PROLOGUE

FADE IN:

INT. RAY'S CAR -- ROLLING -- NIGHT

RAY and FRASER are returning from shooting hoops at a local gym. DIEFENBAKER is in the rear seat, patrolling his territory. Ray is bundled up against the cold. Fraser is in his RCMP athletic sweats.

RAY
...I give you that shot a hundred times, you never make it again. It looked like something you'd do on ice skates. I mean, this isn't hockey, Fraser. This is basketball. A good American game.

FRASER
Well, perhaps it has become Americanized, Ray, but, like many things Americans lay claim to, it originated elsewhere.

Get outta here.

FRASER
It's a fact, Ray. Basketball was invented by a Canadian.

RAY
Fraser, just because some fisherman once slam-dunked a halibut into a net...

FRASER
Actually he was a minister who used a soccer ball and nailed peach baskets to either end of the gym.

RAY
This is sad, Fraser.

FRASER
Of course, Reverend Naismith did eventually emigrate to the United States -- like many lacking vision and backbone -- in fact, he was working at a YMCA in Springfield, Massachusetts, when...

(abruptly)
CONTINUED:

RAY

What?

FRASER
Someone's parked in a fire zone.

RAY

So?

FRASER
Well, for one thing, it's dangerous. Not to mention disrespectful of the law.

RAY

You kidding? Parking illegally is a sport in this city.

FRASER
Fine. I'll catch up.

Fraser opens the door and prepares to roll out.

RAY

Okay, okay! (pulling over) You know, you're driving my insurance rates through the roof.

Fraser gets out of the car followed by Dief.

EXT. CHICAGO STREET -- WITH FRASER -- NIGHT

as he walks over to the illegally-parked car, where a large, not particularly cordial-looking man in his thirties, FRANK BODINE, is about to unlock the door.

FRASER
Excuse me, sir, perhaps you hadn't noticed the sign when you parked your car, but you're in a fire zone...

The man looks at him, looks at the sign, looks back at him incredulously. It's 11 o'clock at night. There's no one else in sight.

FRASER (CONT'D)
If there were a fire, the trucks would need access to the fire hydrant, which is blocked by your car.

BODINE

That so?
CONTINUED:

FRASER
Yes. They wouldn't have a source of water for the fire hoses...

BODINE
You know what you can do with your fire hose?

Bodine opens the door, gets behind the wheel. Fraser leans down and speaks calmly through the car window.

FRASER
I was simply pointing out the danger involved in parking in a fire zone.

Ray, not liking this guy's attitude, gets out of his car, comes over.

RAY
(to Fraser)
Let me handle this...
(to Bodine, as he takes his badge out and flashes it) License and Registration.

Bodine looks at him, takes a beat, then goes for the glove compartment presumably to get his registration. Instead he comes out with a .357 magnum, points it at Ray and says:

BODINE
Register this.

And, holding the gun on them with one hand, Bodine STARTS
THE ENGINE with the other and pulls away. Ray fires a couple of rounds at the retreating car. Then Diefenbaker gives chase.

FRASER
(calling) Diefenbaker!

And Fraser takes off on the run after Diefenbaker.

RAY
I think I hit a tire...

Ray turns and hurries back toward his car. As he moves around to the driver's side, suddenly we HEAR a loud SQUEAL of tires.

WIDER ANGLE

As another car seems to come out of nowhere and nearly runs Ray over. Ray has to jump back at the last moment and is thrown against his car, banging his head hard. He goes down.
EXT. STREET -- BODINE'S CAR -- NIGHT as the tire goes, and the car starts to swerve.

INT. BODINE'S CAR -- NIGHT as Bodine struggles to keep the car moving, but to no avail.
The car skids into a garbage dumpster. Bodine gets out,

EXT. STREET -- NIGHT
as Bodine flees on foot.

FRASER
A block behind, running full speed after Diefenbaker, about fifty yards ahead.

BACK TO RAY

a. WOMAN is bending over him, giving him mouth-to-mouth resuscitation.

THE WOMAN - RAY'S POV

as he opens his eyes, he sees a very attractive face looking at him with some concern. The glow of a street lamp casts a soft halo around her head.

WOMAN
Are you all right?

Ray mutters something, unable to focus or articulate.

WOMAN (CONT'D)
We better get you out of the middle of the street.

ANGLE

We see the woman, her hands under Ray's arms, drag him away from the middle of the street, to the sidewalk. As the woman puts him down gently:

WOMAN (CONT'D)
You'll be all right here. I have to go.

RAY
Who are you...?

WOMAN
Long story.
CONTINUED:

She begins to move away -- he grabs her hand.

Stay...

She smiles, as though realizing...

WOMAN

I'd like to.

Good bye.

As she moves away:

RAY'S POV

Just the shimmer of long hair and long legs as the woman melts away into the darkness. Then somewhere the ROAR OF AN ENGINE and the blur of a car as it wipes past.

BACK TO RAY

lying on the pavement, very woozy, muttering:

RAY

God, you're beautiful...

Then he closes his eyes and slumps over.

END OF PROLOGUE FADE IN:

EXT. STREET -- NIGHT

where Ray went down. A couple of squad cars are on the scene. There is a Paramedic ambulance parked beside Ray's car. The Paramedic is checking Ray's skull and temples, probing with his fingers, looking for abrasions or contusions. Fraser stands by, watching. In the b.g. AN OFFICER (#1) is measuring the skid marks on the road left by the car that felled Ray.

RAY
There was this woman...

PARAMEDIC
Uh-huh...

RAY
I just opened my eyes and she was there...the most beautiful thing I ever saw.

PARAMEDIC
Uh-huh...
(aside to Fraser)
How long was he unconscious?

FRASER
(quietly, to Paramedic)
Four, maybe five minutes.

RAY
She pulled me to safety...and then she kissed me...

FRASER Kissed you?

RAY
On the lips.

PARAMEDIC
(to Fraser)
Head injury -- it happens.

FRASER
Did she speak to you?
CONTINUED:

RAY
She wanted to stay, I know she did.
And then she was gone.
(beat, realizing)
She wants me to find her, Fraser.

PARAMEDIC
Uh-huh...

RAY
(to Paramedic)
Would you stop uh-huhing!

FRASER
Can you remember what she looked like?

RAY
She looked...exquisite.

PARAMEDIC/FRASER
Uh-huh...

Ray flashes them a look. OFFICER #1 has finished measuring the skid marks and crosses in.

OFFICER
(to Fraser)
Definite hit and run -- plenty of skid marks. Nobody saw the driver.

FRASER
She must have backtracked and sped off in the other direction.

(defensive)
What do you mean "she"?

FRASER (carefully)
There was no one else on the street, Ray.

RAY
You think it was her? Fraser the woman saved my life!

FRASER
Yes she did. After she hit you.

In the B.G. a tow truck moves in, pulling Bodine's car. OFFICER #2, who has been inspecting Bodine's car, steps in.
OFFICER #2
(to Ray)
There's something you ought to see.

As Ray and Fraser follow:

RAY
(to Fraser)
It was an accident. She's driving at night in a strange neighborhood, bad street lighting...

They both glance up at the street lights -- which, unfortunately are blazing brightly.

RAY (CONT'D)
(coversing)
Possibly nearsighted....

Fraser wisely decides to let this go. They arrive at:

BODINE'S CAR

The open trunk is packed with several wooden crates.

OFFICER #2
(to Ray, re: Fraser)
He actually stopped a guy on the south side to lecture him on fire safety?

RAY
Well, it's Saturday night, he's a Canadian....
(the rest goes without saying)

The Officer pries the lid off one of the crates with a crowbar.

THE CRATE -- THEIR POV is loaded with state-of-the-art heavy-duty automatic weapons.

RAY, FRASER AND THE OFFICER (#2) stare at the crate, taken aback.

OFFICER #2
Good call.

CUT TO:
EXT. DISTRICT 27 - ESTABLISHING - DAY

INT. POLICE STATION, BULL PEN -- DAY

Fraser, Ray and Diefenbaker are with ELAINE, as she runs the plate on the computer. She's inputting key strokes, as:

ELAINE
Vehicle is registered to Frank Bodine, 1177 West Flournoy, apartment 12. He's got $1450 in unpaid parking tickets and an expired registration.

RAY
Any priors?

ELAINE
That's a different program. This is just vehicular...

As she hits more keystrokes:

ELAINE (CONT'D)
So, Fraser, how's the apartment furnishing coming along?

FRASER
Very well, Elaine, thank you. I just purchased a lamp.

ELAINE Really, a lamp.

FRASER
It's good for reading.

ELAINE
Is that what you do at night?

RAY
Elaine, we got work to do here.

She hits more key strokes, as:

ELAINE
So, what are you reading with your new lamp?

FRASER
I've been reading a book about currency watermarks.
CONTINUED:

ELAINE
Must cut into your social life.
(off computer screen)
Here we go. Bodine, Frank, a.k.a.
Frank Binghamton. August '89, Breaking and Entering, one-year, suspended;
March '90, Receiving Stolen Property, got eighteen months in Joliet, did eight. November '94, Possession of Illegal Weapons, case pending, $250,000 bail posted.

RAY
No wonder he didn't want us running his license.
(to Elaine)
What about the woman?

ELAINE
You know, funny thing, but I'm having a hard time matching the word "exquisite" to a lot of mug shots.

INT. POLICE STATION, BOOKING AREA -- DAY

TRACK Fraser and Ray as they walk along with Welsh toward the squad room. Diefenbaker follows, his eyes never once leaving the breakfast jack that Welsh is holding.

WELSH
You want me to authorize a stakeout for a weapons violation.

RAY
Assault weapons, sir, a trunk full of 'em. Now, we can put out an APB, but this guy's a nasty piece of work, he's not coming in for just anybody.
So naturally, I'm thinking stakeout.

WELSH
I don't blame you, Vecchio. Stakeouts are such a romantic notion. In fact, I'm still tingling from the last one you asked me to authorize.

RAY
The hotel scam. Well, sir, that was not your average stakeout...

WELSH
No, it certainly wasn't.
(MORE)
CONTINUED:

WELSH (CONT'D)
I remember the hotel bill as if it were yesterday -- the poolside cabana suite, the aquatic aerobics lessons...

RAY
The suspect liked to swim, sir.

WELSH
...and the thrill I got just adding up that four thousand dollar mini-bar tab...

RAY
It's the honey roasted peanuts, sir -- one bag and they've got you.

Welsh stops, looks down at Diefenbaker, whose mute Oliver Twist routine has become more importunate.

WELSH
(to Fraser)
You ever feed this wolf?

FRASER
I'm sorry, sir, it's the urban influence. He seems to have developed a taste for fast food.

WELSH
(to Diefenbaker) Go. Scram.

Diefenbaker does not respond.

FRASER
He's also refusing to lip-read. I think it's the sugar.

Welsh switches his sandwich to his other hand and continues walking.

WELSH
(to Ray)
Two teams, two spotters, one apartment, no mini-bar.

RAY Thanks, Lieutenant.

WELSH
You don't pull him in by Friday, that's it.
Welsh turns to see that Dief is now on the other side of him staring at the sandwich.

WELSH (CONT'D)
(to Fraser)
If I give him some of this, will he stop?

FRASER
Not necessarily, sir.

Welsh sighs, gives Diefenbaker the remains of his breakfast jack. Dief wolfs it down (as it were) and walks away.

On Fraser, mortified:

CUT TO:

OMITTED

ECU: A HUGE BOX OF SURVEILLANCE EQUIPMENT is dropped onto a table. PULL BACK TO:

OMITTED

a large, mostly-empty loft-like space. Ray and Fraser go through the equipment. Ray attaches a radio mike on his lapel and inserts a small radio transmitter listening device into his ear. Then he takes a surveillance camera and fits a telescopic lens to it, attaches the camera to a tripod. He swings the camera toward the window:

OMITTED
THROUGH LENSE -- RAY'S POV

we pick up a NEWSPAPER VENDOR with a pile of newspapers on the street. The Newspaper Vendor receives Ray in his ear piece, looks up at him across the street and gives him a nod. Then TILT UP to the windows of Bodine's apartment, where the lense PUSHES IN and finds A TELEPHONE sitting on the coffee table. As A HAND reaches in and lifts the receiver we WIDEN TO: a TELEPHONE REPAIR PERSON doing a convincing job of checking out the equipment. The bored SUPERINTENDENT at the door misses the bug being placed inside the receiver. The Repair Person faces the window and gives a small "thumbs up" sign.

INT. STAKEOUT APARTMENT

Ray picks up the signal, puts on headphones and flips on the switch of a reel to reel tape recorder. As the tapes begin to spin he reaches back to a carton to pick up a piece of pizza. Diefenbaker picks it up first and walks away with it.

DISSOLVE TO:

INT. STAKEOUT APARTMENT -- DAY

Huey and Gardino have taken over. Huey is viewing the building through the telescopic lense. Gardino is playing solitaire and watching cartoons on a miniature TV.

DISSOLVE TO:

INT. STAKEOUT APARTMENT -- NIGHT

Ray is at the camera lense, Fraser has the earphones on for the telephone tap. He glances down to see:

CONTINUED:

his nose burried in a bag of cheesies.

FRASER

shakes his head, disgusted.

INT. STAKEOUT APARTMENT -- DAY

Huey and Gardino playing cards, eating sandwiches.

INT. STAKEOUT APARTMENT -- NIGHT

Ray and Fraser have taken over and Huey and Gardino put on their jackets to leave. Ray picks up Gardino's deck of cards and shuffles it with a dealer's flourish. Gardino breaks into a smile. Huey smiles too, ready for action, as does Ray. All have the same thought at once and turn to look at their prey...

FRASER

who responds with an innocent grin.

INT. STAKEOUT APARTMENT -- NIGHT

Huey, Gardino, Ray and Fraser are playing poker. Everything about the scene -- the naked light bulb, the body language, the pizza cartons -- is classic poker game except for one thing: there is no money on the table. They are playing for match sticks. Huey's dealing. They all check their hands out; then:

RAY

It's all about signs...
(throws three cards away)
Give me three...

Huey deals him three cards, as:

GARDINO

What do you mean signs?
(throws two cards)
Two...

RAY

Women give you signs to let you know they're the right woman for you.
CONTINUED:

GARDINO

She hit you with her car. You call that a sign?

FRASER

When the French fall in love they say they’ve been hit with a "coup de foudre," a stroke of lightning.

GARDINO

Huh?

FRASER

Love can be a very disorienting emotion. They’ve done experiments that demonstrate that hamsters who are mating secrete hormones that make them irresponsible. They react as if they were actually in pain, and, in some instances, actually choose not to subject themselves to more pain...May I have one please...

Huey deals him one card, takes three himself.

RAY

You know how my father knew my mother was the right woman for him? I’ll bet three...

He throws three match sticks into the pot.

RAY (CONT'D)

Cheese cake.

HUEY

We playing cards here, or we talking about cheese cake?

RAY

He was at his brother Angelo’s wedding in Gary. Everyone’s eating, drinking wine, making toasts when suddenly he looks over and sees this woman sitting by herself at a table eating a piece of cheese cake with a knife and fork. (MORE)
RAY (CONT'D)
I mean, how often do you see a person eat cheese cake with a knife and fork?
Most people eat it with their fingers, or just a fork...

GARDINO
That's why he married her? Because she ate cheese cake with a knife and fork?

RAY
No, Gardino, that was the sign. That's how he knew she was the right woman _ for him. She was a lady...

HUEY
(to Gardino)
You gonna call?

GARDINO
I don't know.

HUEY
It's only match sticks.

GARDINO
I don't see why we can't play for money. We're cops. What are we going to do, arrest ourselves?

RAY
No, but he will.
(indicates Fraser)

FRASER
I'm sorry. I would feel honorbound.

Gardino sighs and tosses three match sticks into the pot.

DISSOLVE TO:

INT. STAKEOUT APARTMENT -- LATER

ON Fraser as he checks the surveillance camera by the window.
CONTINUED:

HUEY (O.S.)
I think there's two million women on this planet you could be happy with...

PAN WITH Fraser as he walks back to the table, sits down.
It's a few hours later. Ties are loosened, shoes are off.
The place is a little messier. There is a different distribution of match sticks in front of the players.

HUEY (CONT'D)
You meet one you got to ask yourself if this is number 1, number 2,000,000 or number 617. It's a crap shoot. You could settle for number 617 and tomorrow meet number 11...I raise...

And he puts five match sticks in the pot.

GARDINO
Call. Phyllis was number 2,000,001.
Drove me crazy. She had a voice like a parakeet...never shut up. Then there was Vanessa. She was number 2,000,002.
She came from a family of meat packers.
You visit your in-laws on Sunday, you come home smelling like a pork roast.
She developed an eating disorder.
Blew up bigger than an aircraft carrier...

Ray throws his hand in.

GARDINO (CONT'D)
Then there was Janice...

HUEY
You gonna call, Fraser?

FRASER
Well, I was just wondering if I should.
Would you refresh my memory -- does a straight beat a flush?

HUEY
Not even in Canada.

GARDINO
Janice was some piece of work. I have this recurring nightmare that I'm still married to her. I wake up screaming...

RAY
You a three time loser, Gardino?
GARDINO
Two. I never married Vanessa. It was Janice I shouldn't of married. But she had great ankles.

RAY
You like ankles?

GARDINO
I'm a sucker for ankles...
(lays down his hand)
I got trips...

As Gardino scoops up the pot...

GARDINO (CONT'D)
The only sign I ever got was from Janice. And that took five years.

FRASER
What was it?

GARDINO
It came in the mail. It was from her lawyer...

DISSOLVE TO:

INT. STAKEOUT APARTMENT -- NIGHT

The game has been going on now for many hours and there is a feeling of stale air and fatigue in the room. The match sticks are redistributed once more.

RAY (O.S.)
...so there we were, parked in the Riviera, it's two o'clock in the morning...and she asks me where this relationship's going...

HUEY
(to Ray)
Call or fold.

He throws his hand away.

RAY (O.S.)
I mean, what kind of question is that to ask someone at two in the morning,

FRASER
Perhaps she was just being prudent.
CONTINUED:

HUEY
(to Fraser)
You in?

Fraser throws some match sticks into the pot.
RAY
Fraser, nobody who's prudent has any business being in love. I'm talking a beautiful summer night, the wind's blowing in off the lake. This is not the time to sit and talk about the future.

HUEY
The future is, it's gonna be noon before we finish this game.

GARDINO
See talk is bad, you talk and before you know it, it's all over. You're married.

RAY
Yeah, and then what? What about love? What about that moment when you know that you want to be with this woman every waking hour for the rest of your life?

HUEY
Okay, my turn -- I call.
(to himself)
Look at this, I'm playing poker with myself.

He throws some match sticks in the pot.

RAY
I'm telling you, you've gotta have that moment in your life when you know that you'll never be the same. Ever again.

Fraser is knitting on something. The conversation has struck a chord, but no one notices but us.

FRASER
When it happens, how do you know?

RAY
You just know. That's what happened to me on Friday. I lived that moment. I got the sign.

GARDINO
Yeah, now all you gotta do is find her.

RAY

I'll find her.
GARDINO
I got a flush.
And he starts to take the pot, but Fraser lays down his hand.

FRASER
I'm sorry, I appear to have a royal house.

HUEY
A what?

Fraser lays down his hand. He has Three aces and two tens.

HUEY (CONT'D)
That's a full house.

FRASER
Of course. Sorry...

HUEY
Look at that. A mountie sandbagging. Who ever heard of a mountie sandbagging?

RAY
You only meet the woman of your dreams once in a lifetime. I'm going to find her. You watch.

HUEY
Meanwhile, you wanna deal...

INT. STAKEOUT APARTMENT -- NIGHT
Fraser sits in the chair by the window looking out. *
Diefenbaker lays on the floor beside him. He's talking to someone off screen -- Ray we suppose. *

FRASER
(beat; then softly, almost thrown away)
There was a woman once. We were...I don't know what we were.

He looks out the window, hesitates. Finally, in a hesitant voice:

FRASER (CONT'D)
I tracked her up above the 62nd parallel into a place called Fortitude
FRASER (CONT'D)
Pass. It had been storming for days. The whole world was white. By the time I found her I'd lost everything -- packs, supplies -- everything. She was huddled on the lee-side of a mountain crag. Almost frozen. Very near death. I staked a lean-to, draped my coat over it and drew her inside. The storm closed in around us like a blanket. I covered her body with mine and held her until all I could hear was the sound of her heartbeat weakening. I forced her to speak to me, to talk to me -- anything to keep the cold from taking her.
  (moment)
It snowed for a day and a night and a day. I became delirious. Almost let go. All I could hold onto was the sound of her voice, which never wavered. She recited a poem. I must have heard it a thousand times that night. I never heard the words.
  (long moment)
It ended badly... She had a darkness inside her. And the most beautiful voice you ever heard...

As he drifts off into silence, we gradually PULL BACK to reveal Ray asleep on a bed roll on the floor.

FRASER (CONT'D)
It was a long time ago...

Fraser looks to Ray, sees that he is asleep, then turns back to the window and continues looking out into the night.

EXT. BODINE'S APARTMENT -- MORNING

The only sign of life is the Newspaper Vendor opening up his stall, the start of a new shift.

DOWN THE BLOCK
CONTINUED:

A CAMARO slows and pulls to the curb. After a moment, the driver's door opens, and a woman steps outside. (It may take us a moment to realize that this is the woman from the prologue.) She looks around her carefully, then approaches the apartment building. As she passes by the Newspaper Vendor and enters the building, CAMERA STAYS on the Vendor. He speaks into his lapel mic.

VENDER
I've got someone entering the building.

(to Fraser)
Someone's going in.

INT. STAKEOUT APARTMENT -- MORNING

Fraser's got her on the telescopic lense.

FRASER
She's in Bodine's apartment.

INT. BODINE'S APARTMENT -- LENSE POV

as the woman takes a valise out of a closet and starts to fill it with men's clothes.

FRASER (O.S.)
She's taking clothes.

RESUME RAY AND FRASER

as Ray looks through the lense, reacts.

RAY
Fraser...

FRASER
What?

THROUGH LENSE -- RAY'S POV

as the woman closes the suitcase, exits the apartment.

CONTINUED:

Ray is ashen-faced, in shock.

RAY
(to Fraser)
It's her...

Before Fraser can react, Ray is on his feet, racing for the door...

RAY (CONT'D)
(into lapel mic)
She's coming out. Stop her...

And he's out the door. Fraser follows, then turns back.

FRASER
(calling) Diefenbaker.

but...

DIEF

is conked out on the floor surrounded by munchie wrappers.

FRASER (CONT'D)
That's it, you are cut off, bucko.

Fraser takes off out the door.

INT. BODINE'S BUILDING -- MORNING

the woman hurries down the stairs and out the exit.

INT. STAKEOUT APARTMENT BUILDING -- MORNING

Ray tearing down the stairs, Fraser following. They exit as:

EXT. BODINE'S BUILDING -- WITH THE WOMAN

heads for her car. The undercover cop/newspaper vendor, joined by the cop in the utility truck move to intercept her. As the utility truck cop takes out a badge, flashes it -- the woman swings the suitcase squarely at her, knocking her out. Then she turns and with one extremely effective martial arts move, she immobilizes the Newspaper vendor. As she jumps in her car and takes off....

RAY AND FRASER

watching this in awe.
RAY (bitterly)
There she is, Fraser. The woman of my dreams.

END OF ACT ONE ACT TWO

FADE IN:

INT. RAY'S CAR - ROLLING -- DAY

Ray at the wheel, Fraser beside him.

RAY
It wasn't a sign, Fraser. It was an omen. Why didn't I see it?

THROUGH THE WINDSHIELD - RAY AND FRASER'S POV

The car they're following driving swiftly through traffic.

RESUME RAY AND FRASER

FRASER
Any one can have a lapse in judgement, Ray.

RAY
This is not a lapse, Fraser, this is my life. Whenever I think I found the right one, she turns out to be the wrong one. And the one I thought was wrong -- we'd make a date, I wouldn't show up -- six months later I'm sitting in a pew watching her walk down the aisle with some goombah, and I'm thinking, that's her. She walked right out of my life and I didn't see it.

FRASER
(pointing to the road)
Ray...the dumpster...

Ray focuses on the road long enough to avoid the dumpster being pushed across the street and squeals around it.

RAY
But this one...this one I would've bet my soul on. And here she is working for Frank Bodine.

THROUGH THE WINDSHIELD - RAY AND FRASER'S POV

The car runs a yellow light and turns right.

INT. RAY'S CAR

as Ray hits the gas and speeds through the red after her.
CONTINUED:

FRASER
Ray, slow down.

RAY
We'll lose her.

FRASER
No. Watch -- you slow down, she'll slow down.

Ray eases up on the accelerator.

THROUGH THE WINDSHIELD - THEIR POV
The Camaro slows down as well.

FRASER (CONT'D)
She has no intention of losing you, Ray.

(realizing)
She's a decoy. She tricked us.
(furious with himself)
Why do I love that??

As he jams the brakes on and does a squealing u-turn:

EXT. STREET - RAY'S CAR does a 180 in full traffic and speeds off in the other direction.

INT. THE WOMAN'S CAMARO

She's on a cell phone watching the Riviera disappear in her side-view mirror.

WOMAN
(into phone)
They made me, Frank. Get out of there.

INT. HALLWAY OF BODINE'S BUILDING -- DAY

as Ray and Fraser run down the hallway. Ray has his gun drawn. They reach an apartment door. Ray adopts standard police position beside the door as Fraser tries the handle. It's unlocked. Ray kicks it open, enters, gun drawn.

INT. BODINE'S APARTMENT -- CONTINUOUS

Ray checks the place out, finds no one there.
CONTINUED:

RAY
He's gone. We missed him.

Fraser pushes the bedroom door open and glances in.

FRASER
The closet is closed. She left it open.

As they enter the bedroom:

INT. BODINE'S BEDROOM -- CONTINUOUS

Sparse and fastidiously neat. In the center is a bed with nightstand and a goose-neck lamp. To one side is a portable TV on a stand opposite an armchair. Fraser crosses to the closet and opens it. As he studies the contents:

FRASER
What would he need so badly that he would go to all that trouble to get?

Fraser leaves the closet for the moment and walks around the room examining things. Ray studies the room uncomfortable, looking for signs of her.

(on his own track)
She was in and out in thirty seconds.
She knew where everything was.

FRASER
We've been looking at a man's apartment through a telescope for two days. What do we know about him?

RAY
You think she's been living here with him?

FRASER
We knew he was near-sighted, for one thing. The TV's too close to the easy chair. But he wasn't wearing glasses when we met him. Maybe contact lenses...

RAY
I mean, just 'cause she's doing his dirty work for him doesn't mean...

But he lets it drop, not believing his own argument.
CONTINUED:

FRASER
He went to the closet...

Fraser returns and studies it again.

FRASER (CONT'D)
What isn't here any more?

RAY
Her stuff, maybe some of his. How are we supposed to know? The closet was closed.

FRASER
Good point.

And without further comment Fraser goes over to the bed, inspects the bedding for a moment, announces:

FRASER (CONT'D)
The sheets have hospital corners.

(relieved)
At least they're not floral. Only a woman buys floral.

FRASER
You learn that in the army.

RAY
Not with his rap sheet.

FRASER
What if he were in the National Guard?

RAY
It would give him access to weapons.

Fraser considers for a moment. Then it dawns on him. As he crosses to the closet:

FRASER
What is the one thing a Guardsman is never supposed to be without?

He opens the door and looks through the wardrobe -- whatever he's searching for isn't there.

It's missing.

RAY What?
CONTINUED: (2)

FRASER

His Guard uniform. That's why he came back here, Ray. He needed his uniform.

RAY

What for?

CUT TO:

EXT. NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY -- DAY

We see an army truck barrel down a ramp into the underground armory. Bodine, in his National Guard uniform, is sitting beside the woman, at the wheel, in a National Guard uniform as well.

INT. BODINE'S APARTMENT ENTRYWAY -- DAY

Ray and Fraser come down the stairs, on the run. Ray is on the cell phone to Elaine.

ELAINE (V.O.)

Bodine was a sergeant in the National Guard, '85 through '88.

RAY

Still active?

ELAINE (V.O.)

With his record?

RAY

Check. And get me names and locations on every unit he's been a member of.

They fire out the front door.

INT. NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY, UNDERGROUND AREA -- DAY

as the truck parks at a loading dock/supply cage area. Bodine gets out of the truck, approaches a supply depot warehouse area. There is a SUPPLY SERGEANT behind a cage.
CONTINUED:

BODINE
I have an order to move weapons for maneuvers.

Bodine hands the sergeant a sheaf of invoice sheets.

TIGHT - THE INVOICE SHEETS
 tucked inside is a thick stack of hundred dollar bills.

RESUME SCENE

as the sergeant nods, presses a button, opening the locked door to the supply depot.

OMITTED

INT. RAY'S CAR

As they buckle up, Elaine is on the overhead mic.

ELAINE (V.O.)
...67th Regiment Armory, 57th and Wabash...

RAY
(to Fraser)
Got him.

FRASER
(into overhead mic)
Thank you kindly, Elaine.

ELAINE (V.O.)
It's what I live for.

INT. ARMORY, SUPPLY DEPOT/LOADING DOCK -- DAY

Assault weapons are being loaded into the truck, supervised by Bodine.

OMITTED
INT. RAY'S CAR - ROLLING -- DAY

Ray speeding and talking at the same time.

RAY
Why can't I meet some nice young thing who's crazy about me? You know, someone who wears shorty pajamas and knits me mufflers for Christmas. Is that too much to ask?

FRASER
What exactly are shorty pajamas?

RAY
Don't ask, you're better off. Me, I gotta fall for a hit and run driver who's working for a stolen weapons dealer. Go figure...

FRASER
(beat) Go figure what?

RAY
It's an American expression, Fraser. It's about time you learned the language, don't you think?

INT. ARMORY, SUPPLY DEPOT/LOADING DOCK -- DAY

The last weapon is loaded. Bodine signs a receipt with a phony name, then closes the rear flap of the truck. He moves around to the cab, gets in the passenger side. The woman starts the motor, pulls away.

OMITTED

EXT. NATIONAL GUARD ARMORY -- DAY

as Ray's car pulls into the Armory from the street.

EXT. ARMORY, RAMP

as the truck pulls up the ramp.
OMITTED

EXT. ARMORY

Ray's car pulls up to an office area. Ray and Fraser get out of the car. *

WIDER

as Bodine's truck falls in behind another army truck heading for the exit. *

ANGLE

as the first army truck makes the turn, Bodine's truck slows to follow suit. Ray and the woman see each other. Moment. They lock eyes. *

BODINE

seeing this. *

BODINE

Take out the cop. *

The woman reaches for her gun and swivels, leaning out the window. *

RAY AND FRASER

as the gun is leveled. She has a perfect shot at Ray. *

INTERCUT -- SLOW MOTION

The woman and Ray caught in a sort of deadly trance. He hesitates. She levels her gun. He's frozen -- he won't believe it. She has dead aim. Something flashes in her eyes, but is quickly suppressed. Fraser turns...

FRASER

Ray!

She FIRES -- Fraser makes a flying leap for Ray -- too late, Ray goes down. They hit the ground, Fraser covering Ray as the truck pulls out of the armory with squealing tires. *

END OF ACT TWO ACT THREE

FADE IN:

EXT. ARMORY -- DAY

Ray's car parked with the driver's side door open.

ANGLE TOWARD CAR

Ray sits in the driver's seat, his feet out the door, his head in his hands. Fraser stands by.

RAY

She had a perfect shot.

FRASER

Fill up your lungs with air, then exhale very gradually.

Ray tries this, but without much conviction.

FRASER (CONT'D)

Better?

Ray shakes his head, then mutters in disbelief.

RAY

I just stood there like an idiot.
She almost killed me.

Fraser hesitates for moment, then:

FRASER

No she didn't. She missed you by seventeen centimetres.

Ray looks up, stunned.

RAY

What...?

INT. POLICE STATION -- LUNCH ROOM -- NIGHT

Ray sits nursing a soft drink. Fraser sits opposite. The only other person in the otherwise deserted lunch room is Hugo, who is off in the corner stocking the vending machine.

FRASER

She was firing a 9 millimeter Barretta at close range. The light was at her back. The truck wasn't moving. I dug this out of the wall behind you.
He sets what remains of a fired round on the table in front of him.

RAY
You saying she missed me on purpose?

FRASER
The trajectory was 8 degrees off line, which is almost impossible to do unless you're trying.

Ray fingers the bullet, trying to take this in.

RAY Why?

FRASER
I don't know, Ray.

RAY
(after a moment)
Maybe I do. Maybe I saw it in her eyes.

FRASER
You've only known this woman for a few seconds -- while you had a concussion...

RAY
Doesn't matter. Ten seconds, ten years. Chemistry is chemistry. I figure Bodine's got something on her. Maybe she did something foolish when she was younger and Bodine is blackmailing her into helping him.

FRASER
Well, I suppose it's a theory, but...

RAY
She really wants to get out, which is why she's been sending signals to me. She wants me to rescue her.

FRASER
Maybe you shouldn't think about it now.
RAY
How often in a lifetime does this type of thing happen? I mean, has it ever happened to you?

Fraser is caught off guard. There's something there, something painful, but Ray is too involved in his own pain to see it.

FRASER (covers) Well... I...

RAY
No. Of course not. What does a mountie know about women?

Fraser lets it pass, relieved. Ray takes his empty soda and drains it. A moment passes.

RAY (CONT'D)
(devastated)
I think I'm in love with her, Fraser.

HUGO, the vending machine man, steps in quietly and sets a new can of soda in front of Ray.

HUGO
(with sympathy)
This one's on me.

EXT. FARMHOUSE -- DAY

An isolated farmhouse on a dirt road about forty miles west of Chicago. There is a rundown house and a barn. The truck from the National Guard Armory heist is parked beside the barn.

OMITTED

INT. FARMHOUSE -- DAY

Sparsely furnished.
CONTINUED:

The woman is at the table doing a meticulous job of cleaning her weapon. Bodine enters with some wood. They are both wearing their coats.

BODINE
It's freezing in here...

He puts the wood in a pot-bellied stove, closes the door.

BODINE (CONT'D)
When's the coffee going to be ready?

WOMAN
As soon as you make it.

Bodine goes to the stove, grabs the coffee pot and fills it with water.

BODINE
Why the hell don't they call?

The woman doesn't respond -- she's clearly used to listening to him rail and ignores it. Bodine continues, undaunted as he heaps in some coffee and slaps the pot on the burner.

BODINE (CONT'D)
I'm sitting on half a million bucks worth of weapons. You got the phone on?

The woman takes a cell phone out of her pocket, shows it to him.

BODINE (CONT'D)
Leave it on the table.

She puts it on the table and continues calmly reassembling her Beretta.

BODINE (CONT'D)
I don't know how you missed that cop.

WOMAN (unconcerned)
Neither do I. Off day, I guess.

BODINE
I don't like that cop. Or his fruitcake mountie friend. We should've taken both of them out.

WOMAN
You never learn to relax, Frank.

WOMAN (CONT'D)
How are we ever gonna enjoy that half-million if you can't relax?

BODINE
He's a mountie. They always find you sooner or later. I hate that.

WOMAN
That's not real life, Frank. That's "Rocky and Bullwinkle."
(standing)
Call me when the coffee's ready.

She strides off into the back room.

INT. POLICE STATION -- DAY

TIGHT on a reel-to-reel tape recorder as it spins.

WOMAN (V.O.)
They made me, Frank. Get out of there...

WIDEN TO SQUAD ROOM, where Ray, Fraser, Huey, Gardino and Elaine are standing around the tape recorder.

FRASER
Is that her voice?

Ray nods.

RAY
She's doing it under duress.

GARDINO
Right. She shot at you under duress too.

Ray just flashes him a look, as:

HUEY
Was that the only call in or out?

ELAINE
There was one wrong number and someone trying to sell life insurance.

HUEY
What were you doing following her?
RAY
She took some clothes out of Bodine's apartment.

GARDINO
You don't leave a stakeout.

RAY
Is that so, Gardino?

GARDINO
Yeah. Unless you got a thing for the babe that's decoying you.

RAY (angry)
Did I ask your opinion? Did anybody in this room ask for Gardino's opinion?

A moment of tense silence, broken by:

FRASER
(to Elaine)
Can you get the number she was calling from?

ELAINE
Sure. But she called from her car. It's a cell phone.

HUEY
You're never gonna track a cell, it's a nightmare.

FRASER
Not really. Not if you've tracked caribou.

They all look at him, a little peculiarly. Then:

RAY
Fraser, let's try this one more time; We're in Chicago. We're not tracking caribou. We're tracking gun runners.

FRASER
Yes, Ray, I understand. But you catch them the same way.
(turning to Elaine)
Could you get me a grid map of the company's cellular signal antennas?
INT. FARMHOUSE -- DAY

The woman sits at the table sipping a cold cup of coffee. Bodine paces. The cell phone is on the table, its on-light blinking.

BODINE Time?

She doesn't even have to check her watch.

WOMAN

BODINE
They said two o'clock.

WOMAN (weary of this)
I know.

BODINE
I should have gotten half up front. That way they couldn't stiff me. Why didn't you think of that?

WOMAN
I did.

He turns to her slowly with a cold glare. Insulting this man is dangerous. But she's used to this too and soothes him with a smile.

WOMAN (CONT'D)
But what do I know?

Instantly disarmed, he reaches down and strokes her hair. But his eyes drift back to the cell phone, its green light blinking.

INT. POLICE STATION -- DAY

TIGHT ON cellular phone grid map showing Chicago and the outlying areas within a fifty-mile radius. PULL BACK to find Ray looking over Fraser's shoulder as he studies the map.

RAY
What is this -- arts and crafts?

Fraser takes a triangle and begins to draw a series of lines using a ruler.
CONTINUED:

FRASER
It's called triangulation, Ray. It's used by game wardens to track caribou herds.

RAY
That's fascinating, Fraser, but the last caribou spotted in Chicago was about 300 years ago.

Elaine hangs up the phone and leans down to study the map.

ELAINE
That was the cell phone company. They found her number and picked up the signal...here.
(she pin-points a grid on the map)
Near Carpentersville. It's farmland mostly, not too many folks with mobile phones in those parts.

FRASER
(turning to Elaine)
Does the cell phone have to be in use to pick up the signal?

ELAINE
It just has to be turned on to receive calls. It emits a signal unless the power's off. That's the good news.

RAY
Elaine, we're attempting to track criminals as though they are fur-bearing animals. What news could be bad?

ELAINE
The grid covers an area of over twenty square miles. Unless you plan to go door to door...

Ray sighs.

RAY
Okay, Fraser -- how do we find the herd?

OMITTED

EXT. FREEWAY -- DAY

Ray's car leaving Chicago. A radio signal tracking antenna is mounted on the roof.
CONTINUED:

FRASER (V.O.)
The cell phone company sends a signal out from their antenna to the phone.

INT. RAY'S CAR -- ROLLING -- DAY

Ray at the wheel, Fraser sitting beside him scanning a lap-size doppler device (similar to an air-traffic control screen) which indicates the presence of radio signals. Affixed to the dash is a separate radio scanner. The doppler device is operating, but the tell-tale blip has yet to appear on the screen.

FRASER
The phone sends a signal back. We draw a line on the map from that location to the signal. Then we drive to a second location, trip the signal again, draw another line -- that's our triangulation. Wherever the lines on the map meet, that's where we'll find Bodine.

RAY
I find her, I got to arrest her too.
End of story.

FRASER
Yes.

RAY (reluctantly)
...Yeah.

INT. FARMHOUSE -- DAY

Bodine is pacing back and forth as the woman sits at the table filing her nails. She appears deadly calm, but if you look closely at her hands, as she does, they are shaking ever so slightly. Suddenly, the phone RINGS. They look at each other. He grabs the cellular phone from the table.

BODINE

Yeah...

(MORE) BODINE (CONT'D)

Where?
(beat)
We'll be there in an hour...

He sets the phone down, turns to her.

BODINE (CONT'D)

She smiles. But as he moves past, the smile fades.

On the cell phone, the green light still blinking,

Diefenbaker...

losing hope.

FRASER (CONT'D)
Never mind.

Fraser takes off for the barn, which is a few hundred yards from the house.

73  INT. FARMHOUSE -- CONTINUOUS as Ray moves quietly through the anteroom toward the kitchen, gun drawn.

THE WOMAN

does the same, moving quietly toward the same door...

AT THE DOOR

Ray suddenly wheels into position, gun drawn, only to see the woman standing in the doorway ready for him.

ANGLE

The two of them, twenty feet apart, holding guns on each other. For a moment, neither of them speaks; then Ray slowly lowers his gun. She does the same. They walk toward each other.

They meet and, still holding their guns, they kiss. It is tender and quite wonderful, two people holding guns and kissing. The kiss becomes hotter, more passionate.

They separate for a moment to catch their breath. She looks at him with soulful eyes and whispers:

WOMAN

I'm sorry...

Then she takes her gun and hits Ray hard on the head with the gun butt. He crumples in her arms.

Fraser enters and finds Ray on the floor, just coming to.

FRASER

Are you okay?

RAY

She kissed me.

Fraser glances at Ray's head, sees the wound.

FRASER
If we can stop them from getting to the highway...

RAY (obessed)
I'm going to put her away. For a long time. She'll be an old woman by the time they let her out.

FRASER
Perhaps you should radio for backup...

RAY

She'll be ninety and she won't be able to do this to men anymore...

FRASER
Ray, backup.

Huh?

FRASER
It might be a good idea to call the sheriff's station for backup.

Ray, not to press the point, but we are hiding behind a 1972 Buick Riviera equipped with a light weight aluminum chassis. They, on the other hand, are driving downhill at roughly forty-seven miles per hour in a steel plated military weapons carrier designed to smash through enemy fortifications in time of war.

EXT. BOTTOM OF RAVINE

The truck is on-its side. Ray yanks at the driver's side door and pulls it open. The seat is empty.

AT THE REAR OF THE TRUCK

Fraser throws back the canvas flaps. It's a mess, broken crates everywhere. No sign of Dief. Fraser looks as close to panicking as he'll ever look. He grabs a crate and turns to heave it out...

ON THE GROUND

Diefenbaker sits looking up at him.

Fraser quickly tries to cover his relief.

FRASER

Oh. There you are. Out of donuts, are we?

AT THE FRONT OF THE TRUCK

Ray is searching the grass around the truck, frantic.

ANGLE

the woman lies a few yards away in the grass. Ray hurries over to her and finds her unconscious.

ON RAY AND THE WOMAN

He lifts her head gently and gives her mouth to mouth resuscitation. A few seconds later she opens her eyes.

RAY

You all right?
She mumbles, disoriented.

WOMAN
...What happened?

RAY
(smiles, relieved)
Long story.

He studies the bruise on her forehead and gently wipes a smear of dirt away.

RAY (CONT'D)
You need an ambulance.

He starts to move away -- she grabs his hand.

WOMAN
No. Stay...

He smiles.

RAY
I'd like to.

Ray looks at her. She is bruised, her hair is in her eyes. She looks more beautiful than ever. Then POLICE SIRENS are heard in the distance. Ray looks at her, then looks off toward the highway where the sirens are coming from. All of a sudden, he makes an emotional decision.

RAY (CONT'D)
You okay to walk?

WOMAN
I...I think so.

RAY
Good. Get out of here.

WOMAN
What?

Ray helps her to her feet.

RAY
Get to the highway. You can cut through the woods.

WOMAN
You're letting me go? I almost killed you three times.

RAY
She's a Fed, Fraser. I offered to let her go. She's going to put it in her is going to ask for my shield and he'll be right.

Of all the districts in this city,
she has to walk into mine.

wrapping up some paperwork, Louey is playing solitaire.

HUEY
Ask me, he would've been better off if she'd hit him and left him dead on the pavement.

GARDINO
See, that's the trouble with signs.
You get the right one from the wrong woman, you end up paying for it the rest of your life. Better you never saw the sign. Better it never happened.

ELAINE
Then how would you know?

GARDINO
How would you know what?

ELAINE
If you never saw the sign how would you know if you were wrong or right?

GARDINO
You wouldn't know. You'd just be taking your chances like every other dumb schmo. That's the great thing about love, it evens the odds. Anyone can be completely humiliated.
CONTINUED:

ELAINE
Well if there was a sign, and I could tell just from the way he blew his nose or tipped his hat, I'd want to know.

GARDINO
Hey, hey -- women don't have signs. Men have signs. Women have "biological imperatives."

(off their looks)
It's true, I read it.

ELAINE
Jeez, Gardino, no wonder your wife left you for a pork roast.

Ray enters. Suddenly, they stop talking, look at him.

HUEY
Lieutenant wants to see you, Vecchio.

Ray nods, continues walking, as:

GARDINO
Yeah. And bring your play book.

Ray continues walking. WITH him as he walks towards Welsh's office. People seem to stop talking and watch as Ray walks along through the:
INT. POLICE STATION -- SQUAD ROOM AND BULLPEN -- CONTINUOUS people looking at him, nobody talking. He reaches Welsh's office, knocks.

INT. WELSH'S OFFICE -- CONTINUOUS

as Ray enters. Welsh is at his desk, an open file folder in front of him.

WELSH Sit down, Vecchio.

RAY
I'd rather stand, sir.

WELSH
Suit yourself.

Welsh looks at the report.

WELSH (CONT'D)
I have Special Agent Chapin's report on the Bodine arrest here. Would you like me to read the relevant passage?

RAY
(dead and he knows it)
Sure, why not.

Welsh puts on his reading glasses, reads:

WELSH
"We were able to seize 850 assault weapons and put Frank Bodine in custody. This arrest could not have been accomplished without the assistance of Detective Ray Vecchio, who was instrumental in bringing this operation to a satisfactory conclusion. His hard work and his courage in the face of danger were exemplary..."

Welsh puts the file down, looks at Ray.

Congratulations, Detective.
CONTINUED:

RAY (stunned)
...Sir?

WELSH
I said "congratulations."

Ray doesn't respond. Suddenly he turns and walks out. PAN TO the corner of the office, where Diefenbaker has been sitting, having bonded with Welsh.

They exchange a complicitous look; then Welsh opens the bottom drawer of his desk and takes out two pretzels.

WELSH (CONT'D)
Same to you.

He gives one to Diefenbaker and eats one himself.

INT. POLICE STATION, SQUAD ROOM -- EVENING
CONTINUED:

As Ray storms across the bullpen, he meets Fraser at the top of the stairs.

RAY (calling out)
I gotta find her.

Fraser steps in and hands him a piece of notepaper.

FRASER
The Regents Park, I took the liberty...

Ray nods, continues out.

EXT. CHICAGO SKYLINE -- NIGHT -- MUSIC OVER

INT. HOTEL LOBBY -- NIGHT

Suzanne steps off the elevator with her valise and approaches the front desk. There's a long line of patrons waiting.

EXT. CHICAGO STREET -- NIGHT

Ray's car speeding through traffic.
INT. HOTEL LOBBY

Suzanne is third from the front now. The man in the front of the line is taking forever. She checks her watch.

EXT. CHICAGO STREETS

Ray's car is backed up in traffic. Suddenly it wheels out of line, makes a right turn and fires down an alley.

INT. HOTEL LOBBY

Suzanne signs her credit card bill at the desk.

DESK CLERK
I hope you had a pleasant stay, Ms. Chapin.

SUZANNE
Yes, thank you...
(then)
I'll need a car for O'Hare, please.

DESK CLERK Certainly...

EXT. CHICAGO STREETS -- RUNBYS -- NIGHT

Ray wheels out of another alley and tears off down the street.

EXT. HOTEL -- NIGHT

as Suzanne stands outside waiting for her limo. After a beat, the limo pulls up. The driver gets out, opens his trunk. Suzanne gives him her suitcase, moves to open the rear door just as her hand on the door handle, sees him. Moment. Ray approaches.

ANGLE

Ray's car pulls up, jumping the curb. He gets out and...

SUZANNE

ANGLE - RAY AND SUZANNE

as they stand there beside the limo, the driver waiting, people passing by in the street. They face off -- he challenging, she defensive.
CONTINUED:

SUZANNE
You want something, Detective?

RAY
That kiss meant something.

SUZANNE
(beat)
Yes. It meant "step closer so I can hit you."

RAY
(takes this in, then:)
— Good cover. You must be very good at your job.

SUZANNE Apparently.

She starts to step toward the limo. He steps in closer and holds her arm.

RAY
So I'm just a dumb jerk, right? You'll walk away and you won't spend the rest of your life wishing you had the guts to say it.

She turns on him, desperate not to crack.

SUZANNE
It was a job.

RAY
Then why didn't you report me?

SUZANNE
Come on! Who needs the paperwork?

That hurt. A beat.

RAY
Then go home.

Ray turns and walks away. Then stops. He's gonna hate himself for this, but:

RAY (CONT'D)
Damn!

He turns, strides back, grabs her and she's in his arms. They kiss. It's one hell of a kiss, and when they're finished, she's clearly lost the battle. Then she recovers and turns away, climbing into the back of the limo.

stands there watching the limo pull away. He turns to the DOORMAN and says:

RAY (CONT'D)
She's gonna turn back. Watch.

ANGLE

A long moment, and just when we're sure he's wrong, she turns back and looks at him through the rear window of the limo.
And smiles.

RAY

smiles to himself. Then he turns and, hands thrust deep into his pockets, he walks off down the street -- past his car -- just walking.
As we CRANE UP slowly losing Ray among the lights of the city:

RAY (V.O.) (CONT'D)
That's it, Fraser. That's the sign.

FRASER (V.O.)
What is, Ray?

RAY (V.O.)
The look. She left me but she left for the right reason. She loves me.

FRASER (V.O.)
...But she's gone.

RAY (V.O.)
That's what's right for us. Maybe someday it won't be, but now it is.

FRASER (V.O.)
But you might never see each other again.

RAY (V.O.)
Exactly. That's what we need -- ridiculous odds and just a speck of hope that some day we'll beat 'em.

FRASER (V.O.)
I can't say I understand, Ray.

RAY (V.O.)
Course you don't. You're not too swift with this stuff, are you, Fraser?

INT. FRASER'S APARTMENT -- NIGHT

Fraser sits on the bed, Diefenbaker curled up beside him. On his lap is a small wooden box, the kind one might put keepsakes in so they don't become lost or torn. For a moment he just looks at the box as if trying to get up his courage.

He looks at Diefenbaker, who looks directly back at him. Fraser looks away, turns back and finds Diefenbaker staring at him unrelentingly. He forces a smile he doesn't believe in, as though trying to reassure.

FRASER
It was a very long time ago.

Diefenbaker holds his look, as Fraser lifts the lid of the box.
CONTINUED:

PUSH IN SLOWLY ON HIM as he carefully sifts through the contents. In the bottom, there is an old, yellowing photograph. Fraser lifts it out, looks at it.

of a woman taken at a distance. She has turned away from the camera in mid-motion as if not wanting to be photographed, leaving her features blurred and indistinct. But her long, dark hair, and the slightly regal bearing leaves little doubt that this is Fraser's dark lady.

FRASER

as he sits there staring at the photo, we...

FADE OUT.
