Community Conscious Triangle Businesses Team up to Offer
Coworking Options for Socially-Focused, Underrepresented & Diverse
Entrepreneurs and Small Businesses

ReCity Network, Loading Dock Raleigh, and Provident1898 collaborate to create Triangle Coworking Alliance, an opportunity for cross-sector connections amongst their members.

RALEIGH-DURHAM, NC – Starting October 1, 2019, ReCity Network, Loading Dock Raleigh, and Provident1898 are piloting a passport option to enhance the membership offerings of each of their respective coworking and shared office spaces in order to create opportunities for cross-sector connections amongst their members. The Triangle Coworking Alliance passport allows coworking members of any of the 3 networks to use amenities and features of the other spaces at no additional cost. This gives members access to each of the 3 networks and 5 physical locations.

As socially focused and community-conscious entrepreneurial and nonprofit support organizations, ReCity Network, Loading Dock Raleigh, and Provident1898 will also offer members the opportunity to take part in their exclusive community programming, workshops, and events.

Since 2016, we've been focused on building relationships and sharing resources as a way to help socially-conscious organizations succeed in Durham," says ReCity's founding Executive Director, Rob Shields. "By partnering with Loading Dock Raleigh and Provident1898, we're able to continue our mission of growing the reach and impact of organizations doing good for our city, and to expand the connections between nonprofit, business and faith communities in the greater Triangle area to build a more just region."

Another significant point of emphasis for the passport network is uniting the coworking and collaborative community in the Triangle. Loading Dock Raleigh's Director of Community, Clark Rinehart, said: "We're only 25 miles away from each other, downtown to downtown, but oftentimes Raleigh and Durham feel worlds apart. It's a real shame and something that needs to be continually addressed in our community. We are better together and this alliance is an initial partnership that creates the kind of social and business fabric that this region desperately needs as we grow and thrive."

“In order to build a healthy entrepreneurial ecosystem in the Triangle, all parts must work well and work together,” says Carl Webb, Provident1898 co-founder. “This partnership brings together nonprofits, faith-based organizations, businesses and independent professionals to nurture a community that spans from technology, to services, to the arts, to social justice and more. This partnership is building towards making the Triangle the inclusive, equitable and successful economy and community we know it can be.”

The Triangle Coworking Alliance is designed to enhance the working options for local entrepreneurs, while giving them additional access to communities, resources and onramps to success. All three member communities in the alliance use Coworks, a software to empower coworking space owners and operators, through automation, analytics, and communication to optimize their business and enhance the community experience. Coworks is a Triangle-Based startup founded by Raleigh entrepreneurs and the team is excited to help facilitate this local partnership through their platform.

The program launches on October 1. For more information about it, visit: AllianceRDU.com
