US stock and bond markets again gained ground in July as most states continued with their reopening plans. Although daily positive COVID-19 cases and resulting hospitalizations continue to rise, the number of daily deaths is well below its prior peak. Despite US GDP falling in the second quarter by an annualized rate of 32.9% (the largest decline in GDP since the Second World War), investors focused on positive economic news including improving US retail sales, small business revenue, and employment. The S&P 500 gained 5.6% in July and the tech-heavy Nasdaq Composite was up 6.8% for the month. Year-to-date the S&P 500 is now up 2.4%. Growth stocks once again outperformed value stocks in July with Large Cap Growth up almost 7.6% for the month.

Despite the recent stock market gains, we are not confident that the period of stock market volatility is over. So far, the policy responses from Central Banks and Governments have been sizeable and supportive of consumers, however any real recovery can only occur if increased economic activity does not result in rising positive cases. Given the high uncertainty around the outlook for the virus, and the timeline of any potential vaccine, we continue to recommend that investors remain prudent and expect further volatility in the near term. With the uncertain outlook so dictated by the virus – but also given the potential for a vaccine – we continue to believe it makes sense to aim for balanced and well-diversified portfolios. The best way to protect from long-term investment declines is to diversify one's investments across multiple, uncorrelated asset classes and investment strategies. Attempting to "time the market" is seldom a successful strategy and we would not recommend you do so.

MARKET CHARACTERISTICS

Stock market volatility [§]	Above Average (monthly avg. = 27, month end = 24)
Business Cycle Phase	Mid/Late recession
Dominant Investment Style (active vs. passive)	Mixed

[§] In general, the higher the market volatility (as measured by the CBOE Volatility Index or VIX), the more the market is driven by investor emotions (greed and fear). Lower market volatility indicates a market environment based on fundamentals (economic growth, corporate earnings, etc.). The long-term average for the VIX is 20, 30 is considered high, 40 very high, and 50+ extreme.

Footnotes:

- ¹ Investment return numbers for the Radius 100 and Radius 60 reflect the (unaudited) performance of actual portfolios that have been invested since 1/2001. For the period prior to its inception date, the returns for the Radius 20 are calculated using the actual returns from the Radius 100 and 60.
- ² Returns for the Index portfolio prior to 8/2014, the Balanced Risk Basic and the Balanced Risk Plus prior to 4/2015, and the Balanced Risk Max portfolio prior to 11/2019 are back-tested and not actual returns of accounts managed by Radius. Back-tested (simulated) performance results have certain inherent limitations. Unlike an actual performance record, simulated results do not represent actual trading. Also, since the trades have not actually been executed, the results may have under- or over-compensated for the impact, if any, of certain market factors, such as lack of liquidity. Simulated investment strategies in general are also subject to the fact that they are designed with the benefit of hindsight. No representation is being made that any account will or is likely to achieve profits or losses similar to those shown.
- ³ The Balanced Risk Plus and Max portfolios invest part of their assets in leveraged ETFs. These funds seek daily investment results – before fees and expenses – that are triple the return of stock (S&P 500, NASDAQ, Russell 2000), bond (20+ Year Treasury Bond), commodity (gold, oil), and real estate market indices. Using these leveraged ETFs results in greater volatility and a greater risk of loss.
