The SURGIR Foundation addresses women subjugated by criminal tradition; as such, the SURGIR Foundation seeks to be the witness of women's suffering and the tool for their fight.

SURGIR is a Swiss-based Foundation, located in Lausanne and established according to article 80 of the Civil Code. It calls upon a Foundation Council (made up of five members) and is placed under the monitoring authority of the County of Vaud. It is run by a small team of employees and volunteers, as well as by a dozen employees in targeted countries. All those committed to the SURGIR Foundation are conscious of the immensity of the task before them and of the necessity to invest their time, but also a part of their personal comfort, for this cause.

SURGIR is a women’s advocacy organization, and is endowed at the United Nations and has experience serving communities all over the Middle East including Jordan, Palestine, and Afghanistan.'

Solidarity is Global Institute - Jordan (SIGI - Jo) has partnered with the SURGIR Foundation since 2003 years, as they have similar visions and goals on human rights in general and women’s rights in particular. We have teamed up over the years to aid Syrian refugee women in Jordan and adolescent boys and girls in school’s awareness raising as well as campaigning against early and forced marriages, and providing direct and counselling assistance for victims of child marriage and GBV.
