A Decade of Rising Up

When we founded Rise Up in 2009, we were a small and scrappy team with a big vision to create change. We knew that girls, youth, and women had the power to transform their lives, communities, and countries, and we wanted to invest in their vision, strength, and solutions.

We began by investing in 38 leaders in Guatemala and Honduras and with an organizational budget of $250,000. In the past ten years, we’ve grown to a global network of over 640 Rise Up Leaders in 17 countries with an organizational budget of almost $5 million.

Our award-winning methodology has enabled more than a thousand girls to become leaders and speak out for their rights. We’ve also invested $3.9 million in Rise Up Leaders’ strategies to bring an end to child marriage, support girls to finish school, create economic opportunities for women, and so much more.

Continuous learning and evaluation is central to Rise Up’s success, and we are proud to have partnered with the Institute of International Education to conduct an external evaluation of our impacts over the past ten years. We are thrilled to share our lessons, impacts, and successes with you.

“I work in a community where the average age of marriage for girls is fourteen.

My mission is to create as many female leaders as I can by channeling opportunities and resources to rural girls and women. I am raising an army of girls and women equipped with knowledge, resources, and power who are ready to transform their lives and become social change agents.

Rise Up helped me to grow my work by training me in advocacy and leadership, connecting me with like-minded people, providing a seed grant for my work, and Rise Up has stayed by my side all along the way.”

With coaching and resources from Rise Up, our organization has strengthened its institutional capacity to support adolescent girls to advocate to ensure that key decision makers fulfill their mandate and invest resources in adolescent girls.

Giving real power to adolescent girls is not easy. Girls developing their own voices and thoughts with their own heads and hearts challenges a culture of silence, machismo, and patriarchy.”

“Before becoming a Rise Up Leader, I only had an idea. I got the necessary support, tools, and guidance to translate my idea into action. And what started as a project has become an organization.

I am working to solve the lack of access to affirmative and non-judgemental healthcare services for the LGBTQ+ community in India. The discrimination, social stigma, and homophobia faced by LGBTQ+ communities make them fearful of accessing healthcare.

My organization sensitizes health service providers on the needs and challenges of the community. These providers are then listed on our web platform where the community can find and review them. We are working at the intersection of health and technology to enable equitable healthcare for the LGBTQ+ community.”

Shubham Choudhary
INDIA, RISE UP LEADER SINCE 2017
2011: Guaranteed 2 million children in Liberia the right to attend school through the National Children's Law

2015: Protected the rights of 4 million girls in Malawi through a girl-centered campaign leading to a national ban on child marriage

2016: Expanded access to sexual health information in India through a web-based platform that reaches 1.5 million young people monthly

2017: Improved access to health services for 1.8 million girls in Guatemala through expansion of the national government strategy to prevent teen pregnancy

2018: Increased funding for disease prevention in Kenya, improving health outcomes for 4 million people

2019: Advanced reproductive justice among marginalized young people in the U.S. South through youth-led innovation

"I was brought up in a conservative Muslim society where access to reproductive health services for women is limited by religious and cultural misconceptions.

Being a Rise Up Leader has been a game changer for me in how I approach challenges around social issues.

I learned that addressing the challenges of women’s reproductive health rights cannot be achieved without addressing the root causes and policy gaps in our system. That was exactly what the Rise Up Leadership and Advocacy Accelerator taught me.

I now better understand that policies do not succeed or fail on their own merits; their progress depends upon the process of implementation and strategy adopted by advocates."

NIGERIA, RISE UP LEADER SINCE 2016
For ten years, the Rise Up team has been truly privileged to invest directly in hundreds of girls, youth, women, and allies – who in turn have created change for millions more. We are nothing less than awed by the strength and power of Rise Up Leaders, who continue to stand strong, raise their voices, and fight for justice and equity every day.

With the great success of our model globally, we knew it was time to bring Rise Up’s work home. In 2019, we began investing in leaders from California’s Central Valley and Bay Area to tackle some of our country’s toughest challenges. In 2020, we are thrilled to expand our work to South Africa and Brazil, as we also deepen our investments globally.

Rise Up has grown from a scrappy start-up to a renowned leader in the global movement for gender equity. We remain lean, efficient, and firmly rooted in our original vision from 2009 – investing in local leaders to launch their own solutions to the challenges we collectively face. As we look forward to the next decade and beyond, Rise Up will continue to grow our investments in girls, youth, and women, who we know will create impacts far beyond anything we can imagine.
