“I treat each patient as if he or she were a member of my own family—a mother, father, sister or brother. To me, this means seeing each patient as soon as possible, returning calls in a timely manner, and thoroughly explaining test results. I like to educate my patients.”

Dr. Tsai is particularly interested in Alzheimer’s disease, both in treating Alzheimer’s patients and the family members who care for them. He is affiliated with William R. Shankle, M.D., a world-renowned expert on Alzheimer’s disease at the University of California, Irvine. Dr. Tsai’s clinical interests also include heart disease and diabetes.

Professional Qualifications

Board-certified in internal medicine, Dr. Tsai completed his residency training at New York Hospital Medical Center of Queens, in Flushing, and at Memorial Sloane Kettering Cancer Center, in New York City. Dr. Tsai also volunteered with the New York Free Clinic in Queens. During medical school he was a member of an honor society.

Currently, Dr. Tsai is an assistant clinical professor for the University of California, Irvine College of Medicine. He also speaks Mandarin, Taiwanese and Cantonese.

Personal Interests

Away from his practice, Dr. Tsai enjoys playing golf. He is also avidly interested in books and programs about history. A classically trained violinist, Dr. Tsai performs in a church orchestra every Christmas. He has performed a variety of classical pieces, including Handel’s Messiah.
