Osiris Report

By
Qesankh Maa Kheperu
What you are about to read has taken me years to research. It started when I began looking at the world and wondering why it was in its current condition. I had a hard time accepting certain things as natural events that unfolded over the course of time—things like wars, racism, poverty, and the prevalence of cultural abnormalities.

What I discovered was shocking: In spite of what we have been conditioned to believe, all these things were orchestrated. Our very history and present condition was planned from the start. But the worst part was realizing that those whose job it was to expose this were in fact part of the problem. They were some of the very people assisting with the cover-up.

To explain this, let me start by setting the framework for this report. We first need to understand that thousands of years ago, it was climate adaption—not “evolution” (as greatly misunderstood)—that played an important role in developing humanity and civilization. For clarity, I will divide ancient man into two classifications (although I tend to shy away from categories). There was the development of people of color, or indigenous people, on the planet, and there was the development of white people. Science has proved that white people are predominately left brain and people of color predominately right brain. When looking at gender, women are predominately right brain and men left brain. (I will cover this more in depth a little later.)
I want to revisit the Egyptian story of Osiris and Isis, for it is germane to the topic at hand. Since the Egyptian story has undergone many revisions, I will pull from several accounts to make my point. (Readers are advised to research the story themselves for a greater understanding.) Osiris was said to be a great ruler of both upper and lower Egypt. The country prospered under his rule, and there was peace. However, he was tricked and killed by his evil brother, Set. Set then took the throne, and evil and poverty reigned. Set cut Osiris’s body into 14 pieces and scattered them throughout the land. Isis, Osiris’s wife, mourned over her loss. She searched the land, recovered all of Osiris’s pieces, and reassembled him. Along the way, she became pregnant through an immaculate conception and gave birth to Horus. Horus, aware of the fact that he was heir to the throne, consulted with Thoth, God of Wisdom, on how to win a battle with Set. Horus did fight Set and defeated him.

This story shows the wisdom of our ancient ancestors. Unlike the Bible, which is mistakenly taken for a history book, the story of Osiris and Isis is a metaphor for how the brain operates. Osiris, ruler of upper and lower Egypt, represents the integration of both hemispheres of the brain—and the example of how we should strive to be. Set represents the left hemisphere of the brain, while Thoth represents the right hemisphere. Horus represents the frontal lobe. Osiris being cut up into 14 pieces symbolizes how the world currently functions and how we are being manipulated. Our salvation lies in reassembling the pieces, which can only be done through the right brain or integrated whole-brain thinking. Now let’s try to understand the full scope of this metaphor and how it applies to our world today.
I’ve become increasingly disenchanted with the conspiracy-theory arena and the online spiritualists. The crux of my disaffection stems from the fact that they have become very myopic in their perspective and are thus failing to see things clearly.
Many criticize conspiracy theorists for being paranoid or taking things out of context. However, it is important that we have alternative viewpoints in this country. And in actuality, many of the conspiracies have over time proved to be based on truth. For example, imagine a slave in Africa telling his brothers and sisters that white men were coming to enslave them and take their country. Wouldn’t he have been seen as a conspiracy theorist and called crazy? Or what if a Jew had warned other Jews in Germany that the political party known as the Third Reich would eventually round up all Jews for mass extermination? He too would have been seen as crazy.

But let me get to my real point of contention. The spiritualists and the conspiracy theorists never seem to connect the dots but instead present only those facts that are convenient for them. They omit the arguments that would demonstrate their own biases. The reason for this is that when you’re a hammer, all you see are nails. In other words, the world suffers from left-brain thinking.

When you are polarized in the left brain, you tend to endlessly create labels, definitions, and separations of things. The left brain has trouble achieving depth of thinking and using a congregative thought process (the ability to see how things can connect). But it is not so much a problem of concrete, superficial connections but rather an inability to see how things connect in an abstract manner. For instance, the left brain divides people based on race and sex. It will immediately point to these differences. However, the right brain will say that although there may be external differences, everyone is connected because we share the same consciousness. Furthermore, there is only one consciousness funneled through many individual bodies having a similar experience.
The inability to make these connections is why Western civilization is so messed up. So when conspiracy theorists talk about the coming of a New World Order, they fail to see that for many people of color on the planet, that New World Order is already here. With the destruction of the high-culture indigenous civilizations of color, and their replacement by white Western thinking and culture, you can see that there is already in place a Big Brother type of global control. When these indigenous cultures were almost wiped off the face of the earth, the great religions they created based on right-brain thinking—where God was seen as existing within you rather than being some external omnipotent being—were replaced with Christianity, Islam, and Catholicism, and no one called it a “conspiracy.”

Many occultists and spiritualists practicing today never attribute their practices to the great African shamans. In fact, many well-known white Western spiritualists today are doing nothing more then regurgitating information based on Indian, Chinese, and African philosophy. And worse, they are dumbing it down, since Western people tend to want the benefits of enlightenment without the hard work of years of practice.

So what they have done is take the traditional practices of these indigenous cultures and fit them into the left-brain mode of thinking. What does this mean? Instead of meditation, trance induction, and communication with spirits and ancestors, you get lectures and intellectual masturbation. These so-called gurus get by with talking you to death by citing what sound like deep and profound words. But the reality is that these cultures of color lived a spiritual way of life and didn’t rely on verbal discourse through wordplay to woo people.
I’m still perplexed by the fact that these individuals can talk about spirituality or government conspiracies, and yet again and again fail to see how on a global level people of color are subject to oppression and hideous acts of violence. This silence is common among them.

Another example is the UFO community, which has become polluted with frauds and fakers, who have been welcomed into the UFO community without question. Many of these so-called abduction accounts are based on racism, which was even pointed out by UFO researcher Steven Greer. The stories tell of meeting blonde-haired and blue-eyed aliens. Come on! And the grey aliens even have a slave caste of dark-blue aliens with wide noses and big lips, who do all the hard labor. (If you think I am kidding, read Whitley Strieber’s book Communion.) Most of these so-called abductees are just looking for book and movie deals. But again, they are rarely called out for their blatant lies and racism.
Then there is the attempt to rewrite history to sell books and videos. These conspiracy theorists want to talk about ancient aliens creating the pyramids and altering our DNA to make us more warlike. This is pure “non-sense.” Again, because of their own racism, they cannot accept the fact that ancient indigenous cultures of color had advanced civilizations because they used whole-brain integrated thinking (which employs both the left and right hemispheres of the brain). So they concoct theories, such as suggesting the engineering feats of the pyramids or sphinx could only have been possible because aliens brought us their technology. They take it even further with the idea of Atlantis being this technologically advanced civilization unlike any other (again, left-brain thinking, as if morality doesn’t count for an advanced “civil-ization”). They are forgetting the many empires and nations existing in antiquity that were in fact “advanced.” It was the modern white historians who attempted to cover this information up. So Atlantis, if it ever existed, was one among many “advanced” civilizations.

It is discouraging to see that the very issues we face today in terms of a global conspiracy to destroy the right-brain way of life (or what might be termed the “female principle”), have been covered up or ignored by those who vehemently scream about conspiracy or who claim to be the most spiritual. The fact of the matter is the left-brain way of thinking has placed the planet in a hypnotic tunnel, preventing people from seeing what is right in front of their eyes. The New World Order for many people of color has been here for hundreds of years. Yet these conspiracy theorists keep talking as if it is still coming. They are an example of the adage that you cannot solve a problem using the same mind-set that created it. Thus they are caught in their own false thinking, going around in circles, and never coming out of the matrix to see how they have created their very own matrix.
It must be understood that our world is under total control by a ruling elite. This elite group practices satanic magic taken from the ancient peoples of Africa. The elite were responsible for the fall of Egypt, where civilization had reached its zenith. They purposely brought it down. Their first objective was to retard the world’s knowledge by destroying the library of Alexandria—the storehouse of advanced knowledge. Now, it is important to note that this library not only contained information on engineering, chemistry, and history, but also the world’s greatest occult knowledge.

With Egypt on the decline and in Roman hands, and the library of Alexandria burned to the ground, they moved on to their next objective. They needed to make sure that people of color, who operated on right-brain or integrated-brain thinking to create the world’s most advanced civilization, were either subjugated or exterminated. This was a twofold process. They first had to get the world to accept left-brain thinking—and then to hate anything associated with people of color.

Now that the ruling elite had control of occult knowledge and occult power, they could upload into the collective consciousness of humanity a virus known as white supremacy. This would create the idea that people of color were inferior. But the global elite knew that there was a psychic connection between all humans. So to ensure that people of color would not team up with their white fellows for a revolution, the ruling elite created the idea that white people were superior. They would give white people higher status and privilege. This would forever keep people of color oppressed and under control—without the ruling elite having a direct hand in it.
Our ancestors knew about the connection between all things thousands of years ago and referred to it as the Goddess Ma’at. Ma’at symbolized this interconnection—the idea that if one falls, we all fall. This idea was reintroduced in 1952, with the observation of macaque monkeys on the Japanese island of Koshima, and it was called the 100-Monkey Syndrome. These monkeys learned to wash sweet potatoes. Once a certain number of the monkeys learned this skill, the scientists discovered, much to their surprise, that the monkeys on nearby islands were doing the same. It was shocking because no one had shown these other groups of monkeys how to wash the potatoes in this unique way. It was then understood that once this behavior had been learned by a certain number of monkeys (100), it spread to others with no connection whatsoever.

This information would prove instrumental in establishing control without having to institute direct military or political measures. Think tanks like the Tavistock institutions pioneered behavior-control techniques that could be seeded into society through social engineering to create cultures of division, factions within factions, and endless infighting: race against race, gender against gender, religion against religion, political party against political party, nationality against nationality, and so on. This left-brain scheme would focus on myopic issues, and people would never see the whole or make the connections necessary to get to the truth of the matter.

This became the hallmark of how the ruling elite operated. By using the left brain, which separates and sees differences between things that have a natural connection, they would divide the people with erroneous titles, labels, definitions, races, genders, religions affiliations, and so forth. This would set the stage for the world’s peoples to fight against one another and never unite. The chief method for achieving this was put in place at the Council of Nicaea in 325 AD, when the Roman Emperor Constantine rewrote the Bible (which was a plagiarized version of the Egyptian story of Osiris and Isis).
There were two fundamental objectives achieved at this conference. The first was to move us from a worship of the female principle of Isis or Mary to a male-dominated worship of the work of Horus or Jesus. Again, this was the move from right-brain to left-brain thinking. We must also note that prior to this conference, the dominant cult of worship at the time was the stellar cult, which is symbolized by right-brain thinking. Afterward, a strange shift occurred, and the solar cult, or left brain, usurped the stellar cult.

The second act was to remove the idea of self-actualization—the idea that you are God or are one with God. Instead of coming to the realization that they were self-empowered and were unlimited and powerful beings, people now saw that they were sinners and had to look outside of themselves for God. God became an externalized entity. No longer empowered beings, people were now helpless and powerless. The implications and impact of this on humanity must be fully comprehended. The Council of Nicaea literally put in place a condition of mind control, fooling the masses of the planet into believing that they were children who needed outside intervention to help them with their lives. It would be equivalent to telling a lion that he is not king of the jungle but rather nothing more than a mouse.
But their biggest deception came in the form of making people believe that reality existed at all. The truth is we are reality generators—that is, reality does not exist apart from the observer. Your very thoughts and beliefs create the reality you see before you. And when mass media or institutions of so-called higher learning "educate" you, they are indoctrinating you into a mass, collective agreement. So when the populace agrees on a definition of what reality or the world is, they then bring it into this fourth-dimensional experience.

That means a Hitler or slavery can only exist if we accept definitions of what evil or oppression is. You cannot experience something unless you are the vibration of it. So for these things to exist, they have to be on the same level with you. This does not mean you are evil, but rather that you agree and accept, along with others, to have a certain collective experience we define as reality. The trick is to understand there really is no reality. There is just an experience. In fact, there is no outer world—no buildings, no sky, no stars. It’s all within you, being projected outward (or what you think is outward).

Furthermore, our very memories must be questioned. Why is this important? We know that time is a concept and does not really exist. In fact, the past, present, and future all exist simultaneously. There is no separation—separation is, again, the product of false left-brain thinking. In fact, everything exists within the same space you are occupying right now as you read this report. Your past lives are not really in the past but are taking place right now. You are drawing from those experiences. And since this is the case, you must also understand there in no linear time, and we each live in a different period of time. In other words, you may be in your present, but your friends, when not with you, are living in the past or future. It is only when you physically meet with them that the timelines align properly and you all experience one “now” moment.
I know this may sound far-out, but science has proved that time is experienced differently by those in an airplane or atop a tall building. And we must take this further to realize that each of us is living in our own time bubble. Your past is someone’s future that they exist in now. The best (though not the most accurate) term to describe this is “time dilation.”
And continuing with this thread of thought, we must also understand that our past, or the past we believe happened, is subject to manipulation. If the masses of people on the block, or a key number of group members, accept a belief, then it becomes a manifested reality—and that new reality actually changes the past and, with it, people’s memories. In essence, the new memory that materializes in the present rewrites the past so it conforms to the new belief and deletes any memory of that alternate past. Many are already experiencing this and have called it the “Mandela Effect.”

The Mandela Effect is named after Nelson Mandela. Many people remember Mandela dying back in the 1980s during his imprisonment. Yet there are people who recall Mandela being released from prison, ascending to the presidency of South Africa, and dying thereafter in 2013. Those conflicting memories of Mandela have caused people around the world to discover that their memories of certain events have changed. They have taken to the internet to document this and to connect with others who experience this phenomenon.

Of course, this all makes sense when you are indoctrinated into occult wisdom from ancient Africa. Those who control our planet literally have power over space and time. However, the real secret here is that actually, the power lies with the people and not the ruling elite. This is why we must align on truth to create a new reality—one not framed by their evil agenda.

Along those same lines, you must understand that you are a multidimensional being. That means you don’t just exist in the here and now but in many different alternate scenarios. In other words, there is a version of you who did get that promotion, one that was born to a rich family, one that did turn left on the street corner instead of turning right. Every possible variation or outcome exists. This is because God needs to experience itself. And since God is infinity without time or space, it must have infinite experiences through you—the vehicle for its consciousness.

This also means that everyone changes: none of us are ever the same person. The friend who disappears from your life no longer exists in this reality. And when friends seem to have changed or relationships seem to sour, it’s because these people are not the same. They are new individuals who have come into this new reality with you. Although they may look the same, they are actually, in a sense, doppelgangers. The same holds true for you. When you experience changes in your life, it is not that the circumstances have changed but that you’ve moved into an alternate Earth. You are moving and passing through different Earths millions of times in infinite “now” moments. (For more information about the Mandela Effect, visit http://www.projectilluminated.com.)
So the ruling elite uses this high-occult knowledge and pumps out mass media ideas to keep you disempowered (again, through left-brain thinking). This is why those in the conspiracy-theory arena who claim to know the truth are just as controlled as the masses. Mahatma Gandhi, who was supposed to be enlightened (hence the title Mahatma, meaning “holy” or “sage”), was no better than the average person. He tried to play the race card by rallying Indians against innocent African people, thus starting a class and race war. This was done in an attempt to garner favor from the white ruling class. Little has been published on this fact. Instead of teaching how we all are God-men and God-women, he sought to further instill ideas of impotence, thus making himself and others susceptible to downloading the racism virus with which the elite had infected the collective consciousness.

These ideas or viruses (of which there are many) in the collective consciousness now exist as intelligent spirits with survival instincts. A spirit or “egregore” can act independently, causing havoc on the planet. They feed fear, division, hate, and war. They possess the minds and hearts of people everywhere. Until we deal with this, all other measures to combat racism and division will fail. But this is extremely difficult, as the left brain will not allow most people to comprehend the metaphysical concepts of a collective psyche and the existence of negative spirits on this level.
And with that said, we must also recognize that there are spirits or interdimensional beings who are benevolent. These spirits operate on a different plane and are ready to assist us. They are also ready to impart special knowledge. However, we cannot see them or interact with them until we first recognize their existence and learn to vibrate at a similar frequency. Many have experienced these entities firsthand through the use of psychedelic drugs such as DMT and Ayahuasca. People have reported that after taking these drugs, they have made contact with intelligent beings and have undergone personal life-changing transformations—the most important of which is understanding the unity of all things.

The elite have already contacted negative entities and received information to help advance their causes. But there are spirits—sometimes called “geni” meaning “genie” or “genius”—that govern special skills that can be given to humans. They have advanced technology, cures for diseases, and powerful magical knowledge. (One should note that because of mind programming, no one has a problem talking about angels, but when we broach the subject of spirits, or geni, everyone gets bent out of shape.)

These spirits are trying to contact us through what we call "omens." Yet we are taught to ignore these things, and because of that, our communication with the spirit world has been closed off. When Isis went to retrieve the pieces of her husband, Osiris, she had to travel in the underworld and in the ocean. This is symbolic of acquiring knowledge from the subconscious mind—or spirit realm—which is accessible via the right brain.
In Conclusion

For the world to move out of its darkness and extreme level of ignorance, we must move from left-brain thinking to the right-brain integrated thought process of our ancient ancestors. The ruling elite is using occult powers on us, and we will not be truly free until we realize our own power and start to use it actively. Currently, the popular religions are used as control devices to keep us away from the truth. Isis, who represents the right brain, reassembled the pieces of Osiris, which hints at an integrated thought process and the fact that truth is not found in the pieces—rather, it is found in a holistic view, based on all parts playing a vital role in the support of the whole. Therefore, there is an interdependence and interrelationship between all things in the universe, big and small.

As I indicated with the 100-Monkey Syndrome, when one person embarks on a behavioral change, that new idea gets uploaded to the collective consciousness and then, like a virus, affects many people far and wide. I hope this report has helped you understand why our world is so crazy. But more importantly, I hope it has empowered you to move toward your goals in life.

Peace be with you on your new journey.

Qesankh Maa Kheperu is North America’s leading Kamitic (Egyptian) spiritualist and life coach. For over 20 years he has studied and practiced what was once known as the Egyptian Mystery system of Ausar and Auset. Visit his website at www.qesankhmaakheperu.com