

EMERGING SECURITY CHALLENGES IN SOUTH ASIA - ONLINE EDITION

In partnership with O.P. Jindal Global University

AUGUST 8-10

South Asia is a region marked by numerous armed conflicts, border disputes and inter-state hostilities. For decades, security scholarship and policymaking in the region has been dominated by a focus on these traditional or 'hard' security issues that are focused primarily on security of the state and its apparatus. Yet, South Asia is also home to the largest number of poor and hungry people in the world. It is also one of the most vulnerable regions in the world to the impacts of climate change, with hundreds of millions of South Asians facing serious threats to their ways of life, livelihoods, and physical survival. How policymakers respond to these emerging security challenges in South Asia will determine the fate of a vast swathe of humanity that has implications beyond South Asia's borders.
