Bill Zeros in On Arming MassArt Campus Police

“I don’t think we should be playing games with public safety,” Sen. Paul Feeney said.

By Matt Murphy State House News Service

BOSTON - With incidents of campus violence becoming all too common at American colleges, the question of whether to put firearms in the hands of campus police at the Massachusetts College of Art and Design came before trustees in February. The issue had been a controversial topic at the school for years, and despite a number of safety reports clearly recommending that campus police be given firearms many students and community members remained vocally opposed.

When the time came for the vote, the answer from President David Nelson and the board was equally clear. No guns. That's why last summer Sen. Paul Feeney, a Foxboro Democrat, filed a bill that would allow the Board of Higher Education to overrule an individual board and require the issuance of firearms and other safety equipment to campus police officers at any state college, community college or public university.

Feeney had heard the case made by the union representing campus police, and agreed that something as serious as public safety on college campuses should not be left to the politics of a particular school. The bill (S 2431) will finally get a hearing next week before the Joint Committee on Public Safety, which is co-chaired by one of the bill’s co-sponsors, Rep. Harold Naughton Jr., D-Clinton.

“It’s unconscionable to me that with the issues that we have surrounding public safety, especially around campuses, that we would have duly sworn officers that are unarmed. It just doesn’t sit right with me,” Feeney said in an interview with the News Service.

On a campus nestled in the city and surrounded by other private institutions like Northeastern University, Simmons University and Wentworth Institute of Technology, MassArt is the only four-year public college in Massachusetts that does not have armed security. In the event of an emergency, the school relies on the Boston Police Department to be its first responder. While the bill would apply broadly to all public colleges and universities, the clear target of the legislation is the administration of MassArt, which has been at odds with the union representing campus security over the issue of firearms.

Jim Durkin, the legislative director for the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees Council 93, said the lack of ability to carry a firearm has led to considerable turnover among MassArt police who do not feel like they can adequately protect themselves or students.

The union argues that campus police are in a much better position to respond to an active shooter or other threat on campus because of their familiarity with facilities. “The absurdity of this can be summed up by knowing that when they have an active shooter drill they have their officers sheltering in place,” Durkin said.

Durkin's union represents over 200 campus security officers at state colleges and universities around the state, including nearly a dozen officers on the MassArt campus. All campus police have gone through the State Police academy and are deputized as special state police officers, with licenses to carry firearms, according to Durkin.

Feeney's bill was filed in September, and admitted in November when both the House and Senate referred the legislation to the Joint Committee on Higher Education. Without holding a hearing, that committee this week discharged the bill to the Joint Committee on Public Safety, which promptly scheduled a hearing for Feb. 3.

Feeney said he decided to get involved in this issue, despite MassArt falling well outside his district, after a conversation with union leaders. Naughton and Senate Minority Leader Bruce Tarr joined Feeney to co-sponsor the bill. “We looked at it and figured the best solution was to allow the board of higher ed to make a unilateral decision when it comes to public safety,” Feeney said.

Feeney said he doesn’t support allowing students, faculty or administrative to carry firearms. “Let’s give the firearms to the people we pay to protect the students and the campus, and those are the campus police officers. It’s unfortunate that we have to fix this legislatively, but it appears that we do,” Feeney said.

Higher Education Commissioner Carlos Santiago declined to comment on the legislation, but a spokeswoman for the department shared a report produced for the board in 2016 by a group of security consultants, including former assistant secretary of Homeland Security Juliette Kayyem, that recommended the arming of campus police.

A separate Campus Safety Work Group at MassArt reached a similar conclusion in 2018, voting unanimously in favor of arming campus police and providing active-shooter training for the campus community. The report produced by the group cited the 2016 Board of Higher Education report, as well as reports produced in 2011 by Good Harbor Security Assessment and in 2014 by the consulting firm Azdell-Morgan that also strongly recommended that the college switch to armed police. The group acknowledged in its final report that not only was MassArt the only four-year state college that remained unarmed, but stated that retaining officers had been difficult and the turnover costs of training new officers when others resign has cost “a great deal of time and money.” It also stated that then-Boston Police Commissioner William Evans supported arming MassArt college police officers.

Current Commissioner William Gross’s office did not respond to a request for comment on the Feeney bill or MassArt’s position of not arming campus police, and City Hall said Mayor Marty Walsh has not weighed in on the issue.

Following a February vote of the MassArt board not to arm campus police, the union representing the officers took a vote of no confidence in Nelson. “This action was taken in response to your opposition to arming our police officers, to what we view as a reckless disregard for the safety of the students, staff, and most importantly, the police officers at the Massachusetts College of Art,” president of AFSCME Local 1067 Sheila Kearns wrote. Kearns also faulted Nelson for what the union considered to be his failure to defend campus officers in the face of sharp criticism from students.

Nelson’s office did not respond to a request for comment. “Every campus has a unique feel. Every school has the authority to run the school as they see fit. But I think there’s a clear line when it comes to public safety, and those issues can become politicized,” Feeney said. Feeney said he believes opposition “comes from a good place,” but concluded “I fear that if it’s left up to each unique campus board that it becomes politicized, subject to pressure and I don’t think we should be playing games with public safety.”
Attention Stewards:

Make sure that you are notified of new hires. If necessary, request new hires from HR monthly. You are allowed one (1) hour to meet with each new hire.

AFSCME Strong cards are to be submitted to Payroll, HR, and the Union.

Please see the adjoining page for specific instructions.
• Make a plan within your local to speak with each member – spread the work out, you should get volunteers to assist. The members will be more engaged in the local if we get them talking with each other on a local level.

• First, approach each individual member and get them to recommit to the union. Ask them if they would be willing to help by getting active at work. Check the box where they are willing to do something. Keep this information for your records. (top section)

• Second, have the member fill out the Membership Application (middle section) Make sure the card is signed. And, cell phone and personal email are important.

• Third, explain to the member how important it is to be involved politically Make sure you tell the member that dues money can’t be spent on politics. That’s why we need them to contribute to PEOPLE. It’s job security for them to have someone lobbying for their best interests.

• When you complete this process you can give the original cards to your Council 93 Staff Representative when they are on campus or at Executive Board Meetings or mail them to Brittany Alexander, 8 Beacon Street, 8th Floor Boston, MA 02108. Make a copy and submit to both HR and Payroll. Keep a copy for your local files, In between meetings/mailings a scanned copy can be e-mailed to Brittany Alexander at balexander@afscme93.org.

• You do not have to wait until you get cards from all the members; get them to Council 93 staff when you receive them. Please send the whole card, even if only the middle section has been filled out. Do not perforate or cut the card.

• FOR NEW MEMBERS: Original card goes to Council 93 – Copy to HR and Payroll.

• PEOPLE – When a member fills out the PEOPLE card, make sure they have selected a deduction amount and signed the card. Make a copy of the card for local records.

• CAMPUS – Make sure that the name of your college/university is on the card
If you have not recommitted to the Union, we need your card!

NOTE: Form 30's are ONLY to be used for desk audits when applying, or if you are being considered for a reclassification!

The Employee Relations Division of the Board of Regents has received several complaints relative to the use of "Form 30's". Please be advised that it is the position of this office that "Form 30's" are to be used as an "information gathering" tool and should not be used to replace existing job specifications either in postings or advertisements.

In the 1983-1986 Collective Bargaining Agreement, we have agreed with AFSCME that the "classification structure and the accompanying job specifications have been created by the Commonwealth through its Department of Personnel Administration for the purposes of describing the duties and responsibilities of each job title." (Article 23, Section 1.C.).

However, as you are aware, these job specifications are descriptive rather than restrictive and employees may be assigned incidental, related or emergency duties.

If you have any questions in this regard please contact me.

Presidents Day 2020

Presidents Day is an American holiday celebrated on the third Monday in February; Presidents Day 2020 occurs on Monday, February 17. Originally established in 1885 in recognition of President George Washington, the holiday became popularly known as Presidents Day after it was moved as part of 1971's Uniform Monday Holiday Act, an attempt to create more three-day weekends for the nation's workers. While several states still have individual holidays honoring the birthdays of Washington, Abraham Lincoln and other figures, Presidents Day is now popularly viewed as a day to celebrate all U.S. presidents, past and present.

Washington's Birthday

The story of Presidents Day date begins in 1800. Following the death of George Washington in 1799, his February 22 birthday became a perennial day of remembrance.

At the time, Washington was venerated as the most important figure in American history, and events like the 1832 centennial of his birth and the start of construction of the Washington Monument in 1848 were cause for national celebration.

While Washington's Birthday was an unofficial observance for most of the 1800s, it was not until the late 1870s that it became a federal holiday. Senator Steven Wallace Dorsey of Arkansas was the first to propose the measure, and in 1879 President Rutherford B. Hayes signed it into law.

The holiday initially only applied to the District of Columbia, but in 1885 it was expanded to the whole country. At the time, Washington's Birthday joined four other nationally recognized federal bank holidays—Christmas Day, New Year’s Day, the Fourth of July and Thanksgiving—and was the first to celebrate the life of an individual American. Martin Luther King Jr. Day, signed into law in 1983, was the second.
Weingarten Rights!

Weingarten Rights. Know them, Use them! (SAVE THIS INFORMATION)

If you are unsure if they apply, ask for them anyway. Better to be safe than sorry.

Know your rights! Please read below!

Employee Rights in “Weingarten” Meetings – Know Them, Use Them!

Beware that management is not obligated to inform employees of their Weingarten rights — employees must ask for them. Unlike Miranda rights — where police are required to tell a suspect of his/her right to an attorney, etc. — employees must ask for their Weingarten rights.

Weingarten — State the following:
“If the discussion in this meeting could in any way lead to my being disciplined or terminated or impact on my personal working conditions, I request that my steward, local officer or union representative be present. Without union representation, I choose not to answer any further questions at this time. This is my right under a Supreme Court decision called Weingarten”.

Weingarten rights apply during investigatory interviews when a supervisor questions an employee to obtain information that could be used as grounds for discipline for either you or a colleague. When an employee believes such a meeting may lead to discipline, he/she has the right to request union representation.

These basic Weingarten rights stem from a Supreme Court’s decision.

• The employee must request representation before or during the meeting.
  • After an employee makes the request, the supervisor has these choices:
    • grant the request and wait for the union representative’s arrival;
    • deny the request and end the meeting immediately; or
  • give the employee the choice of either ending the meeting or continuing without representation.

(Never, ever, ever, continue without representation! EVER!)

If the supervisor denies the request and continues to ask questions, the employee has a right to refuse to answer! In addition, the supervisor is committing an unfair labor practice.

As always, call your Chief Steward if you have questions or if you are unsure!

Please note: Do NOT think that you are bothering your steward if you have a question or a problem with your supervisor and/or management. That is what we are here for. Table officer contact information is on the front cover.
