Arts & Business Council celebrates largest class ever in ninth year of Arts Board Matching program
Twenty-two business professionals selected for 2020 cohort

Nashville, Tenn. — The Arts & Business Council of Greater Nashville proudly announces the selection of 22 business professionals to participate in its 2020 Arts Board Matching program. This year’s cohort is the largest in the program’s nine-year history of connecting the arts and business communities.

Participants in Arts Board Matching gain knowledge and skills necessary to be effective, engaged board members and are matched with local nonprofit arts organizations for potential board service. The training includes an overview of the arts and culture sector in Nashville as well as insights into board governance, fiduciary and financial responsibilities, fundraising, strategic planning, and arts advocacy. After completing the four monthly sessions, participants. The program culminates with a speed-dating-style matching event where participants meet with a variety of arts organizations to find their match.

By serving on a nonprofit board of directors, professionals learn to lead and influence people, take risks, resolve conflicts, and practice creative decision-making. They gain extensive exposure to the arts industry, opportunities to network with other professionals across industries, and work in a visible role building a thriving, sustainable, and more equitable creative community.
