The Wy'east Post-Baccalaureate Pathway is intended for American Indians and Alaska Natives who are committed to a career in medicine. The Pathway prepares scholars to excel as medical students and physicians.

Three medical schools admit scholars to the Wy'east Pathway.

Wy'east Scholars will be accepted into their admitting school upon successful completion of the pathway and meeting their admitting school’s matriculation requirements.

Wy'east Pathway Highlights

“We help our scholars realize their full potential. We value the Indigenous knowledge they bring.”

– Dr. Allison Empey, Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde Director of Wy'east

The 10-month Pathway includes:

- Immersion in an Indigenous learning community
- Rigorous coursework in biomedical sciences, population health, and anatomy
- Clinical observation and research experience
- A monthly stipend to help offset living expenses
- Intensive MCAT preparation
- No tuition or fees

*Coursework activities may be affected by COVID-19 restrictions
Wy'east Pathway Eligibility

- Citizen or descendant of a federally recognized American Indian or Alaska Native Tribe
- Minimum AMCAS GPA of 2.6-2.8 (requirement varies by admitting medical school)
