

NEW PEACE SYMBOL

From Peace Matters Now

The traditional Peace Symbol actually houses a nuclear armament. Did you notice? Perhaps it is a time for change.

If you turn the traditional Peace Symbol upside down, it illustrates a person cheering.

When I served on the Oregon Network for Compassionate Communication (ORNCC.org), we board members would raise our arms in celebration for each decision or action completed. This collective action inspired me to see the Peace Symbol in a new way, upside down, like above.

Also notable is that this encircled version of the 11th Century Rune ~ Algin ~ means protection. Certainly, we all need this in our world.