry Thompson, Carol Gosho, Margaret Taylor, and Steve and Pat Way who assisted with mailing by personalizing many invitations.

California Clubhouse Update
By Diane Warner

California Clubhouse recently hosted a welcome visit from Joel Corcoran, Executive Director of Clubhouse International based in NYC, and Jack Yatsko, Chief Operating Officer of Clubhouse International based in Hawaii. Forty guests attended the afternoon event at 2205 Palm Ave. in San Mateo.

“The mission of Clubhouse International,” said Joel Corcoran, “is to change the country forever in overcoming discrimination, giving opportunity and fostering skills that return persons with mental illnesses to work as well as give social support.” His hope is that each individual will rebuild his/her life by belonging someplace where they want to come and working side by side with specifically trained mentoring staff to reach their goals.

Already 340 clubhouses around the world are meeting the needs of their members; 42% return to work, others finish school and find lasting relationships. “Clubhouse members are needed, wanted and valued,” according to Jack Yatsko. Clubhouse has standards for accreditation and most clubs reach this goal within four years of opening. Standards are updated every two years and members are involved in the process.

Letter from Doris Fuller

Executive Director, Treatment Advocacy Center

I lost my darling daughter Natalie to terminal mental illness last weekend. She killed herself one month short of her 29th birthday by stepping in front of a train in Baltimore.

Natalie and I wrote a book together when she was 16: Promise You Won’t Freak Out: A Teenager Tells Her Mother the Truth About: Boys, Booze, Body Piercing, and Other Touchy Topics (and Mom Responds). The idea of a teenager telling the truth about her secrets was such a startling concept that we were feature-page headliners in about two dozen newspapers nationwide, went on TV coast to coast including one of the morning shows, got paid to give speeches. The Oprah Show called.

In the book, we used a device to signal whenever a wild turn was about to take place in the teen/parenting life: And then…. In the introduction, I defined an And then …. moment as “one of those critical junctures when my cheerful sense that all was right in the world collided with inescapable proof that it wasn’t.”

The book was published the week before Natalie finished high school to great reviews. Amazon named it the best parenting book of 2004. It was nominated for a national prize. It was translated into Lithuanian and Chinese.

And then…..

At 22, starting the second half of her senior year of college, Natalie had a psychotic break nobody saw coming. She went in the span of weeks from being a dazzling young adult with the world at her feet to a psych ward patient with an arrest record.

She rebounded quickly from that first episode and moved back home for the summer. She taught me how to like grilled tofu and make egg scrambles. She made the best salads of my life. She filled my house with her original art, her friends, her irrepressible spirit. Mental illness was not a theme. She returned to college in the fall. I saw her off with an emptier stomach but oh so much optimism.

Natalie’s passing easy to cope with, though perhaps you will be able to find some level of solace in knowing that you did everything you could to help Natalie.

There is no blame or guilt to be felt, because you did absolutely everything right that could have been done right. If at any point you feel the urge to place blame upon yourself, please take a moment to remind yourself that you put forth a flawlessly superhuman effort to be there for Natalie in every way possible, making her extremely lucky to have someone like you in her life.

While I never personally met Natalie, I feel a connection to how she may have perceived life as a result of our similar diagnoses. That said, and as you know, there are good days and bad days for those who live with mental illness, and sometimes the bad days are unavoidable, no matter what efforts have been taken to avoid the bad days.

The Natalie you know and love so much is all days, both the good and bad … and I believe that Natalie’s spirit still speaks loud and clear that she would want you to continue fighting the good fight, even though she was ultimately unable to do so, herself.

I know this because of how you and she spent your time on the good days, inclusive of writing a meaningful book together and spreading messages of dealing with one another, and healing with one another.

My sincerest condolences and prayers are with you and your family.

—Eric Smith

Interview with Dr. Rahil Briggs, PsyD

No Health without Mental Health (NHMH) recently interviewed Dr. Rahil Briggs, PsyD, the Director of Pediatric Behavioral Health Services at the Montefiore Medical Group in the Bronx, New York. Montefiore is unique in providing both integrated adult and pediatric behavioral health services. While the adult services at Montefiore follow the collaborative care model, pioneered by the AIMS (Advancing Integrated Mental Health Solutions) Center, at the University of Washington, www.aims.uw.edu, Montefiore’s pediatric model is designed to make its own significant contribution to the evidence base in this area.

Dr. Briggs is an expert in early childhood development, infant mental health, and the parent-child relationship. Ten years ago, she began her practice in Montefiore and has since been instrumental in setting up their preventive pediatric mental health care clinical program.

Her career interest had always been in psychology and early childhood, birth-5 years, development. Dr. Briggs had noticed that children who came to mental health care after those ages, had often already been suffering quite a while with behavioral health conditions. Also characteristic was that things usually had to get pretty bad before parents would even bring in their small children who were having behavioral health problems. And finally, often appointments were made and then cancelled.

So her focus moved to the pediatric primary care setting, the one place where all children must come for care at some point. Peds PC is a non-stigmatizing place; moreover, when it comes to pediatrics, primary care often has a very favorable connotation for families. These factors galvanized her interest in routinely integrating mental health care into the pediatric primary care clinics at Montefiore.

Starting in 2006, Montefiore launched a program for parents of infants and toddlers called Healthy Steps, www.healthysteps.org. The patient population is youngsters from birth to 5 years. In addition to their pediatrician, these little ones are seen by Healthy Steps Specialists, psychologists and social workers, specially trained in child development and behavioral health to screen for, monitor and treat behavioral problems.

Healthy Steps continually monitors the child’s behavioral and developmental well-being at every well-baby check-up. Parents are offered a dedicated hotline to answer questions regarding care, educational materials, optional home visits, parent discussion groups and referrals to children’s specialists when needed. Interestingly, parents are also themselves offered on-site treatment for their own depression, anxiety and other mental health concerns, in an environment of privacy.

The program has met with success in treating Montefiore Medical Group’s covered 100,000 children, 35,000 of whom are ages birth-5 years. To date, Montefiore is providing Healthy Steps in their 4 largest practices, with a patient population of 15-17,000 kids, birth to 5. By the end of 2015, it should be available in all their pediatric sites. Due to the plasticity of the developing brain, the Healthy Steps program at Montefiore has shown that it is significantly easier to provide early intervention, and ensure appropriate development and behavior, versus fixing problems long after they’ve emerged. Also, they were able to document a significant correlation between parents with difficult childhoods and the well-being of their own children. Offering integrated care had a powerful impact on that dynamic, with parents able to access mental healthcare for themselves, when needed, in the pediatric setting and thereby interrupt the otherwise powerful intergenerational transmission of risk and trauma.

In 2014, Montefiore expanded its pediatric integrated behavioral health to cover the pediatric lifespan, from birth through age 18. All patients receive universal screening for behavioral issues as a part of every well child visit. The pediatrician follows up, exploring the issues in more depth, and if appropriate, a warm handoff is made to a behavioral specialist in the pediatric clinic. Montefiore has developed short-term treatment modules aimed at school-age and adolescent children for care of anxiety, depression, trauma, attention deficit, etc. At the start is a brief assessment, using motivational interviewing techniques, followed by 4-6 sessions to treat the presenting problem. Child psychiatrists and psychologists are also available to do consultations with the pediatric primary care doctors.

Lessons Learned: Dr. Briggs shared Montefiore’s main takeaways from its 10 years experience providing integrated medical-behavioral care in pediatric primary care.

1. Providers considering implementation of the collaborative care should find a champion within their existing clinical program, able to function as a liaison between change agents and other incumbent clinicians in the practice.
2. To the extent behavioral screening can be presented as universal, there for everyone, it helps to reduce the social stigma parents often experience when seeking behavioral health care.
3. Workforce development is a crucial central issue. Success depends on hiring the right people to work in an integrated care culture - people who are flexible and can work within an unpredictable setting, who practice CBT (cognitive behavioral therapy) and other evidence-based techniques, who can do brief assessments and who have what Dr. Briggs terms an “integrated care backbone,” or the ability to take on only those cases that are appropriate for this unique integrated care model, and ensure that inappropriate cases are referred and managed elsewhere (either by the pediatrician or another provider in the community).

4. Training of healthcare professionals in an integrated practice is essential; the medical and behavioral fields need to develop sufficient training programs, such as fellowships, post-doctoral opportunities, and post-graduation training to teach these new skills.

5. Physical location counts. Behavioral specialists in pediatric primary care need to be close enough to the pediatric exam rooms that the warm handoff will be successful.

6. Behavioral health providers in the pediatric setting also struggle with issues of patient privacy and confidentiality, e.g. when the setting is not a mental health clinic per se, how do you honor the privacy of the patient while still providing integrated care; to what extent do you document or chart a parent’s mental health concerns in a child’s chart.

7. Value-based provider payment methods will incentivize wider implementation of this integrated care model. Paying for this care under traditional fee-for-service is challenging.

8. Parity of medical and behavioral care is difficult to achieve in a carve-out world, where medical and behavioral healthcare delivery and provider networks are separate and independent. Also, children are typically not high users of healthcare services in general, so the financial incentives are lower for some insurers. Still, value purchasing should incentivize this model of care.
