

AUTONOMOUS HUMANITY Rodolfo de Oliveira

The Natural Moral Law imprinted on every human heart is like the divine seed connecting us with ourselves, our neighbor and everything else in the cosmos. We are part of a great living and dynamic system with consciousness expansion proportional to our ability to apprehend the Truth. In this way, our competence to manage a certain portion of the overall system (what may perhaps be understood as our "dharma") is directly proportional to our ability to apprehend and exercise the Truth at ever higher levels.

Interestingly, Allan Kardec, founder of spiritism, made seemingly similar considerations. Presuming the establishment of a new social order through a deeper collective perception of the Natural Moral Law, Kardec expresses himself as follows:

“(…) It will also be moral progress, seconded here by the progress of intelligence, that will unite humankind in the same belief, established on eternal truths, not subject to debate and, for this very reason, accepted by all. The unity of belief will be the most powerful bond, the most solid foundation of universal brotherhood, broken at all times by the religious antagonisms that divide people and families, which make it possible to see in the other enemies we must flee from, fight with or exterminate, in place of brothers that we should love.” (Kardec, Revista Espírita: Jornal de Estudos Psicológicos, 1866)

As Kardec, many others have realized and announced the emergence of a new planetary reality. We expect that all of us will be tested, sooner or later, for the degree of awakening we have attained and the loyalty to moral acquisitions we maintain (understand this phrase as perception and expression of the Natural Moral Law), even in the face of injustice and death. Mature and balanced spirits do not bend to injustice but are loyal to their own conscience. We believe this to be the key for understanding the moral behavior of the great souls who have walked the Earth and whom, for the most part, have suffered the natural consequences of fidelity to their autonomy.

“Do not think my reader and friend that a readjustment of such proportions will be completed in just a few decades. (...) the third millennium will demand a good deal of work and reconstruction. This endeavor will encompass everything, from the financial and government regime to the life models of large cities and world’s metropolises, going through a broad process of educating the population for community life, cultivating respect for the environment, nature and the human being. An operation of this magnitude does not take place in a moment. We are at the beginning of a worldwide movement of re-urbanization, relocation, selection and re-education of the spirits on Earth.” [Message from the Spirit Ângelo Inácio psychographed by the medium Robson Pinheiro.] (Pinheiro, 2012)

This text is, therefore, a preannouncement of the dawn of the new times amid so many others. It is also an invitation to join forces for the co-creation of a new autonomous and exoconscious reality.
