Runnymede Station is accessible – Easier Access Project Update

Runnymede Station is the newest TTC subway station to become accessible. Three new elevators connecting the street to concourse and subway platforms levels are now open for customer use.

Other minor project related work will continue at the station.

Public Art:

Art is an important component of major station upgrades. As a part of this station upgrade work, Elicser Elliott's public art concept, "Anonymous Somebody" was selected by an art jury and it was installed at Runnymede Station in 2019.

"Anonymous Somebody" captures the snippets of our bustling Bloor West Village lives while standing still. The artworks aim to communicate the story of individual spirit as fresh and relevant to the metabolism of the neighbourhood. The images work as an anchor to a thought or memory for the person viewing it - to commemorate, celebrate, provoke, and heal. Not unlike Runnymede, a house that became a community, "Anonymous Somebody" welcomes all passengers to reframe the characters' experience as they pass or wait, fluidly transitioning from past lives to present, making the artwork their own.
