20. Megagoods.com
21. Gamestop – Pick up cheap, but popular, games to resell on Craigslist or eBay
22. Going out of business sales – big stuff can be flipped locally, small stuff can go to Amazon
23. Clearance Racks – oh, how I love a clearance rack...
24. Garage sales
25. Thrift stores – go on the tag sale days for crazy deals
26. Craigslist – if you have nothing to do all day but stalk the Free section you can pick up some good stuff
27. Auctions (online & offline)
28. Flea markets – a lot of wholesalers work the flea market scene, you may be able to buy in bulk
29. Discount Bookstores – there is a huge market for books
30. Scanner Monkey – you are not going to want to share this site with anyone else
31. Grocery store – there is a whole subset of sellers focusing on this Amazon category
32. Retired direct sales consultants – they may not be able to sell that inventory on auction sites, but you can
33. Classified Ads
34. Estate Sales
35. Libraries – they often give books away for pennies on the dollar, or give them away free
36. Outlet Malls
37. Mass Retailers – Walmart, Target, etc. (shop those sales & clearance racks)
38. Your closets – we all have new stuff lying around somewhere that we bought as a gift we didn't give, received as a gift we didn't want or forgot we bought and purchased another. Sell it! And sell your gently used but unwanted items, too.
39. Buy on eBay to sell on Amazon and vice versa
40. Liquidation stores – these can be a little dirty, gross and have expired items on the shelves, shop smart. You can't sell expired merchandise.
41. Toy stores – evergreen not fad is the way to go here, scope out the clearance racks
42. Deal Blogs – subscribe to the big blogs that post in-store and online deals like Hip2Save. Rummage sales
43. IKEA – people can buy IKEA online but the shipping time is like three weeks. People would much rather pay a premium to get their goodies with free two-day Prime shipping.
44. Walgreens and CVS holiday clearance
45. Costco and Sam's Club
46. Dollar Tree
47. Black Friday sales!
48. Tuesday Morning – every FBA seller I have consulted loves this place. It's regional so that's a big plus for those who have one in the area. A lot of us don't and maybe we want some of their stuff.
49. BigLots
50. GottaDeal.com and SlickDeals forums. Keep in mind a lot of other sellers are probably in there, too. The offline bargains may be where the real deals are.
