Worldox receives top ratings in prominent legal industry surveys

Worldox is named top DMS by the New York Law Journal and California-based legal publication, The Recorder

October 29, 2014 – Glen Rock, NJ. World Software Corporation is proud to announce that legal industry professionals chose Worldox as the best document management system (DMS) in recent surveys.

The New York Law Journal's 2014 Reader Rankings chose Worldox as #1 in the Best Document Management Software category. The New York Law Journal, a respected legal daily periodical established in 1888, has been conducting a Reader Rankings survey for the past five years.

The Recorder, a well-known California publication in the legal, business and technology sector, provided Worldox with top ranking in the Best Document Management Services category.

For more than 25 years, law firms have relied on Worldox to organize, standardize and store their documents securely, while being able to find and retrieve them with ease. Over the years, Worldox has added to its robust feature set and is available on devices such as iPads, iPhones, as well as alternate deployment methods such as the Cloud. Using Worldox, legal professionals can gain greater efficiency and have better collaboration, while ensuring their content is secure and auditable.

Ray Zwiefelhofer, President of World Software Corporation, said, "We would like to thank the legal professionals who voted for Worldox in these surveys. Whether used on a desktop or a mobile device, Worldox continues to improve efficiency, business processes and collaboration while protecting the confidentiality of critical documents. We are very proud to be recognized, and we will continue to enhance our DMS to meet increasing demands in the industry."
