the department went into the COVID-19 crisis with two main points, one being the care and wellbeing of the employees, and secondly, protecting the stock of PPEs that the department started with. The department went into COVID-19 with an excellent supply of N-95 masks, however they are now at about a four-day supply of N-95s in the county. The department is starting on Plan C of using other equipment when the N-95s are used up. There has been a drop in regular EMS calls that the agency tends to see this time of year, as well as drop in motor vehicle crashes as well in Redington Shores. Many residents in the Town of Redington Shores helped with donating PPE equipment at the site set-up at Walsingham Park.

Chief Swann spoke about the solid relationship with Chief Burford and with Chief Burton from the Pinellas Suncoast Fire Rescue District.

The week of the March 23rd -27th there was a total of only 22 inspections, seven of which were mechanical, electrical, or plumbing, which can only be performed by Bruce Cooper. The rest of the inspections from March 23rd -27th were performed by Joseph Walker. Mayor Henderson went onto state that for the week of March 30th- April 3rd had 13 inspections, seven of which were done by Bruce and six were done by Joseph. For the current week of April 6th- April 8th had only five inspections, two of which were done by Bruce visiting the site and the other three were approved by Bruce via letter. The letter submission is being done in place of actual site visits to help with the COVID-19 pandemic. Mayor Henderson requested that due to finances the Town should layoff Joseph Walker.

Mayor Henderson opened to the Commission the idea of laying off Joseph Walker. Commissioner Drumm gave disagreement on laying off Joseph Walker, stating his pay was already approved in the budget for the year and stated his disapproval of the idea of laying off a seasoned employee. Mayor Henderson stated that Joseph had 15 months to get the licenses needed. Commissioner Neal stated his disapproval for the idea, stating that the town has an employee within a year of a half retiring, as well as stating that it is premature to do so, but possibly the Commission can reevaluate the idea in two months. Discussion ensued about the stimulus money being given out for those who are unemployed. Commissioner Blackburn asked about the amount of inspections that Joseph usually does. Mayor Henderson stated that before January 2019 he was doing all the inspections. A brief history was given to Commissioner Blackburn about the situation involving inspections and Joseph Walker’s licenses.

Commissioner Robinson mentioned concern about the history of license issues for Joseph Walker. There was no status update on the situation after it came to light. There was no permit in town files, but the owner showed a permit from 1975 that the county held. Building Official Cooper sent the Commission drawings and pictures of where the dock would be and the configuration of the waterway. After doing some research it was found that the surroundings homes all seem to have docks. The owners would like to have a new dock that goes out about 26” from the seawall, which would be adjacent to the town property. This would make it two feet from the seawall. The owner is proposing four tie poles to have a boatlift installed. Building Official opened to the Commission the discussion of approving the variance. Commissioner Drumm mentioned to the commission that if this is approved, the town would lose 20 feet from the seawall. Discussion took place about the length of the dock to where the town seawall is. Attorney Denhardt stated that a variance is only good for one year. Building Official Cooper stated that the best way to approve the variance is to only approve the dock and to have the resident come back for a boat lift variance. Commissioner Neal motioned to pass the variance application as it stands, to include the tie poles, Commissioner Blackburn seconded.
