Noah Webster knew a lot of famous Americans. He even visited George Washington at his house called Mount Vernon! Letters between Noah Webster and George Washington still exist today. See if you can read their handwriting, then answer some questions about them!

Name _____________________________ Date________________
Name _____________________________ Date________________
Name _____________________________ Date________________
Name _____________________________ Date________________

1. What is the date on George Washington’s letter and where is he when he writes it?

2. Is George Washington responding to a letter written by Noah Webster? What makes you think that he might be?

3. George Washington mentions “husbandry,” “vegetable manure,” “buck-wheat,” and “crops” in his letter. What do you think he is writing about? (Hint: Look up the words in Webster’s dictionary!)

4. At the end of his letter, George Washington says that he must “hasten to conclude” his writing (i.e. he has to quickly finish). Why?

Bonus: When George Washington writes this letter, how long has he been President?
New York August 28, 1790

Sir,

I have received your letter dated the 12th of July, and accompanied with the volumes which you was pleased to present me for which I request you will accept my thanks.

Being on the eve of my departure from Virginia, it is impossible for me at present to do anything more on the subject of your letter, than just to make two or three remarks which have occurred in the moment of perusal. I think your train of reasoning in general good, and that the application of the principle to practical husbandry may be of considerable utility. This opinion is derived in part from facts; for your theory respecting vegetable manure has formed a part of my system of experiments for several years past. Buck-wheat, sowed expressly for the purpose of manure, and, when in its most luxuriant state, turned into the earth by ploughing, has been found beneficial to the crop, but not fully to answer my expectations. I cannot now give a detail of the causes which I conjecture operated in rendering the effect less visible than I had concluded it would be; and I fear I shall not have leisure myself to repeat the experiments. experiments.

I cannot suppose there would be anything improper in bringing your observations on so interesting a matter immediately to the consideration of some agricultural institution. But, in truth, I have so many objects which claim my attention that I must hasten to conclude, with sentiments of regard and esteem,

Sir,

Your most obedient Servt.

G. Washington

Noah Webster Esquire.
[Copy.] The original is on half a piece. The half bearing as I now have not been preserved.

Hartford Sept. 2, 1790

Sir,

Your Excellency's obliging part of the 28 firsts was duly received; and demands my particular acknowledgments. The approbation given to my theory of vegetable measures, by so experienced and judicious a cultivator of the earth as your Excellency, in a flattering circumstance; but I know the multiplicity of business which necessarily attends your high and important office, & therefore beg that but one moment's attention may be shown to me for that communication. The vanity of carrying on a correspondence with an elevated & esteemed character, would be despicable, forms no part of my motives. The com-

Noah Webster House & West Hartford Historical Society © 2008 Activity 5: Gr. 5 and up
I am not certain in my communication I made to a certain officer, and I wish it to remain so, not because I doubt the justice of principles advanced, but because any doctrines I might advance, under the signature of my name, would not meet with the consideration they might deserve. Setting aside my youth, the prejudices of many men are against me. I have written more than any other man of my age, in favor of the revolution of my country; at times my opinions have been unpopular. I wish now to attend solely to my profession, to be unknown in any other sphere of life. My sole view in writing to your excellency on the subject of agriculture, was to ascertain the justice of my principles. If just, to submit to your better judgment the mode of making the sentiments public. I have only to request that no personal animosity may ever take your mind from public concern, which deserves her respect.

I have the honor to be with great attachment

Yours respectfully,

Noah Webster jun.

The President of the U.S. States
5. What is the date on Noah Webster's letter and where is he when he writes it? How long did it take Noah to respond to George Washington's letter?

6. In his letter, Noah Webster refers to George Washington as "Your Excellency," a sign of respect. What other phrases does he use in his letter to show respect for the President?

7. Why does Noah Webster want his ideas about agriculture to remain a secret? Is he popular with everyone?

8. At the end of his letter, Noah Webster says "I neither deserve or expect it." What is he talking about? (Hint: Read the previous line of his letter.)

Bonus: How old is Noah Webster when he writes this letter? What do you think about a man of his age writing to the President of the United States?