New Peer Support Programs - Funding Needed

The launch of two new Peer support programs for San Mateo County— MoD® (Mentors on Discharge®) and Peer PALS— are ready to be introduced into the community, but lack of funding to support them has put these new programs on hold.

About MoD: MoD provides a Peer Mentor (with 40 hours of training)—who is living well with their own diagnosis—to go into the in-patient psychiatric unit prior to the hospitalized person being discharged. Matched, they form a connection that when the person is discharged, he/she can count on. The individual has someone to reach out to, to help them in the recovery process and facilitate the participants own choices for wellness and recovery. The match continues for approximately 4 months.

About Peer PALS: A Peer PAL is someone who has their own mental illness diagnosis, who is now doing well in his/her own recovery and wishes to share their hope and friendship with a Peer who also has a diagnosis, but is not doing so well. Because PALS share the experience of mental illness with their Peer, they know the struggles, fears, isolation and sense of hopelessness that have to be overcome. The match continues for approximately 6 months. Again, the Peer who is having difficulty achieving an improved level of wellness, is supported in their recovery journey.

Benefits of MoD & Peer PALS Programs: As a relationship of trust is established between the Mentor/PAL and participant, through weekly meetings and twice weekly calls, there is a rise in self-confidence for the participant. Participants feel less isolated and feel more hopeful about their future, and their wellness and recovery. Program participants are also more cooperative with their treatment plans. Additionally the Mentors/PALS also can gain confidence in their own abilities, as often this is their first paid work in a long time. Many Mentors/PALS continue to grow in this position and/or are able to garner other meaningful employment. Participants are not alone in their recovery journey.

Measuring MoD Success: Success can be measured by the reduced number of hospitalizations of individuals in a 12-month period and the average days between hospitalizations. Additionally, individuals participating in the MoD program require fewer police interventions which equate to less trauma for the individuals as well as for family members and caregivers.

Other Local Participant Affiliates: The MoD Program was initialed by NAMI Alameda County South, and has since been implemented in NAMI Santa Clara County (SCC) and NAMI San Francisco. Peer PALS has been active in SCC for 15 years.

Peers Needed to Support New Programming: In order to implement our new Peer programs we need your help. If you are doing well in recovery, want to help others, have taken NAMI’s Peer to Peer course, and would like paid, part-time work, please contact us.

NAMI SMC is ready to start implementing these programs, but needs your help to do so. With grant requests out in the community, please help us achieve an initial $25,000 funding level that will enable us to get these programs up and running.

To learn more about the programs, access www.namisanmateo.org, click on Find Support/Individuals with a MH diagnosis and/or to help us with funding, contact Helene at execdirector@namisanmateo.org, or call 650-638-0800.

We can’t wait to support more Peers on their journey to wellness and recovery!

Mental Illness: A Global Challenge

Wednesday, November 2, 2016 • 12:00pm
Berg Hall A, Li Ka Shing Center

Mental illness is the leading cause of disability and mortality around the globe. Even in wealthy countries, only about half of people with mental illness receive adequate care. In low and middle income nations, almost all mental illnesses are left untreated by trained mental health professionals. Yet many other healing resources can be activated in low-resource countries, creating opportunities for people with mental illness to be helped and indeed to thrive. This Health Policy Forum engages the enormous challenges and opportunities of global mental health.

September General Meeting Review

On Wednesday, September 21, Dr. Quanbeck and Dr. Hastik spoke about the use of Psychopharmacologic testing of a person’s DNA – personalized medicine - to determine how rapidly or poorly a person might be able to respond to certain psychotropic medications. Offered by Genesight, this test is covered by Medicare and is especially helpful for people who have not responded to medication treatment and/or have significant side effects to medications.

Through this test, Genesight uses a weighted algorithm on which enzymes responsible for medication metabolism aid in clinical recommendations. Some people metabolize fast, some normally, and others slowly.

While advances in genetics have led to pharmacogenomic assays that are now commercially available to guide clinical decision making, this is still an area under development. Also discussed was neuroinflammation in serious mental illness, the gut-brain connection and recent research on minocycline in the treatment of schizophrenia.

At the conclusion of the presentation there were lots of questions.

A big thank you to Dr. Quanbeck and Dr. Hastik for their work and for their most informative presentation.

They will be honoring CAL-ACAP Children's Hero Award winners, including Assembly Member Bonta, for their exhaustive advocacy efforts benefiting children and families in California.

Quotes from past participants: “I did not realize what a multi-pronged approach already exists. We’re all pulling the same oar.” “I felt we all listened and respected each other’s opinions.” “Lots of time to hear everyone’s concerns.” “Best conference yet”

Complimentary continental breakfast and plated lunch will be served. To RSVP and choose your lunch option, contact: Cal ACAP: hhuynh@pesc.com, NAMI California: marcel@namica.org, or UACF: mbeebe@uacf4hope.org.

2017 “Directing Change” Program & Film Contest

If you’re in to making films and making a difference, then this opportunity is for you:

Students throughout California are invited to Direct Change by submitting 60 second films in three categories: Suicide Prevention / Mental Health Matters / Through the Lens of Culture. The winning teams and their associated high schools will win prizes, receive mental health or suicide prevention programs for their schools, participate in a meeting with state legislators on these topics and attend an awards ceremony.

Visit www.directingchange.org for all the information including contest rules.

Two important dates to remember:
• Sunday, Jan. 15, 2017 - Intent to Direct
• Wednesday, Mar. 1, 2017 - Film is due

Make a statement through your film, make a difference!
To all our volunteers,
THANK YOU.

Mental Health, Debates and Candidates

Please take a look at our resources for the elections at http://www.nami.org/elections. There you can find the 2016 election platforms, sample questions to ask candidates, among other information.

Three quick updates from NAMI as we head into the homestretch of the 2016 election…

1. Vice Presidential Debate
On Tuesday, October 4th, mental health briefly captured the attention of millions of people who tuned into the vice-presidential debate. Interrupting Senator Tim Kaine (D-VA) and Governor Mike Pence’s (R-IN) back-and-forth, moderator Elaine Quijano of CBS asked the candidates how they would address the fact that police officers are often the last line of defense against a broken mental health system.

2. Letter to the Moderators
NAMI teamed up with 29 health organizations to urge the Oct. 9 presidential debate moderators—CNN’s Anderson Cooper and ABC’s Martha Raddatz—to ask a question about mental health.

3. Vote for a mental health question
ABC and CNN agreed to consider the 30 most popular questions from PresidentialOpenQuestions.com. So if you have members who aren’t on Facebook or Twitter, ask them to go to this site and vote for this question about mental health.

HOSA-Future Health Professionals Announces New National Service Project with NAMI

HOSA (Health Occupations Students of America)-Future Health Professionals and the National Alliance on Mental Illness are pleased to announce a partnership which will focus on engaging youth around mental illness. The partnership was selected by delegates, representing more than 9,300 members, who voted at the 2016 International Leadership Conference in Nashville, TN, on June 23, 2016 to select NAMI as their new service project.

The HOSA National Service Project encourages HOSA members to provide support of a national health organization on a local, state and national level. Local chapters plan activities that include fundraising, community service projects and volunteer hours. HOSA will work directly with NAMI to help expand mental health education, awareness and support activities that help improve the lives of individuals and families affected by mental illness.

“HOSA-Future Health Professionals is proud to partner with NAMI with the goal of educating its 225,000 members on mental health issues and, at the same time, raising awareness in 4,500 HOSA chapters, while providing an avenue to take action and make a difference through a NAMI walk or another fundraising effort. HOSA is also appreciative to NAMI for making available additional learning opportunities for HOSA members through the internship and scholarship programs,” said Dr. Jim Koeninger, Executive Director of HOSA.

As part of this exciting partnership, NAMI will provide two great opportunities to HOSA members: an unpaid internship with the national NAMI organization for a HOSA member, as well as a registration scholarship to attend the NAMI Convention. These opportunities will provide additional avenues for HOSA members to learn more about the millions of people affected by mental illness. Information on the internship and convention scholarship will be shared on the HOSA website when made available.

“Mental health is an important topic for young adults because 1 in 5 are living with a mental health condition,” said Mary Giliberti, CEO of the National Alliance on Mental Illness. “NAMI is grateful for the opportunity to engage HOSA, a global student organization, which can help us have impact, together, in raising awareness of mental illness and letting young people know that resources are available and they do not have to walk the journey alone.”

About HOSA-Future Health Professionals
HOSA-Future Health Professionals (Health Occupations Students of America) is a global student organization that provides a unique program of leadership development, technical skills training and recognition exclusively for middle school, secondary, postsecondary and collegiate students enrolled in health and biomedical sciences. Recognized by the U.S. Department of Education, HOSA enhances the delivery of compassionate, quality health services to meet the needs of the health industry. For more information, go to hosa.org.

B4Stage4: Changing the Way We Think About Mental Health

When we think about cancer, heart disease, or diabetes, we don’t wait years to treat them. We start before Stage 4—we begin with prevention. When people are in the first stage of those diseases and are beginning to show signs or symptoms like a persistent cough, high blood pressure, or high blood sugar, we try immediately to reverse these symptoms. We don’t ignore them. In fact, we develop a plan of action to reverse and sometimes stop the progression of the disease. So why don’t we do the same for individuals who are dealing with potentially serious mental illness?

Stages of Mental Health Conditions

Stage 1—Mild Symptoms and Warning Signs
At Stage 1, a person begins to show symptoms of a mental health condition, but is still able to maintain the ability to function at home, work or school—although perhaps not as easily as before they started to show symptoms. Often there is a sense that something is “not right.”

Stage 2—Symptoms Increase in Frequency and Severity and Interfere with Life Activities and Roles
At Stage 2, it usually becomes obvious that something is wrong. A person’s symptoms may become stronger and last longer or new symptoms may start appearing on top of existing ones, creating something of a snowball effect. Performance at work or school will become more difficult, and a person may have trouble keeping up with family duties, social obligations or personal responsibilities.

Stage 3—Symptoms Worsen with Relapsing and Recurring Episodes Accompanied by Serious Disruption in Life Activities and Roles
At Stage 3, symptoms have continued to increase in severity, and many symptoms are often taking place at the same time. A person may feel as though they are losing control of their life and the ability to fill their roles at home, work or school.

Stage 4—Symptoms are Persistent and Severe and Have Jeopardized One's Life
By Stage 4, the combination of extreme, prolonged and persistent symptoms and impairment often results in development of other health conditions and has the potential to turn into a crisis event like unemployment, hospitalization, homelessness or even incarceration. In the worst cases, untreated mental illnesses can lead to loss of life an average of 25 years early.

Early Identification and Intervention
Catching mental health conditions early is known as Early Identification and Intervention. However, many times people may not realize that their symptoms are being caused by a mental health condition or feel ashamed to pursue help because of the stigma associated with mental illness. It’s up to all of us to know the signs and take action so that mental illnesses can be caught early and treated, and we can live up to our full potential. Even though mental illnesses may require intensive, long-term treatment and a lot of hard work at the later stages, people can and do recover and reclaim their lives.

One way to see if you may be experiencing symptoms of a mental health condition is to take a screening. Visit www.mhascreening.org to take a quick, confidential screening for a variety of mental health conditions including anxiety, depression, mood disorders or Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder. Use your screening results to start a conversation with your primary care provider, or a trusted friend or family member and begin to plan a course of action for addressing your mental health.

Remember, mental health conditions are not only common, they are treatable. There is a wide variety of treatment options for mental illnesses ranging from talk therapy to medication to peer support, and it may take some time for a person to find the right treatment or combination of treatments that works best for them. But when they do, the results can be truly amazing and life changing.

For more information about what you should know and what you can do at each stage, visit www.mentalhealthamerica.net/may.

Are You Fighting Stigma Or Causing It?
By Tom Wooten  |  https://www.bipolaradvantage.com/fighting-stigma-causing-stigma/

Individuals and organizations throughout the world are dedicated to the important work of fighting stigma that affects people with depression and bipolar disorder. Unfortunately, too many of them are replacing one type of stigma with another type that is making the situation worse. While advocating for others to stop judging those who suffer from the conditions, they are causing a self-stigma that increases and prolongs the suffering.

My friend Andy Behrman says, “If we want to eradicate stigma, we must first understand what stigma is: ignorance, fear & discrimination.” Of the hundreds of statements about stigma, this one captures it the best for me. Everything else is an offshoot of these three core problems.

There is certainly an incredible amount of ignorance surrounding depression and bipolar disorder. Even if we were able to clear up the many misperceptions about either condition, there is so much more we need to know to fully understand them. Depression and bipolar disorder affect every part of our lives (physical, mental, emotional, spiritual, social, and career/financial) and most people are aware of only a fraction of any of the parts.

We can be afraid of many things, but the worst fear is of the things we are ignorant of. The combination of fear and ignorance is so powerful that many people think fear is just another word for ignorance. They even have an acronym for it: FEAR – False Evidence Appearing Real. But when we understand fear and the role it plays in our condition, we can use it as a tool instead of letting it destroy us.

Fighting stigma usually means stigma from others. When most people talk about stigma, they are mostly concerned with discrimination and the role that ignorance and fear play in creating it. Discrimination holds us back from accomplishing what we are capable of because it robs us of opportunities that are available to others. We end up with a diminished life that is far below what should have been.

I learned about stigma soon after my first diagnosis with bipolar disorder. I began going to support groups to try to learn as much as I could about the condition and was told that I needed to cancel my projects because I was too sick to handle the stress. They said they had been there and could help, but it seems the only place they had been is one of ignorance and fear. They were so sure that bipolar could only result in a diminished life that they presented it as the only option.

I was fascinated by the way everyone saw bipolar, so I visited every group I could find to see if it was the norm for the bipolar community or just the beliefs of one particular group.

Unfortunately, after visiting every group I could find I could only conclude that “I can’t” is the mantra for almost all of them.

While visiting the group meetings, I saw so many new people leave during the first break that I decided to chase them down and ask why. Almost all of them said they were leaving because they did not want their lives to end up like what was being presented. They came to find hope for a better future, but went away thinking the only thing they could do is learn to accept a diminished life.

My observations were only reinforced when I expanded my search to include groups on the internet. While I did find a few who were advocating the “dangerous gifts” within the disorder, most were sharing their advice on how to survive while in the next sentence describing how the advice has not worked in their own lives. The biggest thing I noticed, though, was the prevalent concept that “survive” is the best we can hope for.

Things have changed dramatically since those early days. Various anti-stigma campaigns have focused the attention on the judgments of others and the recovery movement has solidified the idea that we can only thrive if we reduce the symptoms of mania and depression. We are beginning to see some acceptance of the idea that there are advantages to being bipolar, but the conversation is still dominated by those who insist it is impossible to be bipolar without disorder.

I understand the fear that people have about depression and mania getting out of control. Another crisis episode is the last thing they want to experience again. People who are bipolar, along with everyone around them, live in fear that the next recurrence will end in tragedy.

“I can’t” holds us back far more than the judgements of others.

It is the willful ignorance that amazes me. When we try to share our successes and offer a clear path for others to follow, many refuse to even consider the evidence we present. And that is the stigma that is causing the most harm. The stigma from outsiders is not holding people back nearly as much as those who diminish their own lives out of self-stigma.

We must understand that our beliefs about what we can achieve create the limits of our success. I know from teaching others that most of us can learn to increase our functionality, comfort, and value in an expanded range of intensity in both depression and mania. We do not need to remove bipolar to achieve our potential; we achieve our potential when we no longer see bipolar as an illness to overcome, but an advantage.

Leo Tolstoy said, “Everyone thinks of changing the world, but no one thinks of changing himself.” If you have not yet accomplished the outcomes described at http://www.bipolaradvantage.com, it is self-stigma that is holding you back and not the ignorance, fear, and discrimination of others.
