Flying Dust First Nation - Solid Waste Management Feasibility Study Update - April 2021

The Band Council, Lands & Resources Department, and the Public Works Department are working with PINTER & Associates Ltd. (PINTER) to update our Solid Waste Management Feasibility Study for Flying Dust First Nation. The study assesses Solid Waste management on Flying Dust First Nation and analyzes potential options for improved solid waste management into the future.

Solid waste can pollute the land, water, and air if not properly disposed of. We believe that the community including youth and elders are keen observers, careful listeners, and that you care about protecting and preserving your lands for future generations.

We would like to hear your thoughts on how solid waste is currently managed at Flying Dust. You are encouraged to share any comments, current issues or concerns you think may improve solid waste management at Flying Dust. We hope you will share your knowledge about any pollution you have seen, heard about from Elders, or remember while you have traveled on Flying Dust lands. You may want to ask your parents/grandparents/Elders/family about pollution or garbage sites that may have existed in the past as well. We hope you will share your knowledge with us so together we can protect and preserve the health and wellbeing of Flying Dust lands and our people.

Please share other ideas you may have about solid waste in addition to the 6 questions below.
