In parting, I wish to again impress two important rules upon you, and these are:

(1) Practice, practice, practice, until you have every detail of the instruction so well learned, and so fixed by habit, that you can and will use them instinctively, just as you now walk, or breathe, or speak.

(2) Keep your own secrets, and do not dissipate and scatter your influence by hinting of your secrets of your power over others. There are many good reasons for this rule - some reasons that do not appear on the surface, by the way. Remember the old Italian proverb: "Il bocca chiusa, non c'entra mosca" - that is to say: "Into the closed mouth, no flies enter." Heed the spirit of the proverb.

Au revoir, my magnetic friends - we shall meet again, in due time.
