Dedicated Thoracic Education for the Busy Clinician

The Thoracic Anesthesia Symposium focuses entirely on thoracic anesthesia for academic and private practitioners. There have been many recent advances in anesthesia for noncardiac thoracic surgery—this year's meeting will cover topics such as dilemmas with airway management, right heart failure, surgical innovations, and risk factors of geriatric patients. This one-day event has limited registration to maximize interaction between attendees and faculty through panel discussions, case presentations, hands-on workshops, pro-con debates, and more!

Save the date and look forward to

- networking with more than 150 of your colleagues and peers
- a focus on airway management and new frontiers in lung cancer surgery
- a new interactive session format to enhance your educational experience
- hands-on workshops (included in your registration!)
- a town hall to discuss your questions with experts in the field
- research and difficult case presentations
- connecting industry partners with the newest airway and ventilation tools
- problem-based learning discussions addressing hot topics in thoracic anesthesiology
- earning nearly 10 hours of continuing medical education (CME).
