Is your wealth manager chasing after the wind?

The science of financial planning and wealth management has changed. That’s right. In times past, although some financial advisors still operate in this way, finding a talented fund manager seemed to ensure better investment decisions and higher returns. But even then the most adept fund managers could not consistently outperform the market. And yet a large swath of financial planners and investment advisors still entrust their client’s financial assets based on motivations that are contrary to wealth creation. Said differently, their actions—and advice—are self-serving and freewheeling rather than selfless and evidence-based. If that’s been your experience, read on…

INTRODUCING EVIDENCE-BASED INVESTING

Evidence-Based Investing (EBI) is a rational, fact-based approach to investment management and wealth creation. It informs investment decisions through statistical modeling and empirical data. It is not gut-based or emotion-driven, but a factual, evidence-based approach to wealth management that offers you the highest likelihood of generating maximal after-tax returns while mitigating risk. EBI is a principle at Finley Wealth Management and the only method they use to ensure financial freedom for its clientele.

HOW TO AVOID BROKERAGE-FEES AND HIDDEN COSTS

Fees abound in financial services. There are commissions and hidden costs. But at a fee-only advisory firm like Finley Wealth Management, their advisors do not take commissions from mutual funds or insurers for selling you their products. Fee-only firms follow a “fiduciary standard” that legally obligates financial advisors and wealth management professionals to provide impartial, honest, ethical advisement. And that’s the protocol at Finley Wealth Management. So why incur unnecessary costs or wonder whether you’re really receiving the unbiased advice you deserve? Consider engaging a fee-only firm for a complementary consultation.

MEET FINLEY WEALTH MANAGEMENT

Finley Wealth Management is a fee-only investment firm founded by Douglas Finley over twenty years ago. As a fee-only advisor, Douglas follows a “fiduciary standard,” which puts you—and your situation—first with unbiased investment advice. He is the recipient of the coveted Certified Financial Planner™ designation, a rigorous process with ethical requirements. Personable and client-focused, Doug has been formally recognized as “Best In Client Satisfaction for Wealth Managers,” among other honors. Finley Wealth Management services include Investment Management, Legacy & Financial Planning, Lifetime & Retirement Income, IRA Solutions, Estate Planning, Tax Planning, Life Insurance, and Long-Term Care.

GOODBYE,
AND THANKS
FOR SHARING YOUR STORIES

Dear Expressions readers,

My main goal for 4½ years as editor of Expressions magazine has been to enable readers to see topics of PBS shows through a local lens.

Sometimes that meant finding in Southwest Florida the unusual animal featured in a Nature documentary – as we did with Ngala’s white rhino in February 2018 and the Naples Zoo’s honey badger in February 2014.

Sometimes we consulted local experts for insight into philosophical or scientific topics raised by PBS documentaries, such as what’s going on in the dark web (May 2015), the purpose of life (May 2016) and the mechanics of a solar eclipse (August 2017).

And quite a few memories were made as we talked to people in our midst who were witnesses to history.
We saw a “ghost”

Until he was 91 years old, Gazo Nemeth had a big secret. He was among the 1,100-member Ghost Army of World War II, whose radio signals, rubber tanks and airplanes and even inflatable soldiers drew attention to themselves rather than the actual fighting Allied troops.

He simply told people he was in the signal corps, Nemeth said in an interview with WGCU in May 2014. By then, his wife, Carmella, had died, never knowing the truth. Neither did their two daughters until the information was declassified in 1996. But they gained a more thorough understanding of their father’s deceptive and lifesaving tactics after a filmmaker went to work on a show that aired on PBS, titled The Ghost Army.

Nemeth made history, and brought us much closer to it for sharing his story in Expressions.

We heard first-hand what a president said

We met Max Friedersdorf of Sanibel, a wise and gentle man we spoke with for the August 2014 issue.

That month, PBS was airing Dick Cavett’s Watergate. And right in our background was Friedersdorf, who during Watergate was deputy director of the Congressional Relations Office in charge of House operations. He was present when President Richard Nixon gathered his remaining Congressional supporters and staff and told them he was going to resign the next day. “And he laid his head down on the table and started sobbing,” Friedersdorf said.

Once again in meeting Friedersdorf, we got a glimpse of history through the eyes of one of our members.

We didn’t forget a war

It once may have been considered “The Forgotten War,” but the conflict in Korea was recalled vividly by five Southwest Florida veterans in the May 2016 issue of Expressions and a WGCU Stories of Service documentary that premiered that month.

As North Korea bounces in and out of the news lately, we’re grateful for the better understanding we gained when local veterans recalled their place in history at the 38th parallel.

There were other important and memorable Stories of Service in recent documentaries produced by WGCU and highlighted on pages of the magazine. We met brave men and women from World War II, Vietnam and the Persian Gulf War as well.

And as we turn the last page on Expressions, we want to thank all of you — many, many more than we could name — for sharing your stories.

We met a gangster’s grand-niece

In July 2014, PBS aired a documentary about Al Capone — who just happened to be the great uncle of Southwest Floridian Dierdre Capone.

Her book, Uncle Al Capone: The Untold Story from Inside His Family, was published in 2011, and was the basis for that PBS show (which re-airs this month at various times the first week on the HD channel). Producers verified her story, including the fact that Capone was not to blame for the St. Valentine’s Day Massacre of 1929, when seven men were shot to death in a warehouse in Chicago. In fact, this was a man Deirdre experienced as warm and caring, a man who taught her to swim, ride a bike and play the mandolin.

Through Deirdre Capone, we saw history a bit differently than legend had it.

It wouldn’t be the last time.

We gained insight about a failed utopia

Thanks to the diligent research and inspired prose of Florida Gulf Coast University Associate Professor of Journalism Lyn Millner, we learned a great deal more about a fixture of local history: the Koreshan Unity.

In October 2015, we took a close look at Millner’s The Allure of Immortality: An American Cult, a Florida Swamp, and a Renegade Prophet.

We learned more than we ever wanted to know about the pineal gland – which according to Koreshanity held the key to immortality. We cringed, laughed and furrowed our brows over the information she dug up about the utopian cult. We learned much more about the people who lived in our midst, who played music, baked bread and inhabited the land that is now a state historic site.
Chetna was born in India and moved to Mumbai for college, where she became a fashion designer and started her own clothes label. She met her husband while they were at college, where he was training to become a doctor. They moved to the U.K., to Kent, in 2003. She says she got started baking by making her children’s birthday cakes.

Claire lives in Cheshire, where she works as a speech and language therapist. She has been baking since she was 11 years old. Both her mother and grandmother were wedding cake decorators and her father a chef; they all taught her crucial techniques. In her 20s, she said, she became ill with depression and anxiety and baking occupied her time and gave her a focus.

Diana is the oldest baker so far and is armed with a quick wit and sense of seeing the brighter side of life. The daughter of a dairy farmer, Diana met her husband, Malcolm, at a Young Farmers’ social event when she was just 16, and they have been together ever since. Tending to her garden is her main hobby. Her earliest memories are of canning fruit and churning butter.

It’s a new season of The Great British Baking Show, starring a new batch of confectionary competitors. They’re joined by the original cast of Mary Berry, a leading cookbook writer, and Paul Hollywood, a top artisan baker, as judges. Hosts and comic foils are Sue Perkins and Mel Giedroyc. Berry and Hollywood search for the U.K.’s best amateur baker for the fifth time by testing their skills at cakes, breads, pastries and desserts, crowning a winner after 10 weeks of competition.

Meet the competitors:

Plus, see a recipe from Season 2 of the series on page 26
Born and raised in North London, Enwezor is half Nigerian and half Japanese. He now lives with his wife and four children in Portsmouth, where he works at the local university as a business consultant. Enwezor grew up in a family that liked to cook. He even has experience on a night shift with a professional baker, making more than 900 loaves of bread, just for the experience.

Iain grew up just outside of Belfast. His passion for traveling has taken him to all corners of the globe and he brings these unique flavors to his bakes. Now living in London, Iain is a construction engineer and brings an array of bakes in for his colleagues on the construction sites. Iain pours both his upbringing and worldliness into his baking.

Originally from Cambridgeshire, Kate now lives in Brighton with her 5-year-old daughter, Eloise. Kate trained as an actress and performed on stage for a couple of years before working in advertising and design agencies. Kate also started her own upholstery company. Community-minded, every year Kate organizes a street party.

Luis was born and raised in Stockport, but both his parents are Spanish. Luis trained as a graphic designer and enjoys playing the ukulele, making model planes and keeping bees. His wife gave him his first beehive as a birthday present and thereafter his passion escalated - Luis currently keeps eight hives: four at home, three at his allotment, and one at his caravan site.

Born in North London, Richard is the fourth generation working in his family’s building business. A keen fisher, diver and cyclist, he has his own allotment in his back garden and volunteers for the National Wildlife Trust. He is teaching his daughters eco-friendly ways to help animals by building homes for hedgehogs to hibernate in.

Jordan lives in Nottingham where he works as an I.T. manager. He is the self-confessed “nerdy baker” of the group. Jordan is highly intelligent and constantly absorbs trivia and new skills, from spinning his own wool and perfecting his embroidery, to baking and hairdressing. Jordan plays Dungeons and Dragons with his friends and loves to read comic books.

Martha is the show’s youngest baker at just 17. She is studying food technology, maths and chemistry and wants to make a career out of food when she is older, saying, “I may be in school, but my head is always in the kitchen.” She lives with her mom, dad and younger sister and their white Labradoodle Alfie, who steals Martha’s bakes whenever possible.

Nancy is known for her sense of humor. Originally from Hull, Nancy moved to Lincolnshire 24 years ago to work as a practice manager for a medical office. There she met her husband, Tim, and between them they have five children and eight grandchildren. Now retired, Nancy keeps active by cycling, and rearing her own guinea fowl and turkeys.

Norman is from Scotland and now retired. He joined the Merchant Navy at 19 where he worked as a radio operator and traveled the world. He describes one of his proudest moments as being when he fell overboard three miles off the Solomon Islands in the South Pacific and swam to shore, only to be picked up by an inter-Island cruiser near Papua New Guinea.
BY NOW you probably have heard about The Great American Read, a campaign by PBS to have American people choose their favorite novel from a list of 100 culled from an opinion poll of about 7,200 people conducted by the service YouGov. (An aside: See today.yougov.com for some random but interesting poll results, such as the fact that Harrison Ford was the most popular Star Wars character.)

Before the poll, the rules were set down by an advisory panel of “13 literary professionals,” who could merely pare down the list from the survey results without adding any. The panel was also charged with “maximizing list variety,” according to PBS.

The list spans five centuries (from Don Quixote in 1603 to Ghost, published in 2016) and includes authors from 15 countries. The authors didn’t need to be American, but the books had to be published in English in the United States.

PBS’s partners in this program are First Book, the American Library Association and the American Booksellers Association.

Voting is now open at wgcu.org/tgar and continues online and through hashtag voting via Facebook and Twitter. In the fall, viewers will also be able to cast their votes by using SMS and toll-free voting.

An eight-part series on authors, books and reading will air on PBS (and therefore on WGCU), with the last show in October revealing the results of the voting and the novel chosen as America’s favorite.

To get an idea of what books may rise to the top and some thoughts about reading from local people, the WGCU crew of Tara Calligan, Tim Kenney and WGCU intern Somer Senne conducted a survey around FGCU and at the South County Regional Library. A few responses are summarized here.

Lyn Millner, author and associate professor of journalism at FGCU, is a multi-tasker who reads whenever she can find a minute, such as when brushing her teeth.

She remembers being in fourth grade and reading a school library book about Amelia Earhart more times than she could count. She would check it out for the period allowed, take it back and watch for the librarian to reshelve it so she could check it out again.

She also liked the Encyclopedia Brown books.

MarcKenzie Ryan, who is between her sophomore and junior years at FGCU, is studying education. She said her favorite book is The Last Song by Nicholas Sparks, “mainly because I’m a hopeless romantic.”

She likes to read on the beach or anywhere outside because it’s calming and it takes her away from the stresses of life, including social media.

Freshman Alec Taylor is a theater major whose favorite book is Ready Player One. It’s on the list of 100, so we know one vote already!

“I don’t think it’s the best written book ever but I’m a nerd (so I like it),” he told us. “And the movie’s great, too.”

He also remembers a summer reading club book that “changed me” when he was younger. The Outsiders. “It’s an awesome book. I remember every chapter of that book,” he said. (And it’s on the list.)

Stefanie Grambow, who works in the registrar’s office at the university, said her favorite place to read is “in a hammock under a tree with the wind blowing.”

Her favorite book is The Great Gatsby (also on the list).

Her most vivid childhood memory of reading is when she was sitting on the couch with a book and her mom was vacuuming the carpet, and she moved an end table and everything else on the floor on top of Stefanie on the couch because she just couldn’t put her book down.

That is a dedicated reader.

The 100 books from which America’s favorite novel will be chosen spans five centuries and includes authors from 15 countries. They needed only to be published in English to qualify. We’ll be tallying your votes for Southwest Florida’s favorite, too.

Vote for your favorite novel at wgcu.org/tgar and check back periodically for local programs associated with the national event.
Stephanie Smith of North Fort Myers has every issue of Expressions magazine in its 17 years of existence except 1: October 2007.

“I started tossing them into a corner when I first started getting them,” she said. “They were so cool — actually thicker than now — with great articles, programming and pictures.”

The day we met Smith, the Design and Construction Department manager for the city of Cape Coral, she had brought the magazines to her office in the Public Works building.

She held up an early issue from 2001 with a Clyde Butcher photograph of the Everglades on its cover. It illustrates her philosophy about a sense of place. Smith travels whenever she can. At destinations, she looks for the iconic photo of them, one for each place that represents her impressions and her feeling about it. They’re usually images made by professionals. When she returns from a trip, she frames and hangs each representative photo to preserve the memory.

“It started with a fantastic picture I got with the effects of a volcano eruption in Hawaii,” she said. Smith had taken a trip there with her father.

Photographs like Butcher’s — and others on Expressions magazine covers — often performed that same function as emblems of a time and place. For example, a cover photo of an early Mickey Mouse and creator Walt Disney heralded a history of the Disney empire inside; a vintage photo from the days when Lee County schools were racially segregated told readers they’d learn on subsequent pages.

Smith comes from family of public made an on a collector media fans. She’s been a member of WGCU for more than 30 years – longer than WGCU has been WGCU, and longer than FGCU has existed, in fact. When Smith began her personal commitment to NPR and PBS, the station was affiliated with the University of South Florida as WSFP and across from what was then Edison Community College, now Florida SouthWestern State College.

Her favorite NPR program is Wait Wait … Don’t Tell Me! which she heard and saw once as an audience member as the show was being recorded. She also was in the audience to hear the show in a theater in Chicago while on a trip with her sister who lives in Orlando. In fact, she carried a stuffed Kermit the Frog with her into the theater and has a photo of that, too.

“My whole family was NPR listeners, including my mother, who listened well into her 70s,” Smith said.

Smith is equally devoted to PBS and has recorded entire series to watch when she has time, including Downton Abbey, Victoria, Sherlock and Poldark, as well as many of the Nature and NOVA shows and America Reframed.

Smith has been passing on her love of public media to numerous nieces and nephews. And she plans to pass on her magazine collection to her favorite station: WGCU.

We’re so grateful for such devoted readers, listeners, watchers and especially long-term sustaining members like Smith.

Thanks, and we’ll see you on the web. Go to wgcu.org/expressions for the TV programming grids and news from the station.

Schedules, WGCU news get new home

By my count, this is the 114th Noteworthy column that I’ve written for Expressions over the past 9+ years and, while I think the content of those columns has not always lived up to its title, I hope that you have found some of what I’ve shared to be of interest.

As you know, this is the last edition of Expressions, but it is certainly not the end of our dialogue with you, our viewers, listeners and supporters.

If you haven’t already signed up to receive our E-newsletters it’s a simple two-step process. First, go to the WGCU website at www.wgcu.org and click on the red Sign Up button at the top of the home page, then enter your email address on the next page. Our newsletters will keep you informed about WGCU programming, events and station happenings just as Expressions has, but we’ll be able to share news and programming updates with you more readily and efficiently through email.

For those of you who would prefer a printed program grid we will have one similar to the current Expressions grid available for you to download and print. If downloading and printing is not your thing, just call Jessica Trueblood at 239-590-2300 or email her at jtrueblood@wgcu.org and we will be happy to mail you a copy of the grid every month. I’ll be keeping in touch from time to time via our newsletters, as well.

In the meantime, thanks for reading, watching, listening and, most of all, for your continued support of WGCU Public Media.

A Hail Mary at fiscal year’s end

As we’ll assume you’ve heard, we’ve picked up some impressive awards lately, nine Florida AP Broadcasters Awards and five Regional Edward R. Murrow Awards. Great news!

And in other news …

The end of our fiscal year is just days away, and we need $55,000 to finish it in the black. Will you please help us make this critical leap?

We have a lot to celebrate in addition to those awards. WGCU reached 800,000 viewers and listeners each month. We offered kids, teachers, parents and grandparents educational enrichment with PBS LearningMedia and school and community events held by our own staff. We brought you quality programming on the arts, history, science and entertainment.

We provided 40 hours of continuous local Hurricane Irma coverage thanks to our FM crew, which was recognized nationally and locally.

We celebrate these successes together because of your financial support. You know how essential WGCU is to the culture of this region and to ensuring Southwest Florida’s voice is heard in national conversations.

Can you give $15, or $25, or even $75? Give because your neighbor can’t. Give because you’re proud to be a part of WGCU’s excellence. Give because there always will be storms.
Let’s talk sustainability

Sustainability isn’t necessary only for the environment. It’s important to WGCU too, in order to continue to fund the programs you enjoy. Your ongoing support of WGCU is so important. By becoming a WGCU Sustainer, you help enrich our community with opportunities to learn, laugh and share. You make a difference!

Become a WGCU Sustainer at 239-590-2591.

Who says there’s no free lunch?

Please support WGCU during our June campaign – at any dollar amount – to help us end our fiscal year in financial health. We’ll throw in some incentive: You could win a restaurant gift card and in the process help a student in the FGCU Hospitality program.

New donors, new sustainers and current sustainers who increase their monthly giving amounts June 4 to 8 will have their names entered into a daily drawing to receive a restaurant gift card as a part of Sizzle Southwest Florida, which runs from May 31 through June 13.

Participating restaurants in Sizzle Southwest Florida Restaurant Week each offer a special three-course lunch and dinner menu, with a twist on the price. This event runs for only 14 days from Cape Coral down to Marco Island. Sizzle Southwest Florida has donated these gift cards in support of WGCU Public Media and for FGCU’s Food & Beverage Scholarship Fund.

For more information and to donate, go to give2wgcu.org. WGCU is a member-supported service of Florida Gulf Coast University.

Where to find TV listings

This is the last issue of Expressions magazine. So where will you go to find the channel lineups for prime time, which you have found in this magazine?

www.wgcu.org/expressions

There, you’ll find downloadable PDFs of the month’s prime time lineup, a shorter list of Highlights (the new version online will contain just a recommended show on HD each evening), plus two years of archived Expressions magazines and timely communications from General Manager Rick Johnson (which appeared through this month in the Noteworthy column).

You also can find TV programming schedules as usual at wgcu.org. Or for TV listings events and more find us on Facebook at wgcupublicmedia.

Summer is for reading – and PBS Kids can help!

The Great American Read list of 100 books from which American adults will choose the best is now available (see page 11).

But let’s get kids involved, too!

Parents and grandparents (plus teachers and anyone who cares about a child) can find plenty of resources to raise a reader and encourage literacy, courtesy of PBS Kids.

Start with pbs.org/parents. In the search box, place words describing what you’d like to find. Here are some ideas: books clubs for kids; beginning readers; middle readers; literacy games; books with PBS characters.

Check out the selection of books available for purchase from PBS Kids at shop.pbskids.org/books.

Then, whether the kids do the reading or the adult reads aloud, you can get kids thinking about what they have read or heard with some instruction on writing a book review. See www-tc.org/parents/education/files/2012/05/25.pdf, where there is a form and even suggested words for expressing how a reader feels about a book.
Simply Ming keeps it simple

Each episode of Simply Ming begins with a technique demonstration, followed by the creation of two dishes – one prepared by a nationally renowned guest chef and one prepared by the winner of James Beard and Emmy awards, Ming Tsai.

The most recent season of his show, the 15th, works this way: Ming and his guests must design and improvise with items found in Ming’s East-West Pantry, along with a few surprise ingredients.

In an episode from Season 14, airing at 7:30 a.m. on Saturday, June 24, mackerel is on the menu for Ming and chef Andreas Viestad in Norway. Known for his show New Scandinavian Cooking, Chef Viestad introduces Ming to a farm apple Kir before they settle in to whip up two mouth-watering meals. With dishes capturing each of the five tastes, this is a meal you won’t forget.

Several other episodes of Simply Ming air throughout the weekend of June 23-24. See wgcu.org/shows-schedules/tv/tvschedules/ for showtimes and information.

Egg Custard Tart

This egg custard tart appears as the technical challenge in the Pies & Tarts episode of Season 2 of The Great British Baking Show.

Ingredients

For the sweet pastry
- 5⅓ oz plain flour, plus extra for dusting
- 1 oz ground almonds
- 4⅛ oz chilled unsalted butter, cubed
- 2 oz caster sugar
- 1 free-range egg

For the custard filling
- 1¾ pint full-fat milk
- 7 free-range egg yolks
- 3⅛ oz caster sugar
- freshly ground nutmeg

Directions

To make the pastry, stir the flour and ground almonds together in a large bowl, then add the butter and rub in with your fingertips until the mixture resembles breadcrumbs. Stir in the sugar.

Break in the egg and work it into the mixture with your fingers, bringing it together to form a soft dough.

Tip the dough onto a lightly floured work surface and shape it into a ball. Flatten with your fingers to a disc and wrap in cling film. Leave to chill in the fridge for 30 minutes.

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees.

Roll out the sweet pastry on a lightly floured work surface.

Using an ⅝-inch fluted cutter, cut out twelve discs and line the muffin tray molds with the pastry circle. The pastry should overlap the top of the molds by a few millimeters, so that you can crimp the edges if you wish.

For the custard filling, warm the milk in a saucepan, and beat the egg yolks and sugar together in a separate bowl until creamy.

Pour the milk onto egg yolk mixture and stir, creating little bubbles. Transfer the custard mixture into a pouring jug with a lip, then fill each of the tart cases.

Sprinkle a pinch of ground nutmeg into the middle of each tart.

Bake the tarts in the oven for about 25 minutes. You may need to turn the temperature down to 350 degrees for the final 10 minutes. You are looking for a very slight dome on the custard, indicating that it is baked. If the custard domes too much this indicates that you have over-cooked the custard, it will have boiled, and will sink back down leaving a big dip. If this does happen you can help rescue it by removing the tarts from the oven immediately and placing the tin in cold water on a cold surface.

Cool in the tin for 30 minutes and then carefully remove from the molds. The base of the tarts should be perfectly baked through, without having over-cooked the custard filling.
Richard Jones was sentenced to 19 years in prison for a crime he didn’t commit. Seventeen years in, he discovers he has a look-alike, with the same first name, who may have committed the crime. Richard’s conviction hinged on eyewitness testimony from Tamara Scherer, the victim of the crime, who testified that Richard was her attacker.

Segregation in housing and education has had reverberations on health care and health outcomes for African Americans. In this episode, we explore the legacy of that separation. We meet some of the people who helped integrate hospitals as the civil rights fight was heating up, and hear from a millennial mom, who says yes, even in 2018, looking for a black doctor to care for her black little girls is “a thing.”

During World War II, some 400,000 captured German soldiers were shipped across the Atlantic to prison camps dotted across the U.S. Suddenly the enemy was hoeing the back garden, and sometimes, sitting at the kitchen table.

For many, belief in a higher power is the foundation of human consciousness and the soul of social, political, and scientific progress. Some claim that humans are biologically predisposed to embrace religion and require faith to live moral lives. Others are skeptical. For them, faith and religious tradition serve only to fracture communities and prevent humanity from embracing a more enlightened, reasoned, and just social order.

A special edition of HumaNature formatted for air features Jessi Johnson, a modern-day Artemis. But the perfect shot led her on a heartbreaking odyssey. And author Diane Les Becquets reflects on the spiritual side of nature.
