

"MR. BLANDINGS BUILDS HIS DREAM HOUSE"

Written by

Melvin Frank and Norman Panama

Based on a novel by Eric Hodgins

DRAFT

SHOOTING

THE ISLAND OF MANHATTAN - STOCK

FADE IN:

this, a
A very high airplane view of the entire island. Over Voice, authoritative, impressive.

VOICE

In any discussion of contemporary America and how its people live, we must inevitably start with -- Manhattan -- New York City, U.S.A!

NEW YORK CITY SKYLINE - STOCK

VOICE

Manhattan -- glistening, modern giant of concrete and steel reaching to the heavens and holding in its arms seven millions!

NEW YORK CITY - ANOTHER VIEW - STOCK

VOICE

Seven millions -- happy beneficiaries of the advantages and comforts this gracious metropolis has to offer...

DISSOLVE

VOICE

(OVER DISSOLVE)

Its fine broad streets and boulevards facilitate the New Yorker's carefree, orderly existence.

BROADWAY AND FORTY-SECOND STREET - STOCK

An enormous traffic jam, horns honking, etc.

DISSOLVE

VOICE

(OVER DISSOLVE)

Kindly, courteous public servants ever on hand to offer a word of friendly advice.

TRAFFIC COP AND CAB DRIVER yelling at each other.

DISSOLVE

VOICE

(OVER DISSOLVE)

A transportation system second to none in speed and comfort!

A SUBWAY DURING RUSH HOUR - STOCK

DISSOLVE

VOICE

(OVER DISSOLVE)

Modern recreational facilities for its children!

A CROWDED LOWER EAST SIDE STREET - STOCK

Kids playing ball in truck-laden street.

DISSOLVE

VOICE

(OVER DISSOLVE)

For its adults, the peace and privacy of a day in the sun!

CONEY ISLAND ON ITS MOST CROWDED DAY - STOCK

DISSOLVE

VOICE
(OVER DISSOLVE)

It's delightful changes in climate!

A BLINDING, WINDSWEPT NEW YORK BLIZZARD - STOCK

DISSOLVE

VOICE
(OVER DISSOLVE)

Its great institutions of learning!
Open to all. Free of charge.

BUILDING EXCAVATION - DAY are a HEAD Douglas), a man.

Leaning on a railing looking down into the excavation group of sidewalk supervisors. The CAMERA MOVES UP to a CLOSEUP of one of them. It is Bill Cole (Melvyn well-dressed, intelligent, attractive looking young man.

BILL

I suppose you're wondering what all this has to do with Mr. Blandings and his Dream House? Well, I'll tell you. Jim Blandings is part of the fabric of this town. Born and raised right here, he's as typical a New Yorker as anyone you'll ever meet.
At least he was.

(confidentially)

And if you want to know the real story, I guess I'm your boy. Cole's my name, Bill Cole. I'm Jim's lawyer and quote, best friend, unquote.
Jim's one of those bright young men from Yale. Advertising business, lovely wife, two fine kids, makes almost fifteen thousand a year. Want to know why? Just look up there.

A BILLBOARD

ham. In

A billboard -- against a white background is a large large letters across the ham is printed:

WHAM!
(A WHALE OF A HAM)

And below this in quotes:

"WHEN YOU'VE GOT THE WHIM, SAY 'WHAM!'"

BILL'S VOICE

"When you've got the whim, say
'Wham!'"... Jim Blandings wrote that slogan. Seven magic words that shine like a beacon light for the American housewife!

(impressive; almost reverently)

"When you've got the whim, say
'Wham!'" Jim Blandings' contribution to the American Scene.

EXT. A LARGE NEW YORK APARTMENT BUILDING - DAY

As CAMERA MOVES UP it and TOWARD a window:

BILL'S VOICE

For fourteen years Jim and Muriel had been living in their apartment over on East Seventy-fourth Street.
It was just another of those wonderful crisp September mornings and the Blandings were still asleep. Just like millions of other people in good old Manhattan -- New York City -- U.S.A.

The CAMERA GOES THROUGH the window and INTO:

INT. THE BLANDINGS' BEDROOM - DAY

asleep Jim (Cary Grant) and Muriel (Myrna Loy) Blandings are in twin beds.

impression
The room, not large to begin with, gives us the
of being cluttered up and overcrowded because the beds, oversized chest of drawers, dressing table and chaise lounge take up an inordinate amount of space.

himself table for rubbing circuitous entails ominously stepping the
the get waking

SOUND of an alarm clock going off. Jim awakens, yawns into hazy consciousness, gropes about on the night the clock; it isn't there. He slips out of bed, and rubbing his eyes, blindly moves toward the dresser. The circuitous path, which he accomplishes with sleepy dexterity, entails going around the chaise lounge, just missing the ominously pointed edge of Muriel's dressing table, deftly stepping over the low dressing table chair and finally reaching the chest of drawers upon which is the clock. He turns off the alarm and yawningly starts back over the same path. We get the feeling that Jim makes this sleepy excursion every waking morning of his life.

gropes
them, toward is and reawakens and

Back at his bed, Jim sits down, and, yawning loudly, with his feet for his slippers. Before he can find them, however, he begins to doze off and slowly tilts back toward the pillow, pulling the covers over him. In a moment he is sound asleep. Muriel's arm automatically stretches out and shakes Jim into consciousness. As he painfully reawakens and starts to rise, Muriel's arm disappears.

of

We get the impression that this, too, is a regular part of the Blandings' daily routine.

bathrobe,
opens

Jim locates his slippers, reaches around for his bathrobe, can't find it, stumbles his way over to the closet, opens the door.

INT. THE CLOSET

intended Muriel terms, gowns, suit shelf an one small put between down crumpled it, at bedroom

This is a fairly good-sized closet but it was never to be shared by two people, particularly not Jim and Blandings. Assuming that they had started out on even terms, it is now obviously Muriel, three-to-one. Her dresses, slips, seem to obscure his occasional pair of slacks, or sports coat. Her shoes neatly line the floor and the shelf above is loaded to the ceiling with her hat boxes, in an orderly but somewhat precarious state of balance. Groping blindly for a robe, Jim feels around and pulls out. As he slips into the arms, we see it's much too for him, obviously Muriel's. In disgust he attempts to put it back. Unable to find a hook he finally jams it in between two silk dresses which fall to the floor. As he bends down and gropes for the dresses, he discovers his robe crumpled under them on the floor. He drags the robe out and dons it, leaving the dresses where they fell. With a guilty look at Muriel he closes the closet door and starts out of the bedroom and into the narrow hall.

INT. THE HALL

apartment. Off room

A narrow corridor extending the length of the it are doors leading to the bathroom, the childrens' and the foyer.

bathroom

Jim shuffles down the hall. He stops at the closed door, listens, hears the shower, knocks.

BETSY'S VOICE

Okay, dad.

JIM

Mm.

of the
and Jim continues down the hall, stops at the closed door children's room, knocks. No sound. He opens the door enters.

INT. CHILDREN'S BEDROOM

accoutrements one of off
A small room, crowded and cluttered up with the of adolescence. Joan, an eleven-year-old is asleep in the twin beds. Jim automatically pulls the covers clear Joan's bed. She awakens, cocks an eye at him.

JOAN

Okay, dad.

JIM

Mm.

exits
As she sleepily stretches and prepares to rise, Jim into the hall.

INT. THE HALL

room, breakfast
CAMERA FOLLOWS Jim through the foyer into the living on through the very small combination dining and nook and into the compact but tiny kitchen. Gussie, the colored cook, greets him heartily.

GUSSIE

'Morning, Mr. Blandings!

JIM

(a feeble attempt at a smile)

Mm.

lemon, slight black Gussie takes a glass of hot water, squeezes in a little stirs and hands it to Jim who gulps it down, makes a face and pats his stomach. Gussie hands Jim a cup of coffee and he starts back toward the bedroom.

INT. THE HALL

the he bathrobe,
She down
to
the
and proud.

Gingerly balancing the cup and saucer, Jim approaches door to the children's room. With split-second timing, pauses as the door flies open and Joan, in her towel in hand, rushes out and past him down the hall. She disappears into the bathroom. Jim carefully proceeds the hall and, as he reaches the bathroom, deftly steps to the left as the door bursts open and Betsy flies by on way back to her bedroom. All this is done with a timing shifting of hips of which Knute Rockne might have been proud. Jim continues down the hall, enters the bedroom.

INT. THE BLANDINGS' BEDROOM

nudges

Muriel is still asleep as Jim enters, walks over, nudges her.

JIM

Muriel.

MURIEL

Mm?

JIM

Coffee.

up,

Muriel awakens, sniffs the fresh coffee, smiles, sits up, takes the cup.

MURIEL

Thank you, dear.

Jim rows of ruffles

They kiss briefly. Muriel starts to sip the coffee as Jim goes to his chest of drawers. It consists of several rows of small drawers above and large drawers below. Jim ruffles through a couple of small drawers, pulls out a suit of look underwear, continues noisily and with some annoyance to through the other drawers.

MURIEL

Looking for something, dear?

JIM

(briefly)

My socks.

MURIEL

Why don't you look in your sock drawer?

JIM

(with restraint)

That's where I found my underwear.

MURIEL

Oh.

(brightly)

Well, try your underwear drawer.

JIM

I'm in my underwear drawer.

He reaches in and holds up one of Muriel's silk slippers.

MURIEL

(sipping coffee)

Well, they must be somewhere.

(attempt at morning cheeriness)

Socks just don't get up and walk away by themselves.

JIM

(strained patience)

Muriel, I thought the top two-and-a-half drawers were to be mine! I wish you'd tell Gussie --

MURIEL

The closet! That's where they are.
We put them in the closet.

JIM

Socks? In the closet?

MURIEL

Well, there didn't seem to be any room in the drawers...

JIM

And there's so much of it in the closet!

MURIEL

...so Gussie and I decided that from now on we'll keep them in a basket on the shelf.

JIM

Well, thanks a lot!

reaches up so, basket
to

He strides angrily to the closet, opens the door, for the basket and pulls it off the shelf. As he does all the hat boxes come tumbling down knocking the from his hand, the socks spilling on the floor. About to explode, he looks at Muriel.

MURIEL

Jim, I do wish you'd make an effort to be a little less clumsy.

JIM

(barely containing himself)
I'll try, dear.

puts where closes socks there is exchanges a his sighs,

Jim looks at her barely containing himself, and then the hats back in the boxes, jams them back on the shelf they totter precariously. With bated breath he gingerly the closet door. Pause. Silence. He picks up a pair of and walks cautiously toward the hall door. Suddenly a rumble and crash from inside the closet. Jim look with Muriel, is about to say something, changes mind, exits into the hall. Muriel looks at the closet, takes another sip of coffee.

INT. THE HALL

He
moment robe

Jim opens the door of the bathroom. There is a scream.
quickly closes the door, scowling with annoyance. A later the door opens and Joan emerges, wrapping her around her.

JOAN

(sharply) Father, just one morning I wish you'd knock!

JIM

(to her back as she walks away)
'Morning, dear.

bathroom.

Joan disappears into her room as Jim enters the

INT. THE BATHROOM

bathrobe,
head.
down, examines etc.
about

Very small with a stall shower. Jim takes off his yawns, gets on the scale, looks at the dial, shakes his He takes a deep breath, draws in his stomach, looks scowls, shrugs, gets off, moves to the mirror. He the thinness of his hair, the condition of his tongue, Taking his toothbrush he looks down at the tube he is to use, frowns.

WHAT HE SEES - THE TOOTHPASTE TUBE

squeezed in

WHAT HE SEES - the toothpaste tube. It has been the middle, one of Blandings' pet peeves.

CLOSE SHOT - JIM METICULOUSLY SMOOTHES OUT THE TUBE rolls small vigorously

CLOSE SHOT - Jim meticulously smoothes out the tube, up the used portion from the bottom. Then placing a amount on his brush, he caps the tube, and starts free which he

to brush his teeth. As he does so, he attempts with his hand, to put the tube back in the medicine cabinet opens.

CLOSE SHOT - THE MEDICINE CABINET

with

CLOSE SHOT - the medicine cabinet, loaded to the hilt medical accumulation of fourteen years of family life.

CLOSE SHOT - JIM

bulging top desperate pushes the pops bottle put it sniffs it, He
and reacts, full dries now wet spray
He
"Home

CLOSE SHOT - Jim. As he pushes the tube into the shelf, a bottle of iodine falls out. Jim makes a one-handed catch, still brushing his teeth. As he iodine into the second shelf, a small bottle of pills out. Jim catches it, pushes it back into the cabinet. A of cough medicine falls out. He catches it, tries to back, finds it won't fit. He looks at the bottle, contemplates its value, throws it in the wastebasket. He finishes washing his mouth, admires his teeth, disrobes steps into the shower, putting on his shower cap. He scowls, takes off the cap and turns it upside down, a cup of water falling out. He reaches out for a towel, the inside of the cap, carefully puts it back on his hair. Then he turns the water on and at the first warm Jim Blandings' life takes a sharp turn for the better. He starts to sing, a robust bathroom baritone version of "Home On The Range."

DISSOLVE

JIM

face.
is picks up annoyance, mirror.
he needs that exasperation reach During
comes

Jim - He stands in front of the washstand lathering his Over scene we hear Muriel's voice from the shower. She singing a lusty chorus of "Home On The Range." Jim his razor and turns to the mirror. He reacts with as he discovers it is covered with steam. With weary resignation he takes a towel and starts to rub off the
As he clears one section another clouds up. By the time gets it all reasonably clear he finds that his lather freshening. He grimly relathers his face only to find the mirror is again clouded up. As he turns with toward the shower we see Muriel turn off the water, for a towel, start to dry herself.
The mirror cleared off, Jim relathers, starts to shave.
this, Muriel, having dried herself and donned her robe, into scene.

MURIEL

(reaching for toothbrush)

Excuse...

get to he

She takes her toothbrush and then opens the cabinet to the paste. Jim, automatically following the mirror, has squeeze around in a desperately contorted position as continues shaving.

CLOSE SHOT - MURIEL

cabinet paste to

CLOSE SHOT - Muriel. She takes the tube from the and, squeezing the tube in the middle, applies the her brush.

JIM AND MURIEL

Muriel
his
Jim and Muriel - Placing the tube on the washstand, closes the cabinet. Jim, still shaving, moves back to original position as he follows the mirror.

JIM

Excuse...

They taps moves her Muriel nods, steps back, starts to brush her teeth.
both hum "Home On The Range". Her mouth full, Muriel Jim on the shoulder. Without stopping his shaving, Jim to one side as Muriel rinses her mouth. She examines face in the mirror.

JIM

(impatiently)

If you don't mind, dear.

continues to decides
As he steps back in front of the mirror, Muriel look at her face in the glass, over his shoulder. She she needs a little skin lotion.

MURIEL

(as she steps in front of him)

Sorry.

mirror
folded.
She again opens the cabinet. Jim once more follows the around, nicks his face, gives up, stands glaring arms
Muriel takes the lotion from the cabinet.

MURIEL

Moment, dear.

JIM

Take your time. I can spare the blood.

MURIEL

(looks up)

Oh... cut yourself?

JIM

I cut myself every morning. I kind of look forward to it.

MURIEL

Why don't you get an electric razor?

JIM

(trying to shave)
Don't like them. No close shave.

MURIEL

Ridiculous! Bill Cole's been using one for years.

JIM

He doesn't have my beard!

MURIEL

That's silly. Bill's beard is just as tough and coarse and --

JIM

(irritably)
I'm not interested in discussing the grain and texture of Bill Cole's hair follicles before I've had my orange juice.

MURIEL

You don't have to carry on so. I only said, why don't you get an electric razor?

JIM

Because I prefer the cool, clean sweep of the tempered steel as it glides smoothly --

MURIEL

Stop writing advertising copy! Hurry up, dear, you'll be late for breakfast.

with a
the squeezed opens

Muriel exits. Jim sighs, turns back to the mirror and few deft strokes finishes shaving. As he reaches for water faucet, he encounters the tube of toothpaste, in the middle. Reacting with annoyance, he meticulously smoothes it out and rolls it up from the bottom. He shelf.

studies starts he quickly reacts starts for cabinet

the cabinet and gingerly places the tube on the top
The iodine bottle pops out. He grimly catches it, his problem, has a solution. With his right hand he slowly to close the mirror door. Just before it closes, slips the bottle into the cabinet with his left hand, slamming the mirror door, trapping the bottle. He masterfully at his triumph, picks up his robe and the door. As he reaches it, there is the SOUND of the opening and a crash as the bottle obviously hits the washstand. As Jim winces,

DISSOLVE

INT. THE BLANDINGS' BREAKFAST NOOK - DAY

Jim
paper, engrossed in taking accordingly folds it,

Narrow and small. The four Blandings are at breakfast, and Muriel each reading his section of the morning Betsy pasting a clipping in her notebook, Joan a magazine of popular science. As we come in, Gussie, off the orange juice, is squeezing by Jim who and automatically ducks his head as she passes. Jim uncomfortably turns the newspaper to another page, reacts with pained but controlled exasperation.

JIM

...Who did this?

INSERT NEWSPAPER, a section of which has been cut out.

BACK TO SCENE.

BETSY

(very matter-of-factly)

I did.

She holds out her hand to Joan, who, automatically, and without looking up hands her the salt.

JIM

I have repeatedly told you -- (ducking as Gussie comes back with coffee)
-- don't cut up the morning paper until I've had a chance to look at it!

BETSY

I'm sorry, father. It's necessary research.

passes it She hands the salt back to Joan who automatically to Muriel.

JIM

(with some sarcasm)
I suppose this is another of Miss Stellwagon's so-called Progressive Projects?

MURIEL

(using salt and handing it to Jim)
Now dear, there just isn't any point in sending your children to an expensive school if you're going to undermine the teacher's authority in your own dining room.

JIM

I'm not undermining anything. I happen to be in the advertising business and keeping abreast of the times is important to me.

MURIEL

And so is your children's education.

JIM

That's not the point.

MURIEL

It certainly is.

JIM

It certainly is not!

JOAN

(without looking up from her magazine)

Bicker, bicker, bicker.

JIM

You eat your cornflakes!

Jim ducks as Gussie passes back on her way to the kitchen.

MURIEL

(handing Joan toast)
Joan, every time your father and I have a lively discussion we aren't necessarily bickering.
(to Betsy; solicitously)
What is it, dear, another English composition?

BETSY

(taking toast from Joan)
Miss Stellwagon has assigned each of us to take a want ad and write a human interest theme about it.
(to Jim; passing toast to him)
I found one typical of the disintegration of our present society.

JIM

(taking toast, not looking up from his paper)
I wasn't aware of the fact that our society was disintegrating.

BETSY

I didn't expect you to be, father. Miss Stellwagon says that middle-class people like us are all too prone to overlook the pressures and tensions which befall the less fortunate members of our community.

Jim puts down the paper, turns to Muriel.

JIM

(with great restraint)
Muriel, I know it's asking a lot, but just one morning I would like to sit down and have breakfast without social significance!

Picks up his paper.

MURIEL

Jim, you really might take a little more interest in your children's education.

JOAN

(without looking up)
You can't squeeze blood from a turnip.

puts Jim reacts with painful resignation, folds his arms, down the paper, turns slowly to Betsy.

JIM

All right. All right. I'll listen.

BETSY

(picking up her scrapbook)
It's just twenty-four words. But in simple eloquence it mirrors a minor tragedy of our times.

JIM

(quietly)
Well?...

BETSY

(reading)
"Forced to sell. Farm dwelling, oak grove, apple orchard, trout stream, hay fields, four barns, seclusion, superb view, original beams, paved highway, acreage...
(with emotion)
Will sacrifice..."

Pause.

JIM

Go on.

BETSY

(simply) That's all.

JIM

That's all?!

BETSY

You don't see it, do you, father?

JIM

No. Fellow wants to sell a house so he puts an ad in the paper. What did you expect him to do, take it to the United Nations!

MURIEL

There must be more to it than that.
(to Betsy)
Isn't there, dear?

BETSY

Certainly, mother. What some people don't see is the whole sordid picture. A poor, honest farmer, pushed to the wall by hardship, soil erosion, mortgages, everybody gobbling, gobbling, gobbling, until finally, in desperation, he is "forced to sell," and stoops to the crass commercialism of newspaper advertising.

JIM

(muttering)
Oh, indeed... crass commercialism... advertising...

JOAN

(nose in her magazine)
Miss Stellwagon says advertising is a basically parasitic profession.

JIM

(with extreme control)
Oh, she does?

JOAN

Miss Stellwagon says that advertising makes people who can't afford it buy things they don't want with money they haven't got.

JIM

(elaborate sarcasm)
Perhaps your Miss Stellwagon is right. Perhaps I ought to get out of this "basically parasitic profession," which at the moment is paying for her very fancy tuition, those extra French lessons, her progressive summer camp and for that matter, the very braces on your teeth!

MURIEL

I wish you wouldn't discuss money in front of the children.

JIM

Why not, they spend enough of it!

JOAN

Bicker, bicker, bicker.

As Jim gives her a look and buries himself in his paper, the downstairs buzzer rings. Gussie enters, squeezes by Jim who automatically ducks, goes to the phone in b.g.

GUSSIE

Hello. Who?
(calls)
Miss Blandings, there's a Mr. Funkhauser wants to see you.

MURIEL

Funkhauser?
(remembers)
Oh, Mr. Funkhauser!

GUSSIE

That's what he says.

Muriel looks nervously at Jim who is preoccupied, reading his paper. Then she turns back to Gussie.

MURIEL

Uh -- better ask him to come up.

GUSSIE

(into phone)
Says to come up.

Gussie hangs up, squeezes by Jim, exits into the kitchen.
Pause.

MURIEL

(tentatively)

Oh -- uh -- darling, Mr. Funkhauser's here.

JIM

(looking up)
...Who?

MURIEL

You remember, Bunny Funkhauser, that clever young interior decorator we met at the Collins' cocktail party?

JIM

(distastefully)
What's he doing here?

MURIEL

(nervously)
Well, I imagine he's brought the -- uh -- estimates.

JIM

(blankly) ...Estimates?

MURIEL

(rapidly; to conceal a feeling of guilt)
Darling, you know how long we've said we've got to do something about this apartment, and, well, he called last week, and I had him come over, and he's got some simply wonderful ideas!

JIM

(quietly)
There couldn't be two Bunny Funkhausers, could there?

MURIEL

Why, no, dear.

JIM

Then this is the same clever young man who's responsible for that zebra-striped monstrosity in the Collins' living room?

MURIEL

That couch is terribly functional.

JIM

Phil Collins told me what he paid for all that function!

(angrily)

If you think I'm going to --

SOUND of doorbell ringing.

MURIEL

Darling, please!

(changing subject)

Children, you'll be late to school.

Run along and --

The children rise, pick up their school paraphernalia.

JOAN

Miss Stellwagon says that functionalism in modern furniture --

MURIEL

Never mind, dear.

She hustles Betsy and Joan toward the foyer as Jim rises.

INT. FOYER

Gussie has just admitted Mr. Funkhauser. He is a tall, slender, effete-looking, young man. He is loaded down with sketches, samples of wallpaper, bolts of material.

Betsy and Joan brush by him on their way out.

FUNKHAUSER

Good morning.

THE GIRLS

(with a sharp appraising look)

Hi.

As they rush out and the door closes, Jim and Muriel enter scene.

MURIEL

Good morning, Mr. Funkhauser. You remember Mr. Blandings?

FUNKHAUSER

But of course.

He sweeps by them into the living room, taking over completely.

INT. LIVING ROOM

FUNKHAUSER

You'll have to pardon my bursting in at this dreary hour -- (puts a sketch on a chair)

-- practically the middle of the night --

(puts wallpaper against mantel)

-- but I did so want to catch you in. I've been at it hammer and tongs all week and I'm just a mess --

(drapes bolt of chintz over high-backed chair)

-- but then Muriel and I thought we ought to talk it over with you before we take the plunge...

to for folds

Funkhauser looks briefly for a high object over which display his last bolt of chintz, finds none, settles Jim's shoulder over which he drapes the cloth, the flowing down in front. As Jim reacts:

FUNKHAUSER

(smoothing out folds on the chintz)

After all, it's your home, too, and it should reflect you. You know, Man's Castle, all that sort of thing.

Jim looks down at the chintz.

JIM

(ominously) Muriel!

MURIEL

(quickly)
Jim, just wait till you hear. He's got some wonderful ideas for the foyer.

FUNKHAUSER

Oh, that's out! All out! Changed the whole thing! I just couldn't live with it! I said to myself, "Bunny, what are the Blandings? How shall we do them?" And the answer was perfectly obvious. Very American, very grass roots, very blueberry pie -- that sort of thing.

JIM

(dark look at Muriel)

Mm.

Funkhauser fingers the material of a drape, disdainfully removes his hand.

FUNKHAUSER

Now first, let's dig into this living room of yours, it's really a dreary.

MURIEL

(quickly; to Jim)

We want this room to be very gay, dear. Something in bright reds, yellows and greens.

JIM

(appalled)

Red, yellow and green?!

FUNKHAUSER

Oh, come, Mr. Blandings, let's not run away from color.

JIM

Not running away --

(a lame joke)

-- just backing off a little.

FUNKHAUSER

Uh -- yes.

(brightly)

Now as I see our room, it's definitely Colonial. You know, cobbler's bench, breakfront, pie cooler, student lamp, hooked rug. But everything in good taste. It must not jump out at you and scream: "Look -- see how antique I am!"

JIM

Heaven forbid.

FUNKHAUSER

Of course, these things take imagination. You've simply got to be able to visualize.

JIM

(politely, removing chintz)

If you'll forgive me, Mr. Funkhauser, what I'd like to visualize -- at this dreary hour -- is how much is this all going to cost?

FUNKHAUSER

Well, really, I hesitate to say. After all -- (indicates)
-- by the time this wall is out we may find --

JIM

(reacting)
This wall is -- what?

FUNKHAUSER

Out. Source of light is from the east. Obviously if our room is to have any function at all --

JIM

You're going to tear out the wall?!

MURIEL

Dear, it's a wonderful notion.

FUNKHAUSER

Visualize three feet of leaded panes, the rest --

JIM

Can you give me a figure?

FUNKHAUSER

Well! Costs aren't what they used to be, you know, and --

JIM

Just a figure.

FUNKHAUSER

Materials are impossible, labor has just run wild --

JIM

Just an overall figure.

FUNKHAUSER

Well!... I shouldn't like to be tied down. But I suppose if you must have a figure, I'd say -- mm --

(lightly)

-- somewhere in the neighborhood of seven.

JIM

Mm... Seven.

FUNKHAUSER

(nodding)

Mm.

JIM

That would be seven... thousand?

FUNKHAUSER

Mm.

Jim looks at Muriel, considers.

JIM

(soberly)

We-ll. That seems fair.

(gathering up materials)

After all, we're not running away from color --

(picks up wallpaper)

-- and we are tearing out walls --

(picks up sketches)

Mr. Funkhauser, do you have a card?

MURIEL

Jim, we haven't even discussed the rest of the house.

JIM

We will, dear.

(leads the whole batch on Funkhauser)

FUNKHAUSER

(huffy)
Well, really, I --

JIM

(deftly steering him toward the door)
We'll talk it all out and then we'll get in touch with Bunny.

CAMERA TRUCKS with them to the door.

FUNKHAUSER

Well, really, I mean, I was under the impression we'd come to some decision today.

JIM

I'm sure we will.

FUNKHAUSER

We-ll!

JIM

So nice of you to come.
(puts Funkhauser's hat on his head) Good day.

And Funkhauser is gone. Jim closes the door, turns ominously.

MURIEL

(apprehensively)
Now darling, you -- you just don't go to a man like Funkhauser and ask how much it's going to cost before you even know what he's going to do!

JIM

No, that would be too logical! Seven thousand dollars! Blueberry pie! I wouldn't put seventy-five cents into this broken-down rat trap!

MURIEL

(sentimentally) It's our home, Jim. Betsy was practically born in this apartment.

JIM

That does not make it a national shrine!

(vehemently) Seven thousand dollars and not one word about closets.

MURIEL

Closets! You wouldn't even let him get to the bathroom!

JIM

I haven't got that kind of money!

MURIEL

The way you talk, Jim Blandings, you'd think I was some kind of congenital idiot!

JIM

Sometimes I'm beginning to wonder!

MURIEL

(furious)
You can just get out of here!

JIM

That's not a bad idea!

hat and a hat slamming bend emotions
the

He angrily jerks open the hall closet door, pulls his down from the shelf, several hat boxes, some ski boots tennis racket tumbling down on his head. Jim jams his onto his head, takes a deep breath and storms out, the door. Muriel walks over to the closet, is about to down and pick up a hatbox when all of her pent-up explode. She kicks the hat box into the closet, slams door, starts to cry.

DISSOLVE

EXT. RADIO CITY - ESTABLISHING SHOT - (STOCK)

DISSOLVE

INT. CORRIDOR OUTSIDE OF JIM'S OFFICE - DAY

Exiting from the elevator, Jim enters a door marked:

DASCOMB AND BANTON ADVERTISING

DISSOLVE

INT. JIM'S OFFICE - DAY

handiwork.

called

the got emotionally

guiltily

On the wall are various framed copies of Jim's
Most prominent are advertisements for a meat product
"Wham!" "A Whale of a Ham!" There is ample evidence of fact that Jim's most successful slogan is: "When you've the Whim - say 'Wham!'"

Jim enters, goes to his desk, sits down, still upset. He glances at a photograph of Muriel, looks away, then back.

JIM

(to photograph)

Sorry.

His secretary enters.

MARY

Good morning, Mr. Blandings.

JIM

(briefly)

'Morning.

MARY

You wanted to see the color copy from this month's House and Stream.

is

on the

She hands him a magazine. He looks at it perfunctorily, about to hand it back when his eye is caught by an ad back cover.

IN

INSERT THE BACK COVER - A COMMUNITY AND EXTOLLING LIFE THE COUNTRY

in chamber houses

INSERT THE BACK COVER - A community and extolling life
the country, sponsored by a group of realtors, local of commerce etc. Over a pastoral scene of lovely little checkering a rolling landscape are the words:

CITY
LIVE IN THE COUNTRY COME TO PEACEFUL CONNECTICUT TRADE SOOT FOR SYLVAN CHARM

In smaller type:

ACREAGE
CHOOSE YOUR OWN COMMUTING TIME HOUSES OLD AND NEW...

Over this:

MARY'S VOICE

Will that be all?

JIM - MARY.

Jim - Mary.

JIM

(looking up; blankly)

Hm?

MARY

Will that be all?

COMES
sound
Without answering he turns back to the ad. The CAMERA IN for a HEAD CLOSEUP as he studies the ad and on the track we hear:

BETSY'S VOICE

"Forced to sell. Farm dwelling, oak grove, apple orchard, trout stream, hay fields, four barns, original beams --"

As he looks up thoughtfully:

DISSOLVE

INT. JIM'S CAR - DAY - (PROCESS)

through
It is a convertible, the top down. Jim is driving Manhattan.

BILL'S VOICE

Well, that's the way it all started.
The ad was enough to convince Jim --

DISSOLVE

INT. THE CAR - DAY - (PROCESS)

the looks wait and Jim and Muriel - They are leaving Manhattan, entering Merritt Parkway. Muriel, wearing an orchid corsage, curiously at Jim. His answering gesture says, "Just see." Over this:

BILL'S VOICE

-- But Muriel was a little tougher.
I guess the corsage did it.

DISSOLVE

INT. THE CAR - DAY

real
of Jim, Muriel and Mr. Smith - They are driving through a beautiful Connecticut countryside. Mr. Smith, a local estate dealer, is of that shrewd Yankee breed which specializes in the understatement, underselling school salesmanship.

BILL'S VOICE

There they are, two little fish from New York -- out in the deep deep waters of Connecticut real estate.
That's Smith, the real estate salesman. Mighty shrewd cookie in a quiet sort of way. Never thought he'd get a bite this quick.

Smith looks speculatively at the Blandings.

BILL'S VOICE

Now he's sizing up the catch. "Mm.

Let's see. Convertible -- orchids -- must be pretty well fixed. Wonder if they're lookers or buyers?"

"Get hand Jim takes a deep breath, looks at Muriel as if to say, that air!" Muriel smiles with approval. Jim pats her affectionately. Smith reacts.

BILL'S VOICE

They're buyers.
(confidentially)
Yes, sir, Smith, looks like you're finally going to unload the old Hackett place. Now first thing is get 'em a little anxious.

picturesque- Jim slows down the car as they approach a rather with looking old Connecticut farmhouse. He and Muriel react head, approval, look questioningly at Smith. Smith shakes his you." "no," as though to say, "Not nearly good enough for

BILL'S VOICE

Th-a-a-t's right!

DISSOLVE

INT. THE CAR - DAY

and Jim, Muriel, Mr. Smith - They pass another house. Jim Muriel appraise it with interest, look at Smith.

BILL'S VOICE

Uh-uh, not yet.

Smith firmly shakes his head "no."

DISSOLVE

INT. THE CAR - DAY

Jim, Muriel and Mr. Smith - Another house.

BILL'S VOICE

Take it easy, Smith, give 'em a little more line.

Smith shakes his head "no".

DISSOLVE

INT. THE CAR - DAY

Jim, Muriel and Mr. Smith - The car pulls to a stop.

BILL'S VOICE

Now we're ready to gaff 'em.

SMITH

(proudly)

Well, folks, there she is -- the old Hackett Place.

The Blandings look off, react with interest and approval.

WHAT THEY SEE -- BURROWED INTO THE UPWARD SLOPE land a

the unsteady, seventy back are known as

What they see -- Burrowed into the upward slope of the is the old Hackett farmhouse. If the roof seems to sway little and the massive stone chimney to tilt a bit and overall condition of board and beam to be a trifle charge it up to age, which will be a hundred and years come next April. However, the overall effect is definitely one of picturesque rustic beauty. In the a series of barns and behind them the rolling hills Bald Mountain.

SMITH'S VOICE

Fifty mighty pretty little acres...

JIM, MURIEL AND SMITH.

JIM, MURIEL AND SMITH

MURIEL

(involuntarily)

It's simply charming!

Jim's look cautions against her over-enthusiasm.

MURIEL

That is, for an old house.

JIM

(casually)

Of course, you understand, Mr. Smith, we're just window shopping, so to speak. Nothing really definite in mind.

SMITH

Perfectly all right.

JIM

(studies house; with assumed indifference)

Mm. Not a bad-looking place, but it's certainly a lot older than anything we had in mind.

SMITH

She's no spring chicken --

(sagely)

-- but that's just what makes her such a buy.

of- They look at him curiously. Smith's attitude is matter-fact, almost without enthusiasm.

SMITH

This isn't just old timber, or a virgin stand oak grove other side of the trout stream, or a couple of fruit orchards... You're buying a piece of American history.

JIM

(interested in spite of himself)

You don't say! How's that?

SMITH

First year she was built, General Gates stopped right here to water his horses.

JIM

(impressed)

Oh! Old General Gates -- Civil War.

SMITH

Revolutionary War.

JIM

Oh. Oh, that General Gates. Hear that, honey, General Gates!

MURIEL

(with concern)

Wouldn't that make the house over a hundred years old?

SMITH

(proudly)

Hundred and seventy come next April.

The Blandings exchange a doubtful look which Smith catches.

SMITH

Now I'm not trying to sell you anything -- all I'm saying is that one of these days someone with a little vision and imagination's goin' to come along, and just steal this place --

(confidentially)

and I mean steal it.

The Blandings, as one, turn to the house with renewed interest. This is not lost on Smith.

SMITH

Mr. Blandings, I know you can look at that house and just about picture what a couple of coats of paint and a little pointing up here and there can do to it.

JIM

Mm.

The CAMERA MOVES TO a HEAD CLOSEUP of Jim as he begins to visualize

WHAT HE SEES

WHAT HE SEES - The Old Hackett Place suddenly DISSOLVES into lovely tweed is sleek, position.

the New Blandings' Place -- Jim's version. It is a country house. Massive. Masculine. Jim, in jodhpurs, coat, pipe and accompanied by two large Irish Setters, proudly surveying his property. He nonchalantly holds a beautiful shotgun in the most precisely correct

CLOSE SHOT - JIM'S FACE.

hear his

CLOSE SHOT - Jim's face. His lips don't move but we voice.

JIM'S VOICE

Hm. Wonder what he meant by "steal?"

THREE SHOT.

THREE SHOT.

SMITH

And I guess I don't have to tell you, Mrs. Blandings, what a woman's touch could do to a place like this.

MURIEL

Well --

to

CAMERA MOVES to a HEAD CLOSEUP of Muriel as she starts visualize.

WHAT SHE SEES - THE OLD HACKETT PLACE

dainty, window and garden."
admiring Lansdale

WHAT SHE SEES - The Old Hackett Place DISSOLVES into a feminine cottage with criss-cross curtains at the a lovely little white rail fence enclosing "her Muriel, in delightful gingham, is in the garden, her latest triumph - the largest rose ever grown in County.

CLOSE SHOT - MURIEL'S FACE.

don't

CLOSE SHOT - Muriel's face. Her face is soft. Her lips move but we hear:

MURIEL'S VOICE

It is a nice old house. It just needs someone to love it, that's all.

THREE SHOT

THREE SHOT

SMITH

Yes, sir, you've certainly got to visualize.

begins

CAMERA MOVES to a HEAD CLOSEUP of Smith as he, too, to visualize.

WHAT HE SEES - THE OLD HACKETT PLACE.

SUPERIMPOSED

WHAT HE SEES - The Old Hackett Place. Suddenly over it in large figures is:

$9,000.00

GROUP SHOT - SMITH LOOKS AT HIM AND MURIEL looking tenderly

GROUP SHOT - Smith looks at Him and Muriel who are at the house with unabashed affection. Jim's arm goes around Muriel's waist. Smith looks back at the house.

WHAT HE SEES - THE OLD HACKETT PLACE.

WHAT HE SEES - The Old Hackett Place. The

$9,000.00

is quickly replaced by:

$11,000.00

GROUP SHOT.

GROUP SHOT.

SMITH

(brightly)

Shall we go up and take a look at her?

MURIEL

(a little too casual)

Well -- I -- suppose as long as we're here...

JIM

(same)

I guess it doesn't hurt to take a look.

As Smith precedes them up the path toward the house:

MURIEL

(sotto)

It does have possibilities. Do you think we can get it?

JIM

(sotto)

Like taking candy from a baby.

MURIEL

(same)

Now don't lose your head.

JIM

(same)

Shh. Just keep quiet and let me handle this.

As they enter the house:

JIM

Tell me, Smith, what kind of a price is the owner asking for this old place?

DISSOLVE

EXT. THE OLD HACKETT PLACE - ANOTHER ANGLE - DAY

house. As Smith
road.

Jim and Muriel precede Smith as they exit from the Jim and Muriel carry on a sotto voce conversation, looks off with some concern in the direction of the

MURIEL

It's wonderful, Jim! That master bedroom with those two closets!

JIM

Shh!

MURIEL

Funkhauser could do wonders with this --

JIM

(firmly)

Funkhauser will have nothing to do with this house! Shh!

Smith's face suddenly brightens as a weatherbeaten old car appears, turns up the driveway, stops.

HACKETT

(calling)

Hi, George!

SMITH

Hi, Eph!

(to the Blandings;

feigned surprise)

What do you know, it's Eph Hackett, owner of the place!

JIM

(pleased)

Well, you don't say.

Eph Hackett gets out of the car, saunters over. Hackett is a middle-aged, rural-looking, taciturn New Englander

SMITH

Eph, this is Mr. and Mrs. Blandings -- from New York City.

HACKETT

Howdy.

THE BLANDINGS

How do you do?

MURIEL

You certainly have a lovely place here, Mr. Hackett.

HACKETT

(briefly)

Ye-ap.

JIM

(pleasantly)

Mr. Hackett, we've just been talking to Smith here about -- uh -- taking the old place off your hands.

almost Hackett exchanges the briefest of looks with Smith who imperceptibly shakes his head "no."

HACKETT

(firmly)

Ain't for sale!

As the Blandings react with dismay:

SMITH

(smoothly)

Why don't you folks just go out in back and take a look at the orchard?

The He gives them a wink which says, "Just leave it to me."
Blandings exchange a look, turn and walk off.

HACKETT

How'm I doin', George?

SMITH

Nice timin', Eph. Think we got something here.

HACKETT

They the same people you showed it to in nineteen-thirty-eight?

SMITH

They were lookers -- this is the real thing.

HACKETT

If they got five thousand dollars on 'em. don't let 'em get away.

SMITH

They already offered ten.

HACKETT

(mildly)
Y'don't say... What's my asking price?

SMITH

Fifteen...

HACKETT

A mite stiff...

SMITH

I've got 'em measured.
(mellower) They're gonna take the place for -- (turns, looks back at house)
eleven thousand.

HACKETT

Make it eleven thousand five hundred fifty.

SMITH

Odd kind of figure.

HACKETT

Might as well take the commission out of them instead of me.

As Smith raises a knowing eyebrow:

DISSOLVE

INT. THE BLANDINGS' BREAKFAST NOOK - DAY

Muriel and the two children are having breakfast. Jim enters in high spirits. During this scene we repeat the business of passing, etc. used in the previous breakfast scene.

JIM

(singing gaily to
"Home On The Range")
"Home, home in Connecticut With a closet to hang up your petticut..."

MURIEL

(as he seats himself)
...Jim?

JIM

(going on, as he places his napkin in his lap)
"No hustle or fuss No Fifth Avenue bus --"

MURIEL

Uh -- Jim?

JIM

Hm?

MURIEL

I was just wondering, dear. Ten thousand dollars is such an awful lot to offer -- back at Jim looks suspiciously at her, at the children, then her.

MURIEL

That is, for two people who don't know anything at all about real estate, or anything...

(Jim's look darkens)

I mean, don't you think perhaps we should have asked someone's professional advice?

JIM

Like... say... a lawyer?

MURIEL

Well, Bill knows about these things and --

JIM

Muriel, for once in my life I'm going to make one small decision, on my own, without the legalistic machinations of Mr. Bill Cole.

MURIEL

It seems very peculiar that when your very best friend happens to be one of the very cleverest young lawyers in New York City --

JIM

Muriel, I don't want to hear another word about Bill Cole!

(turns to children)
Well, did your mother tell you about the house?

BETSY

Yes.

JIM

Well?

JOAN

Miss Stellwagon says the current craze for modernizing old farmhouses is a form of totem worship.

JIM

(with great restraint)
Did it ever occur to you two that there may be some remote, intangible subjects upon which your Miss Irma Stellwagon is not the final authority?

JOAN

Why don't we buy a Solaxion house?

JIM

...You know it's just barely conceivable -- What kind of a house?

JOAN

Solaxion. It's built on a mast like a tent and it revolves with the sun.

JIM

Oh, it... revolves... with the sun?

JOAN

That's right.

JIM

Who lives next door -- Buck Rogers?!

JOAN

It's the only practical way to live.
When a new model comes out you trade
the old one in like a used car.

JIM

(plaintively) Muriel --

MURIEL

Children, you haven't even seen this house yet.

BETSY

Personally, I'd like a Crane Mobile home. It comes all folded up and all you do is plug it in for electricity and water and --

JIM

Now just a minute!

(to Muriel)

What kind of children are these?

(to girls)

Do you want to spend the rest of your lives in chromium tents and portable merry-go-rounds? This house was built before our country became a nation. It has dignity. It's -- it's -- Gussie enters with a letter.

GUSSIE

(handing it to Jim)

Special delivery, Mr. Blandings.

JIM

(with suppressed; excitement)

From Smith!

As he eagerly opens it and reads, his face falls.

JIM

Mm.

MURIEL

Well?

JIM

(reading)

"I have conveyed your offer of ten thousand dollars to Mr. Hackett and am sorry to say he is not interested. However, I feel..."

MURIEL

Oh, dear. Maybe we should have gone a few dollars higher.

JIM

(stoutly)

He's bluffing. Simple as that.

JOAN

For ten thousand dollars we could get a Rockford Trailer and a Zamboni Power Unit. It's kitchen, bathroom and air conditioning all rolled up into --

Jim gives her a weary look, turns to Muriel.

JIM

(firmly)

Muriel, I'll let him push me to ten thousand, two hundred, but not a penny more!

DISSOLVE

JIM'S COST CHART

bisecting $5000 and exactly across
the

INSERT JIM'S COST CHART - Rising diagonally and the chart is a line graduated in scale starting at running up to around $17,000. Resting on the line at $10,000 is a miniature of the old house. Fluttering the scene from left to right is a letter from Smith on stationery of the Lansdale Realty Co.

miniature of the

As we see the letter and hear the voice of Smith, figures of Smith and Hackett appear at the lower side house. Their shoulders start pushing the house up the graduated scale. Over this:

SMITH'S VOICE

"Dear Mr. Blandings: While your offer of ten thousand two hundred is still not acceptable to Ephemus Hackett --
"

across
A letter on Danton & Bascomb's stationery flutters

Jim
Over

the screen from right to left. A miniature figure of appears above the house, desperately pushing it back.
this, we hear:

JIM'S VOICE

"Dear Mr. Smith: You may inform Mr.
Hackett that the very highest I could possibly go --"

first house
the

As a succession of letters flutter across the screen, from left to right and then from right to left, and the is jockeyed back and forth, they are punctuated with following lines:

SMITH'S VOICE

"Dear Friend Blandings --"

JIM'S VOICE

"My dear Friend Smith --"

SMITH'S VOICE

"Dear Blandings --!"

JIM'S VOICE

"Dear Smith - !"

unperturbed
man

Throughout this Smith's voice remains bland and while Jim's has the desperate, frenetic quality of a being slowly pushed to the wall.

firmly on front

The Special Effect concludes with the house finally and at rest on the preordained $11,550. As the antagonists both sides of the house relax, Smith reaches around in of the house and shakes hands with Jim. It's a deal!

beckons embrace,

About halfway through when the going gets tough, Jim Muriel to help in the losing fight. As they now
Smith and Hackett shake hands in mutual congratulation.

DISSOLVE

DOOR

Door - on it is printed:

MR. COLE PRIVATE

DISSOLVE

INT. BILL COLE'S OFFICE - DAY

leather-desk series
and thoughtfully.

A successful lawyer's office, the walls crowded with bound books. Jim and Muriel are seated facing the large desk behind which sits Bill Cole. Bill finishes reading a series of papers, the sum total of correspondence between Jim and Mr. Smith. He sets down the papers, leans back thoughtfully. Jim and Muriel look at him with nervous but eager anticipation.

JIM

(not too sure)
What do you think, Bill? Steal, huh?

BILL

(drily)
It certainly is.

Jim looks triumphantly at Muriel.

BILL

Perhaps "steal" is an understatement -- "swindle" might be a little more appropriate.

JIM

(with pride)
Well, it wasn't much, Bill. I just saw a good thing and I -- (take) What do you mean?

BILL

Every time you get a little tight

you weep on my shoulder about the advertising business and how it forces a sensitive soul like yourself to make a living by bamboozling the American public.

(picks up Smith's correspondence)

I would say that a small part of this victimized group has now redressed the balance.

JIM

What are you talking about?

BILL

You! You've been taken to the cleaners and you don't even know your pants are off!

MURIEL

Dear, I told you. I said we should call Bill --

JIM

Never mind, Muriel!

(to Bill; challengingly)

All right, just what's wrong with this deal?

BILL

First time around you offered ten thousand dollars for fifty acres, right?

JIM

What of it?

BILL

That's two hundred dollars an acre. I know that part of Connecticut and one hundred dollars an acre is standard top-gouge price to city slickers. When the natives sell to each other it's around forty or less.

MURIEL

Forty dollars an acre!

JIM

The man's entitled to a fair profit.

BILL

Not two hundred and eighty-four percent.

(indicates papers)

And besides, you're not getting fifty acres, you're only getting thirty-five, more or less.

JIM

Where does it say that?

BILL

(picks up letter)

I refer to a rather obscure post-script on the back of the second letter from Friend Smith.

He hands the letter to Muriel.

MURIEL

(reading)

"Incidentally, Mr. Hackett has been a little over-optimistic about the acreage. It will probably survey somewhere in the neighborhood of thirty-five acres, more or less, but I feel sure..."

JIM

(on the defensive)

All right, so it's thirty-five! What's the difference? Do you know how many tennis courts you can get on thirty-five acres?

BILL

You're not spending eleven thousand five hundred dollars for tennis courts!

JIM

That's not the point!

BILL

(very businesslike)

That's precisely the point. We're going to write this Hackett a strong letter and tell him he can either kick in with those fifteen acres, reduce the price, or find another sucker.

JIM

(rising emotion)
We'll do no such thing! I'm not going to queer this deal over fifteen broken-down acres!

MURIEL

(to Bill)
We were just going window shopping and so far it's cost us eleven thousand five hundred dollars and they even made us pay the commission!

JIM

You don't understand business.

BILL

You mean extortion.

As Jim turns on Bill and is about to answer him
explosively:

MURIEL

(thoughtfully)
I wonder if we could get another two year lease on the apartment?

JIM

(heatedly)
Now wait a minute! You can't measure everything on a slide rule. This house has certain intangibles.

BILL

Like what, for instance?

JIM

Like antique value, for instance! It just so happens that General Gates stopped right there, at that very house, to water his horses.

BILL

I don't care if General Grant dropped in for a scotch and soda -- you're still getting rocked!

JIM

That was a different war!

MURIEL

I think Bill's absolutely right.

JIM

(struggling to contain himself; quietly)

Let me explain something. To both of you. For fifteen years I've been cooped up in a four room cracker box! Just getting shaved in the morning entitles a man to the Congressional Medal for bravery.

BILL

That doesn't make this a good buy.

JIM

Bill -- Muriel and I have found what I am not ashamed to call our Dream House. It's like a fine painting.
You buy it with your heart, not your head. You don't ask, how much was the canvas, how much was the paint?
You look at it and you say, "It's beautiful... I want it," and if it costs a few pennies more you pay it -- and gladly -- because you love it and you can't measure the things you love in dollars and cents!

Muriel looks at Jim, impressed, her face softening with compassion.

JIM

(emotionally spent)

Well -- that's how I feel about this place. And when I sign those papers Saturday, I can look the world in the face and say, "It's mine! My house! My home! My thirty-five acres!"

MURIEL

(coming over; moved, touched)

Our house. Our home. Our thirty-five acres...

They tenderly kiss.

BILL

...more or less...

On Jim's reaction:

DISSOLVE

EXT. LANSDALE COUNTY COURTHOUSE - DAY

Comprehensive Shot showing village green of a small, typical,
quaint New England town.

DISSOLVE

INT. RECORDS ROOM LANSDALE COUNTY COURTHOUSE - DAY

Old Judge Quarles is reading from the title deed, the proceedings almost over. Jim stands in front of the bench flanked by Muriel and Bill. Mr. Smith and Hackett are
the only other people present. As the Judge drones on, Jim
and Muriel exchange a smile. Jim squeezes her hand intimately.

JUDGE QUARLES

(reading)

"...thence along said stonewall fence forming the East boundary of said Lansdale Road, N 20° 27' E, 21.84 feet to the end of said stonewall fence, thence along a wire fence, N 16° 31' W, 78.66 feet to a dead twenty-inch chestnut tree, thence westward to said stonewall fence, to a total of thirty-one and a half acres --"

JIM

(reacting)

What was that? How many acres?

Judge Quarles looks up impatiently at the interruption.

BILL

(precisely)

Thirty-one and a half.

JIM

(to Hackett)

I was under the impression your property was thirty-five acres, Mr.
Hackett.

HACKETT

It is... more or less.

Bill looks significantly at Jim.

SMITH

You see, Mr. Blandings, when you signed the purchase agreement it was subject to traced map attached. Surveyed to an even thirty-one and a half acres.

his Jim turns to Bill for affirmation. Bill soberly nods head, "yes."

JUDGE QUARLES

Anything wrong?

BILL

It's nothing, Your Honor, just a few less tennis courts.

Jim gives Bill a sour look as the Judge continues:

JUDGE QUARLES

(with ministerial resonance)

"...to have and to hold to him, the said Grantee, his heirs and assigns to his and their own proper use and benefit forever."

beatific moment
pause:
During this, and as a shaft of sunlight hits them, a look comes across the faces of Jim and Muriel. For a it has become their wedding day. After a momentary

JUDGE QUARLES

(very businesslike)

Subject to a six thousand dollar mortgage held by Ephemus Whittaker Hackett...

As the Blandings are startled back to grim reality:

DISSOLVE

EXT. RURAL COUNTRYSIDE - DAY

Cole leads is a

LONG SHOT - The Blandings' car. The Blandings and Bill driving along. They approach a fork in the road which leads to a very old covered New England bridge. On the bridge is a sign which reads:

SHRUNK MILLS

2 Mi.

They pause, turn, go through the bridge.

INT. THE CAR - (PROCESS)

there

As they drive through the dark interior of the bridge there is an appropriate rattling and rumbling of the ancient timbers.

EXT. THE OPPOSITE SIDE OF THE BRIDGE

road to the shakes
to

There is another fork in the road. Muriel points to the road to the right. Jim shakes his head, points to the road left. Muriel points to the right. Jim emphatically shakes his head, puts the car in gear, drives off on the road to the left.

LONG SHOT - THE CAR

stops,

LONG SHOT - the car. It goes up to the top of a hill, starts up, disappears.

DISSOLVE

EXT. A ROAD - DAY

at

As the car approaches, the CAMERA discloses it is back at the same covered bridge. The car stops.

INT. THE CAR

Jim reacts with annoyance, mops his brow.

BILL

(drily)

Congress ought to pass a law. When a man buys a house in Lansdale County there's a prize -- he gets ten percent off if he can find it.

EXT. THE BRIDGE

go
Jim backs up and, over Muriel's protestation that they right, turns the car left.

DISSOLVE

LONG SHOT - THE CAR

disappears.
LONG SHOT - the car. It drives up an empty road,

DISSOLVE

EXT. A ROAD - DAY

back
"SHRUNK
As the car approaches, the CAMERA reveals it is again at the old covered bridge. The sign still reads:
MILLS - 2 Mi."

INT. THE CAR - DAY

Jim and Muriel look at each other with disgust and resignation.

JIM

What in the world are "Shrunk Mills?"

BILL

They are probably mills that have shrunk.

MURIEL

Well, you certainly aren't much of a help.

BILL

(wearily)

Look -- you really want to find that house of yours -- it's no problem.

They look at him curiously.

BILL

Just pretend you're one of General
Gates' horses and you're thirsty...
Now where would you go for a drink of water?

turns
Jim looks at him darkly, drives through the bridge, right, as Muriel looks slightly triumphant.

DISSOLVE

EXT. THE OLD HACKETT PLACE - DAY

house,
Blandings
Jim, Muriel and Bill stand a little distance from the looking at it. A vast lilac spreads across it. The are in quiet rapture, and it is Bill who speaks first.

BILL

(frank and open)
Well, I must admit it's a very beautiful thing.

MURIEL

(misty)
The house and the lilac are just the same age, Bill; if the lilac can live and be so old, so can the house.
It just needs someone to love it,
that's all.

react:
Three shingles slide from the roof. As Jim and Muriel

BILL

It's a good thing there are two of you -- one to love it and one to hold it up.

As Jim gives him a look:

BILL

What'd your engineer say when he checked over the foundation and that roof?

JIM

Who needs engineers? This isn't a train, you know.

BILL

I just saw it move.

JIM

This house has been standing since the second year of the Continental Congress. You take one look at it and shingles start to fall off!

nearly
As if on cue, a few more shingles slide off the roof, hitting Jim.

BILL

(solicitously)

Look -- let me do you a favor. I've got a client, crackerjack structural engineer, Joe Apollonio; he practically built the George Washington Bridge single-handed.

JIM

Thanks a lot, but we're not building a bridge.

BILL

He's the fellow who advised the Government not to raise the Normandie -- they didn't listen to him, cost them five million dollars.

JIM

You have my word, if I were raising the Normandie, I wouldn't make a move without Apollonio.

(indicates door)

Now would you like to come inside and look around?

BILL

(a skeptical look at the roof)

No thanks, I'll just stay out in the car and listen to "Life Can Be Beautiful."

As Jim opens the door and disappears, there is a crash, turns followed by a series of other crashes. Muriel looks in, back to Bill.

MURIEL

I think you'd better contact Mr.
Apollonio.

DISSOLVE

EXT. THE OLD HACKETT PLACE - DAY opens, and Near the front entrance. After a moment, the door is the Blandings and Mr. Apollonio emerge. Jim, limping, York aided and abetted by a cane. Apollonio is a stolid, New and construction man, replete with derby, blue serge suit, they cigar. A short rule sticks out of a back pocket. As Apollonio emerge, the Blandings are hopefully enthusiastic; is thoughtfully noncommittal.

MURIEL

It has charm, hasn't it, Mr.
Apollonio?

APOLLONIO

(through his cigar)
Uh-huh.

JIM

Of course, any small changes would have to conform with the character of the countryside.

APOLLONIO

(through his cigar)
Mm-hmm.

MURIEL

And yet still be functional.

house, Apollonio casually walks over to the corner of the by kicks an exposed beam. It crumbles, apparently rotted him termites. Two shingles fall off. The Blandings watch anxiously.

APOLLONIO

(gazing upward; oblivious)

Uh-huh.

Muriel, As he thoughtfully rubs his chin, Jim, followed by limps his way over to him.

JIM

Well, uh, what's your professional opinion?

back at Apollonio looks at the Blandings, at the house, then the Blandings. He takes the cigar from his mouth.

APOLLONIO

Tear it down.

JIM

(appalled)

Tear it down??!

APOLLONIO

If your chimney was shot and your sills was okay, I'd say go ahead, fix her up. If your sills was shot and your chimney was okay, again I'd say go ahead, fix her up. But your sills are shot and your chimney is shot.

squares During this speech Apollonio picks up a wooden frame, looks it with a pocket square, levels it on a fence, and through it at the house.

APOLLONIO

(beckoning)

Take a look at the way she sags.

The Blandings step over, look through the frame.

WHAT THEY SEE.

slants,

What they see. Outlined against the frame, the house sagging perceptibly.

THREE SHOT AS THE BLANDINGS REACT WITH SOME DISMAY

THREE SHOT as the Blandings react with some dismay.

APOLLONIO

So I say don't throw good money after bad -- tear it down.

JIM

(coolly) Thanks a lot.

APOLLONIO

It's okay.

He tips his hat, walks out of scene.

JIM

(bitterly)
Bill Cole and his experts!

MURIEL

(bitterly)
Darling, we'll get our own experts.

DISSOLVE

EXT. THE OLD HACKETT HOUSE - DAY

with

The Blandings have just finished surveying the house Mr. Simpson, another expert.

BILL'S VOICE

And so they got their own experts.
Mr. Simpson said --

SIMPSON

Tear it down.

The Blandings look at each other.

FAST

DISSOLVE

EXT. THE OLD HACKETT HOUSE - DAY

with
The Blandings have just finished examining the house
Mr. Murphy, another expert.

BILL'S VOICE

On the other hand, Mr. Murphy said --

MURPHY

I think you'd better tear it down.

The Blandings smile feebly.

FAST

DISSOLVE

EXT. THE OLD HACKETT HOUSE - DAY

The Blandings and Jones, another expert.

BILL'S VOICE

And then just to be a wee bit different, Mr. Jones said --

JONES

(firmly; deep bass voiced)

Tear it down!

The Blandings are now considerably shaken.

DISSOLVE

A SHINGLE.

A shingle. It reads in neat, conservative lettering:

HENRY L. SIMMS

ARCHITECT

BILL'S VOICE

And that's how our friend, Mr. Simms, came into it.

DISSOLVE

INT. HENRY L. SIMMS' LIVING ROOM - DAY

Jim, Muriel, Simms. The room is in quiet, good taste, a flagstone fireplace, modern steel casement windows, window

photographs room.

seats, etc. The walls are crammed with books and of Simms' handiwork. There are a couple of gold medal citations of his work conspicuously spaced around the

Englander, thoughtfully
Hackett
the

Simms is a tweedy, pipe-smoking, conservative New a distinguished-looking local architect. He puffs on his pipe as he looks at a photograph of the old place, an exact duplicate of the shot we saw through the window frame.

SIMMS

Of course you could fix up that old house. You can fix up any structure that's still standing. The sills and floors couldn't be worse, I grant you, and I guess you'd have to jack up that west corner at least three feet to make it level. Need new chimney. New roof. Complete new plumbing.

(sigh)

Too bad you didn't buy it ten years ago. Could have fixed it up in jig time then, and it would have made some sense.

JIM

(nervously nibbling at his nails)

Uh-huh... mm-hmmm... uh-huh.

SIMMS

Fact is, before you're through, it would be less expensive to tear the old place down and build a new one, same size.

JIM

Mm. New house...

(as the notion sinks in, becomes attractive)

New house.

MURIEL

(to Simms, with pleasant incredulity)

You mean... for the same money... we could build a brand new house?

SIMMS

It certainly wouldn't cost any more.

JIM

(soberly)

Hm... New house...

He turns and looks thoughtfully at Muriel who raises an interested eyebrow. Then, to Simms:

JIM

(tentatively)

Just... what sort of thing do you have in mind?

SIMMS

Well, I imagine the type of house you'd want would be something in quiet good taste, two story, frame and brick veneer construction -- modern, but of course fitting in with the architectural traditions of the countryside.

JIM

Well, I -- What do you think, Muriel?

MURIEL

I think it sounds fine.

SIMMS

Perhaps you'd like to see a basic floor plan --

(reaches into file behind him)

-- something like this.

him,
the
Simms places the basic floor plan on the desk before the Blandings moving around, flanking him. They examine the plan with interest.

WHAT THEY SEE -- THE PLAN.

two
As he
What they see -- the plan. A simple master plan of a story house, the names of the various rooms indicated.

the talks, we see Simms' hand, holding a pencil, point out various rooms

SIMMS

First floor. Living room, study, dining room, kitchen, service porch, maid's room -- upstairs three family bedrooms with two adjoining baths.

THREE SHOT. THE BLANDINGS PRAISE THE PLAN seen THREE SHOT. The Blandings praise the plan with the uncompromising expertness of two people who have never such a plan before in their lives.

MURIEL

It's very nice, I'm sure, but -- uh -- well -- doesn't it seem just a little bit conventional?

JIM

Yes, Simms, if we were going to build a house we want it -- well, you know -- just a little bit different.

SIMMS

(he's heard all this before)
Yes, of course.

JIM

Now, for instance -- (takes Simms' pencil)

THE DRAWING BOARD.

THE DRAWING BOARD. Jim's pencil traces as he talks.

JIM'S VOICE

-- here in the study if we could just push out this wall a little -- and put in a built-in bar we could --

MURIEL'S VOICE

Excuse me, dear --

she Her hand takes the pencil from his, starts to trace as talks. Jim's fingers drum with the beginnings of impatience.

MURIEL'S VOICE

These bedrooms. They do seem rather small. And, of course we'd have to have a little dressing room -- and --

Muriel's

As she draws it in, Jim's hand takes the pencil. fingers drum nervously.

JIM'S VOICE

And closets, Simms, lots of closets.
(traces them in)
If there's one thing this family needs, it's closets.

SIMMS' VOICE

(as his hand reaches for the pencil)
If I might make a suggestion --

But Muriel's hand reaches the pencil first.

MURIEL'S VOICE

(as she draws them in)
And bathrooms, Mr. Simms. Each bedroom must have at least one bathroom.

SIMMS' VOICE

But that would be four bathrooms, Mrs. Blandings -- (his hand reaches for the pencil)
I think I'd better point out to you -- fingers

Jim's hand reaches the pencil before Simms. Now Simms' and Muriel's drum in unison.

JIM'S VOICE

Just a minute. Do you think -- (tracing) we might manage a little playroom in the basement, nothing tremendous, you know, something like this --

SIMMS' VOICE

(as his hand reaches for the pencil; cautiously)
Well, it's always possible, but at the moment our fundamental problem --

But Muriel's hand has the pencil.

MURIEL'S VOICE

(as she traces)

And I've always wanted a little sewing room upstairs -- (Jim's and Simms' fingers drum impatiently)

You know, a little utility room where I can be alone, and sew, or sulk, or on a rainy afternoon...

JIM'S VOICE

(as his hand takes pencil)

Pardon me, dear. On that playroom, Simms, not too small. You know, plenty of room for ping-pong, darts, nice big poker table...

SIMMS' VOICE

(as his hand reaches for another pencil)

If you don't mind, I --

But Muriel has reached the pencil first. As she and Jim sketch hear:
simultaneously and the scene begins to DISSOLVE, we

MURIEL'S VOICE

...And off the kitchen, I'd like a little flower sink just to putter around in...

JIM'S VOICE

...And a terrace off the study, with an opening and little outdoor fireplace...

DISSOLVE

THE DRAWING BOARD - THE ORIGINAL PLANS

THE DRAWING BOARD - The original plans are lost in a maze of the Blandings' extensions, alterations and additions.

THREE SHOT - THE THREE ARE SOMEWHAT EXHAUSTED

THREE SHOT - The three are somewhat exhausted, silently looking at the plans. Simms wearily runs his hand through his hair.

SIMMS

(delicately)

We-ll... let's just see what we have here. In the first place --

THE DRAWING BOARD - SIMMS'

THE DRAWING BOARD - Simms' pencil indicates as he talks.

SIMMS' VOICE

-- I'm afraid you've got the upstairs about twice as big as the downstairs.

JIM'S VOICE

It's all those bathrooms.

MURIEL'S VOICE

It is not, it's all those closets.

THREE SHOT.

THREE SHOT.

SIMMS

By extending this breakfast room you've eliminated the possibility of any stairs going to the second floor.

JIM

Oh, you can just shove those stairs in anywhere.

SIMMS

(patiently; almost paternally)

And, Mrs. Blandings, on that sewing room, the way you have it now, the chimney stack would come up right through the middle of the room, leaving you with something in the shape of a square doughnut.

(tactfully)

Which, of course, might be very warm in winter, but otherwise of doubtful utility.

MURIEL

You could always move the chimney somewhere else, couldn't you?

SIMMS

We-ll...

(rising; resigned to his fate but tactful)

Look, I think I know just about what you two have in mind. Why don't I go ahead with some preliminary plans and --

JIM

(hearty)

You do that, Simms, but remember, we've got to hold it down to ten thousand.

SIMMS

(candid)

That, I can tell you right now, is impossible. Even with a considerable trimming of the things you've indicated, I don't see how we can bring it in for less than twelve or twelve-five.

JIM

Twelve-five!

(looks at Muriel;
then)

Well, I guess we're not going to quibble about a few pennies one way or the other.

MURIEL

(can't resist)

No, you'll find Mr. Blandings never quibbles about pennies.

SIMMS

And -- uh -- have you any notions about how you'd like the old place taken down?

JIM

(a rueful joke)

Why don't we just blow on it?

SIMMS

(wry smile)
There's a good local house wrecker.
I'll have him contact you.

Jim expansively puts his arm around Simms' shoulders.

JIM

Fine. You just shoot ahead with those plans, and remember, try to keep it down to ten, ten-five.

SIMMS

(doubtfully)
Well -- we'll try.

As the Blandings walk to the door:

JIM

There's one good thing about getting that old relic down. Those original beams and everything -- this time somebody pays us.

As they go out the door:

DISSOLVE

(PROCESS

EXT. ROAD NEAR OLD HACKETT HOUSE - DAY - WINTER - MATTE SHOT)

trees. In the
the
of about.

Old Hackett house matted to show winter sky, bare the f.g. bare ground with patches of snow. Eph Hackett is standing with one of the wreckers. In b.g. we see the frame of the old house, firmly intact, chimney still standing within it. There are mountains shingles, splintered boards and other rubbish, piled The piles are reasonably neat and sorted.

HACKETT

Them beams is worth money. You payin' him, or he payin' you?

WRECKER

He's payin' me.

HACKETT

How much?

WRECKER

(hesitating)

A thousand.

HACKETT

A thousand!

WRECKER

He squawked, but he paid.

HACKETT

(drily)

Hmm. I guess maybe I got a little somethin' comin' too.

As he starts out of scene:

VOICE

Okay, boys, let her go!

Tractors attached to chains and cables start to pull.

MINIATURE SHOT

MINIATURE SHOT - What is left of the house collapses.

EXT. HILL OVERLOOKING THE OLD HACKETT PLACE - PROCESS

OF

MATTE OR MINIATURE SHOT

Jim and Muriel are standing there, having watched the demolition. As the dust settles:

JIM

(sigh)

Well, so far it's cost us thirteen thousand, three hundred and twenty-nine dollars and forty-five cents.

MURIEL

But we've got the nicest vacant lot in the state of Connecticut.

They exchange a look of mixed emotions.

DISSOLVE

SIMMS' NEW PRELIMINARY PLANS

workmanlike,
INSERT SIMMS' NEW PRELIMINARY PLANS - Fresh and a few small sections crossed out where cuts have been indicated.

SIMMS' VOICE

(wearily)
Something will have to give somewhere, that I know.

The CAMERA ANGLE WIDENS to disclose:

INT. THE BLANDINGS' LIVING ROOM - NIGHT

plans.
Blade
Jim, Muriel and Simms are going over the preliminary Betsy and Joan are present, Betsy reading the Lansdale and Joan reading a science book.

MURIEL

It's impossible. I don't see how we can cut another inch.

JIM

Honey, you heard Simms. As the house stands now it's over fifteen thousand dollars!

MURIEL

Well, it just doesn't seem possible -- (afterthought) for a house with such small rooms.

SIMMS

(patiently)
Mrs. Blandings, I've already explained. It's not only the size of the rooms so much as it is the number.
You see, our primary problem is one of cubage --

JIM

That's right, dear, cubage.

MURIEL

What's that?

JIM

Oh --

(sorry he got into it) just a figure of speech.

MURIEL

But what does it mean?

JIM

(a little irritably) Cubage. It's just the number of cubic feet that -- (lost, lamely)
-- go into a cubic foot. Go on, Simms.

SIMMS

(consulting plans)
Now is it absolutely essential for each of your daughters to have her own room with two closets and a separate bath?

JIM

(a look at the girls; clearing his throat)
Yes. You see, er, my daughters are, er, approaching womanhood, and, er --

SIMMS

(brief look at the girls)
I hadn't realized they were approaching it quite so fast.
(to Jim)
Perhaps what you need is not so much a house as a series of little bungalows.

JIM

Hmmm.
(examining plans)
What about that silly flower sink?
We could eliminate that.

MURIEL

I beg your pardon.

JIM

Or that sewing room upstairs, that's certainly a waste.

MURIEL

If we're going to eliminate anything, we'll lose that ridiculous play room in the basement with that great big poker table.

JIM

Honey, I've got to have some relaxation.

MURIEL

We've got thirty-one and a half acres.
Go out in the back and do a little gardening.

JIM

Sure, and get poison ivy!

SIMMS

(with dogged patience)

If I may interrupt, I'd like to suggest that none of these are really major eliminations. Now if we could do with one less bathroom on the second floor --

MURIEL

I'm sorry. We couldn't possibly.

SIMMS

Mrs. Blandings, a simple bathroom, eight by ten by eight with grade A fixtures will cost around thirteen hundred dollars.

MURIEL

I refuse to endanger the health of my children in a house with less than four bathrooms.

JIM

For thirteen hundred dollars they can live in a house with three bathrooms and rough it!

SIMMS

Look, perhaps the most practical thing would be --

BETSY

Oh, look, we're in the Lansdale paper!
(reading)
"Historical Society Blasts Vandalism!"

JIM

Muriel, Simms explained to you. We've just got to cut, cut --

(reacts)

What's that?

BETSY

(reading)

"Censure Vote Passed re Destruction of Famed Hackett Edifice."

JIM

Well, isn't that just too bad! Let me see that.

He takes the paper, scans it, suddenly bursts into laughter.

MURIEL

What's so funny.

JIM

(laughing)

Prutty. Mrs. Bildad Prutty. Get a load of this!

(reads)

"The semi-monthly meeting of the Lansdale Historical Society was turned into an uproar last night when its president, Mrs. Bildad Prutty" -- How do you like that, Bildad Prutty? -- "reported the total demolition by its New York buyer of the historic old Hackett house."

(laughs)

Bildad Prutty! Muriel, I've got to send this to the New Yorker!

BETSY

(drily)

Read on, father.

JIM

(scans paper)

"Mrs. Prutty," -- Bildad, that is -- "reminded her audience that several years ago the Society started to raise a fund to purchase and restore the old house to its original condition."

(looks up, laughs scornfully)

BETSY

Read on, father.

JIM

(back to paper)

"The project fell through by being seven hundred dollars short of the sum of twenty-six hundred dollars..."

(Jim slows down as the following registers)

"...which Ephemus Hackett testified was the lowest reasonable price he could accept as --"

The paper drops.

JIM

(weakly)

...Twenty-six hundred dollars.

BETSY

And what did we pay, father?

JOAN

Eleven-five, with the commission.

JIM

Muriel, isn't it time for those children to be in bed?

MURIEL

Now girls, I don't want to tell you again.

The front doorbell rings.

MURIEL

Excuse me.

As the CAMERA FOLLOWS Muriel to the door, we hear:

JIM'S VOICE

Twenty-six hundred dollars!

SIMMS' VOICE

(comfortingly)

I wouldn't be too concerned about Mrs. Prutty and her committee. After all, it's your property and if you want to tear it down --

Muriel opens the door, admits an excited Bill Cole.

MURIEL

(surprised) Why, Bill!

BILL

(briefly)
Hello, Muriel.
(he strides past her waving a telegram;
to Jim)

Well, you've done it again'. Once, just once, why don't you come to me and find out if it's all right, if it's legal, before you go barging off and run yourself smack into another jam!

JIM

What's eating you?

BILL

(ignoring him; to Simms)
And I must say, Simms, I hold you equally responsible!

JIM

(alarmed)
What? What happened?

SIMMS

I'm afraid I don't understand.

BILL

(to Simms; indicating Jim)
Did you let this idiot tear down that house?

JIM

What if he did? What of it?

SIMMS

(to Bill) Reconstruction was unsound and totally impractical.

BILL

I quite agree. But you're dealing with a man who doesn't think before he acts, who goes off half-cocked!

JIM

What is it? What did I do?

BILL

(ignoring him; to Simms)

You're an architect! You must have been aware of the legality involved.

JIM

What? What legality?

BILL

(to Simms)

You knew there was a mortgage on that house.

SIMMS

I assumed as much.

JIM

What happened? What are you talking about?

BILL

(ignoring him; to Simms)

And you know the requirements in regard to a mortgage where there's demolition intended!

SIMMS

Certainly. But since you were his lawyer, I naturally assumed --

BILL

With a man like this you can't assume anything!

JIM

(loudly)

Just one minute! I am entitled to know what I did! This is America! A man's guilty until he's proven innocent --

BETSY

It's the other way around, father.

JIM

You go to bed!

MURIEL

Girls!

JIM

Bill, I've had a very trying day.
Would you mind telling me in clear, concise English just what crime I've committed -- and why?!

BILL

(with weary resignation)
In clear, concise English, you tore down a house on which another man holds a mortgage without first getting his written permission.

JIM

Well, I -- I did?!

BILL

And in such case, the mortgagee can demand the full payment of said mortgage upon demand -- (waves telegram) and Mr. Ephesus Hackett so demands!
Six thousand clams! And he wants them now!

JIM

(appalled)
Now?!

BILL

You've got ten days.

Jim gulps. Pause.

JOAN

For six thousand dollars we could have had a Solaxion house and a Crane Mobile home.

JIM

Muriel!

MURIEL

(herding the kids toward the door)
Girls, say your good nights and off to bed without another word.

BETSY

(reluctantly)

Good night, Mr. Simms. Uncle Bill.

JOAN

(protesting)

Miss Stellwagon says the problems of the parents should be the problems of the children.

MURIEL

(shooing them out)

You keep that in mind, dear. It'll help prepare you for motherhood.

The children exit. An embarrassed pause.

SIMMS

Perhaps we'd better let the plans go for the time being and --

JIM

(weakly)

No, Simms, I'll work this out. You go ahead with your final plans and let's see some estimates.

MURIEL

And we'll just forget about that extra bathroom.

SIMMS

(preparing to leave)

Very well. You'll hear from me as soon as possible. Good night.

scene
Good nights are exchanged. Muriel takes Simms out of toward the door. CAMERA HOLDS on Bill and Jim.

JIM

(defeated)

Six thousand dollars!

Bill looks at Jim with compassion.

BILL

What'll you do for collateral on your building loan?

JIM

I don't know, turn in my insurance policies or something.

MURIEL

(coming into scene)
Now, Jim, you can't do that.

JIM

Why not?

MURIEL

What if something should happen? You can't leave the children unprotected.

JIM

(somewhat irritably)
I'm not dead yet! And if I die, there's plenty left to take care of them.

MURIEL

Not if you cash in your policies.

As Jim reacts with painful resignation:

BILL

I'm sure it won't be necessary. I'll see the boys at the bank. Maybe you can put up your insurance as collateral. If necessary, I'll sign a personal note.

JIM

(wearily)
Thanks, Bill.

BILL

(paternally)
And Jim, do me a little favor. The next time you're going to do anything, or say anything, or buy anything, think it over very carefully, and when you're sure you're right -- forget the whole thing. Good night, Muriel.

it,
He goes to Muriel and kisses her on the cheek. Jim sees is annoyed.

MURIEL

Good night, Bill.

Muriel

CAMERA FOLLOWS Muriel and Bill to the door. He exits. comes back into the room.

MURIEL

What a wonderful friend.

JIM

(darkly)

What's with this kissing all of a sudden?

MURIEL

What's that?

JIM

Just because a man is helpful in a business way, it doesn't give him extra-curricular privileges with my wife!

MURIEL

That's a fine thing to say about a friend of fifteen years!

JIM

(testy)

Well, I don't like it. Every time he goes out of this house, he shakes my hand and he kisses you.

MURIEL

(sharply)

Would you prefer it the other way around?!

JIM

(irritably)

Well, I don't like it, that's all! Why is he always hanging around? Why doesn't he ever get married -- or something?

MURIEL

(assumed innocence)

Because he can't find another girl as sweet and pretty and wholesome as I am.

JIM

Well -- it -- it doesn't look right.

There are limits to friendship and -- Muriel comes over, puts a sympathetic arm around him.

MURIEL

Darling, let's not be silly about this. It's not Bill, it's the house you're upset about.

JIM

(sigh)
I suppose so.

They kiss.

JIM

Do you think it's worth all this?

MURIEL

Of course, darling. We're not just building a house -- it's a home. A home for ourselves -- and our children -- and maybe our children's children.

JIM

(whimsically)
It's getting awfully crowded with only three bathrooms.

They look at each other, smile and kiss intimately, as we

DISSOLVE

INT. SIMMS' LIVING ROOM - DAY

Jim and Muriel are watching Simms, who has just taken a sheet, typewritten sheet from his files. Simms looks at the turns to them a little apprehensively.

SIMMS

Well -- here are the estimates. Before you look at them, I think I'd better explain --

JIM

Don't bother, Simms.
(takes the sheet)
I'm getting to be an old hand at this sort of -- first

of Jim is halfway into his chair as his eye catches the bid. There is a sharp MUSICAL EFFECT as Jim bounces out his seat.

JIM

Jumping H. Mahogany --!!

is a
The CAMERA GOES IN for a CLOSE SHOT of the column of estimates. As the CAMERA IRISES DOWN ON each sum, there dissonant MUSICAL EFFECT.

Antonio Doloroso, Builders $32,117.00
Caries & Plumline $30,500.00
Julius Akimbo & Co. $28,575.00
Zach, Tophet & Payne $24,250.00
John Retch & Son $21,000.00

THREE SHOT JIM, MURIEL, AND SIMMS

the THREE SHOT - Jim, Muriel, and Simms. Muriel has read column over Jim's shoulder.

SIMMS

Now obviously these bids are way out of line, that is, all except John Retch and Son at twenty-one thousand.

MURIEL

(reacting)
Twenty-one thousand!

SIMMS

And with some judicious cutting, I think we can pare that down to eighteen.

MURIEL

We've only asked for the barest necessities --

SIMMS

Frankly, with all the extras you two have --

JIM

Never mind.
(hands estimates to

Simms)
If you'll just send us a bill for your services, I'll see that it's taken care of.

(takes Muriel's hand and starts for door)
Now, if you'll excuse us.

MURIEL

Where are we going?

JIM

I am going out to get my head examined! Then, if I don't jump off the Brooklyn Bridge, I'm going to find the owner of our building and sign a twenty-year lease!

caught As they are about to exit, they pause as their eyes are by a drawing on an adjacent drawing board.

WHAT THEY SEE - A BEAUTIFUL PENCIL AND CHARCOAL DRAWING of What they see - a beautiful pencil and charcoal drawing letters their completed prospective house. Under it, in neat is printed:

RESIDENCE OF MR. AND MRS. JAMES H. BLANDINGS

JIM, MURIEL, AND SIMMS.

at Jim, Muriel, and Simms. They look at the drawing, then each other. Jim's face softens. Muriel looks at him appealingly.

JIM

(quietly)
What's the name of that contractor?

DISSOLVE

diagonal INSERT JIM'S COST CHART. The house rests on the Muriel line at the figure of $13,500. As the miniscule Jim and watch with apprehension, the small figures of Smith and sub house

Hackett are joined by Simms, John W. Retch, and several contractors, who put their collective shoulders to the and push it past the Blandings and up to $31,000.00

DISSOLVE

EXCAVATION - LOCATION #2 - EARLY SPRING - DAY

A sign on a sawhorse - it reads:

JOHN W. RETCH AND SON

SOUNDS

in intermittently

Over scene is the thunderous dissonance of the various that go into preliminary construction. A steam shovel action, a bulldozer, the sawing of wood, and the loud, earth-shaking crash of a well-digger's rig.

workmen at
of

As the CAMERA PULLS BACK, we see the machines and their various tasks. The scene has all the rustic peace the invasion of Hollandia.

drive up activity.

The ANGLE CHANGES, and we see Jim, Muriel, and Bill the improvised driveway very close to the scene of

INT. THE CAR - DAY

pride. were

Jim and Muriel look at their property with unconcealed Bill is interested but would like it better if there less noise.

JIM

(shouting over noise)
Well, things are certainly humming.

BILL

(same) What's that?

JIM

(same)

I said, humming.

BILL

Oh.

crash

As they get out of the car, there is an unusually loud from the well-digger's rig.

BILL

(loud)

What's going on over there?

JIM

(same)

That's Mr. Tesander. He's digging our well.

BILL

(same)

Well? What happened to the trout stream, with that pure, clear, cold mountain water?

JIM

(same)

I decided against it -- complete

There is a sudden cessation of the steam shovel and silence. Jim, unaware of it, continues to shout.

JIM

The trout stream --

(reacts; quietly)

didn't seem practical.

MURIEL

It wasn't exactly a decision, dear.

(to Bill)

We discovered the trout stream dries up in August and the rest of the year it's polluted.

JIM

(defensively; groping)

Well, anyway, I'd rather have artesian water. It's healthier. Calcium -- vitamins -- artesian --

BILL

(indicating)

What's wrong with that steam shovel?

They look off.

WHAT THEY SEE. A CLUSTER OF WORKMEN around Mr.

in

WHAT THEY SEE. A cluster of workmen have gathered Zucca, the driver of the steam shovel, who is swearing voluble but undistinguishable Italian.

JIM, MURIEL AND BILL.

Jim, Muriel and Bill.

JIM

Better take a look.

a unable to

He starts off for the steam shovel, nimbly jumping over drainage trench. Muriel starts to follow, pauses, negotiate the trench.

MURIEL

Jim!

her

Jim turns in time to see Bill pick Muriel up and carry across the trench. As he sets her down:

MURIEL

(sarcastic; to Jim)

Thank you, dear.

Jim frowns, annoyed. They approach the group around the shovel.

JIM

What's the matter, Mr. Zucca?
Something wrong?

ZUCCA

How do you lika that? Broka my bucket.
Two times this week I broka my bucket?

JIM

What did you do, strike a boulder?

ZUCCA

(darkly)

Atsa no boulder, atsa ledge.

JIM

(weakly)

What does that mean?

ZUCCA

Meansa we gotta blast!

JIM

Blast?

ZUCCA

Blast. Witha dynamite.

JIM

What do you mean, dynamite?

MURIEL

(a little annoyed)

What do you mean, "What do you mean?"
Mr. Zucca just explained. He's going to use dynamite and blast until he gets rid of the rock.

ZUCCA

Atsa no rock, atsa ledge.

BILL

What Mr. Blandings means is -- what precisely is a ledge?

ZUCCA

Ledge. Lika bigga stone, only a-bigger.

JIM

Like a boulder?

ZUCCA

No, like ledge.

Jim looks at Muriel and Bill.

BILL

...Like a ledge.

ZUCCA

But you don't gotta worry. Only cost twenty-four cents a cubic foot, plussa dynamite an'a fuse.

JIM

But how far will you have to blast?

ZUCCA

Harda tell. Might be a lilla baby ledge -- mighta run the whole toppa the mountain.

JIM

(appalled)

At twenty-four cents a foot? Do you realize what that means?!

ZUCCA

(simply)

Meansa we gotta blast.

Zucca walks off.

JIM

(with quiet resignation)

Well, anyway, our house will never sink.

MURIEL

(drily)

If it does, we can always get Mr. Apollonio. He raised the Normandie.

There is a crash from the well-digging rig.

BILL

"Come to peaceful Connecticut --
(another crash)
Trade city soot for sylvan charm."

Another crash.

JIM

(irritably)

How long does that go on?

MURIEL

I don't know.

(to Bill)

Three weeks now at four dollars and fifty cents a foot.

JIM

(asserting his authority)

I think I'd better have a little talk with Mr. Tesander.

He starts off. Muriel and Bill, curious, follow.

EXT. AT THE WELL RIG

Tesander, a stolid New England well-digger, the soul of industry and candor, attacks the earth. Jim, followed by him.

Muriel and Bill, walks into scene, stands by, watching

After a moment:

JIM

Oh -- Mr. Tesander --

The motor is making too much noise.

JIM

(louder)

Mr. Tesander!

Tesander looks up, shuts off his motor.

TESANDER

Yep?

JIM

How's it coming?

TESANDER

(considers a moment;

then:)

It's comin'.

With a nod he turns on his motor, resumes work. Jim exchanges
a look with Muriel and Bill.

JIM

No -- no -- I mean --

But he's drowned out by the motor.

JIM

(shouts)

Mr. Tesander!

Tesander patiently stops his motor, looks up.

TESANDER

Yep?

JIM

What I meant was -- how far down are you?

Tesander looks at his equipment, considers.

TESANDER

Oh -- 'bout a hundred and ninety feet.

JIM

Well -- isn't that pretty deep?

TESANDER

(thinks it over; he's not one for snap judgments; then:)

Yep.

He's about to turn on his motor, but Jim detains him.

JIM

Do you think maybe you'd better try another spot?

TESANDER

Up to you.

JIM

I mean -- well, have you hit anything yet at all?

TESANDER

(thinks it over)
Hit some limestone yesterday.

JIM

Is that good?

TESANDER

That's bad.

Jim looks at Bill who shakes his head with mock commiseration.

TESANDER

And right now it looks like we're coming into some shale.

JIM

That's bad?

TESANDER

That's good.

JIM

Oh...

Jim looks at Muriel for comfort which isn't forthcoming.

TESANDER

'Course it might turn out to be sandstone.

JIM

That's bad?

Tesander shakes his head, "No."

JIM

That's good?

Tesander shakes his head, "No."

TESANDER

Can't tell. Might be good. Might be bad. One thing you know -- you got plenty of shale, sandstone and limestone.

JIM

...I see.

He turns a little helplessly to Muriel and Bill.

BILL

On a hot day there's nothing like a nice cool limestone shower.

MURIEL

(sweetly)

Mr. Tesander, just for the record, of course, what ever happened to water?

TESANDER

Oh, it's there, all right.
(he smiles, nods, tips his hat to Muriel)
Just got to be patient.

and He turns on his motor, goes back to work. Jim, Muriel Bill start to move off.

BILL

If you ask me, this project's getting a little out of hand.

JIM

(defensively) Nothing's getting out of hand at all. I've made a chart of the whole operation, and -- (indicates Tesander) with a few minor deviations, I know exactly what every penny's going to cost.

MURIEL

Two pennies.

JIM

(coolly)
And just what does that mean?

BILL

(drily)
Meansa we gotta blast.

and There is a loud dynamite blast o.s. As a shower of dirt rocks cascade down and they run for cover:

DISSOLVE

JIM'S COST CHART

house INSERT JIM'S COST CHART - Jim stands casually above the below holding the line with one hand. The group pushing from Zucca now consists of Smith, Hackett, Simms, Retch, Tesander, moves and assorted sub-contractors and workmen. As the house now up a thousand dollars, Jim firmly pushes it back. It rests at $33,500.

DISSOLVE

INT. JIM'S OFFICE - DAY

Jim and Mary.

JIM

You see, Mary, the average fellow who builds a house doesn't know where he stands from day to day -- but I do things a little differently. With a few minor deviations I know exactly where every penny is going --

There is a knock on the door. It opens and Bill Cole appears, briefcase under his arm.

BILL

Hi.

JIM

Bill! Come in, come in.

BILL

(entering)

Just going over the Knapp contracts with old man Dascomb and I -- uh --

(indicates Mary)

Can I talk?

JIM

(a little concerned)

Sure. What's up?

BILL

(obliquely)

While I was in there with Dascomb the conversation kind of got around to you and -- uh --

JIM

(impatiently)

What is it?

BILL

Well, he didn't say in so many words that ever since you started with that house you haven't turned in a decent piece of copy, but --

JIM

But you kind of got the feeling...

BILL

...that if I told you, you'd know that he knew that you knew that he knew... that you knew... or something.

JIM

What's he worrying about? The deadline's three months off. I've always --

The phone rings. Mary answers.

MARY

Hello? Yes. Just a minute.
(hands phone to Jim)
Mrs. Blandings calling from Lansdale.

JIM

Yes, Muriel. What? What's that? Tesander struck water! Say that's wonderful!
(to Bill)
We've finally got our well.

BILL

(drily) Congratulations.

He extends his hand. Jim absently shakes it, then:

JIM

(listens at phone) Huh? What's that?
(face falls)
What do you mean we've got two wells?
(listens; then, grimly)
I'll be right out.
(hangs up, rises)
Come on, Bill, we'd better get out to Lansdale.

MARY

Anything wrong?

JIM

(soberly, as he slips into his coat)
Mary, have you ever seriously considered building a house?

MARY

Well, no offense, Mr. Blandings, but my boy friend says that anybody who builds a house today is crazy.

JIM

You stick with that boy, he's got a great future.

As he and Bill start for the door:

DISSOLVE

EXT. THE EXCAVATION AT BALD MOUNTAIN - DAY

looking bubbling

Muriel, Jim, Bill, Simms and Retch stand at the edge down at the excavation which is partially filled with water.

JIM

You mean you hit a spring, a bubbling spring right here in our cellar?

SIMMS

It'll have to be diverted before Retch here can lay his cement.

RETCH

(dubiously)
May take a while. Pumps are over in Jersey.

Tesander walks into scene, looks down at the water.

TESANDER

Tsk, tsk, tsk.

JIM

(mild sarcasm) Water, Mr. Tesander.

TESANDER

Yep.

JIM

At six feet!

TESANDER

Yep.

JIM

(indicates)

And over there, just thirty-two yards away, you had to go down two hundred and twenty-seven feet to hit the same water.

TESANDER

Yep.

JIM

How do you account for that, Mr. Tesander?

Tesander considers a moment, rubs his chin, then:

TESANDER

We-ll, way it seems to me, Mr. Blandings, over here the water's down around six feet and over there it's -- uh --

BILL AND TESANDER

-- down around two hundred and twenty-seven feet.

Jim exchanges a weary look with Muriel.

DISSOLVE

SPECIAL EFFECT: MONTAGE

following SPECIAL EFFECT: It consists of a Montage of the DISSOLVING SHOTS:

- foundations.
arrive
- (1) The water being pumped out of the excavation.
 - (2) The cement mixer pouring cement into wheelbarrows.
 - (3) The pouring of the cement floor, walls and foundations.
 - (4) Planks, shingles and plumbing equipment begin to arrive and are strewn about the property.
 - (5) The exterior framing of the house begins to go up.
 - (6) The sheathing is put on.

(7) The roof is constructed.

OVER THIS MONTAGE IS SUPERIMPOSED:

new people against Blandings.

Jim's Cost Chart. - With each successive operation, a workman is added to the already considerable group of who are pushing the house inexorably upward, this the frantic efforts of a slowly weakening Jim

DISSOLVE

EXT. THE BLANDINGS' HOUSE - DAY

roughest of
the

The exterior sheathing is completed and, in the terms, the project begins to resemble a house. Among workmen's cars we notice the Blandings' convertible.

DISSOLVE

INT. THE INCOMPLETE LIVING ROOM - LOCATION #1 - DAY

parts Muriel rough living

A dozen hammers, saws, trowels, etc. are heard in other of the house busily rasping and banging away. Jim and and Bill appear in the doorway before entering the unfinished interior of what will eventually be the room.

BILL

What's this, another closet?

JIM

This happens to be our dining room.

MURIEL

Not the dining room, dear, the living room.

(indicates)

There's the fireplace.

JIM

Then where's the dining room?

BILL

Maybe it's that little room off the hallway.

JIM

That's the breakfast nook.

MURIEL

It's not the breakfast nook, it's the powder room.

JIM

Oh.

BILL

Do me a favor -- don't ever invite me here for a meal.

Two workmen pass by carrying a few long pieces of lumber.

The workmen don't see the Blandings.

FIRST WORKMAN

I don't figure this Blandings at all. If you gotta build on the windiest hill in Connecticut, why do you have to pick the windiest side of the hill?

BILL

(to workman)

You know these New York millionaires -- they're eccentric.

The workmen pass from view.

JIM

I think I'd like to go outside.

BILL

(gesture to door)

After you, Rockefeller.

As they enter the foyer, a carpenter appears.

CARPENTER

(to Jim)

Just the man I want to see. Would you step over here a second?

JIM

Sure.

BILL

(indicating)

I'll browse around upstairs.

As Bill starts up the stairs, Jim and Muriel follow the carpenter.

CARPENTER

(pointing up)

On them second floor lintels between the lally columns, do you want we should rabbet them or not?

JIM

(lost)

The -- second -- floor -- lallys?

CARPENTER

The second floor lintels, between the lallys.

JIM

Oh. Oh, the lintels between the lallys?

CARPENTER

Yeah. From the blueprints you can't tell. You want they should be rabbeted?

Jim throws a brief look at Muriel who is regarding him skeptically.

JIM

Un -- umm. No, I guess not.

CARPENTER

Okay, you're the doctor.

(calls)

Hey, fellas, you got any of them rabbeted lintels set, rip 'em out!

After the sheerest pause there comes a shriek of nails brutally withdrawn from timber, a loud splintering of wood and then something of the appearance of entrails comes hurtling down end over end landing with a dusty slap at look. feet. The carpenter exits. Muriel gives Jim an accusing

Jim's

JIM

(sheepishly)

It sounded less... expensive to say no.

the There is another loud screech and more "entrails" come hurtling down, narrowly missing them. Muriel yells in direction from which they came.

MURIEL

Stop it! Stop it!

all From upstairs comes a long, shrill whistle. Instantly sound of activity ceases and a voice is heard.

VOICE

Okay, fellas, let's quit!

JIM

(to Muriel)

Now look what you've done.

come As Muriel turns with apprehension, eighteen workmen trooping down the stairs.

JIM

(conciliatory)

Look, men, Mrs. Blandings didn't mean anything.

(the workmen regard him curiously)

I mean, there's no point in walking off a job just because... a woman makes a silly little remark.

WORKMAN

It's Saturday, mister. We quit at twelve o'clock. This ain't a chain gang, you know.

little As the workmen exit the Blandings look at each other a sheepishly, start up the stairs.

CRANE SHOT - AS THE BLANDINGS GO UP THE STAIRS

CRANE SHOT - as the Blandings go up the stairs.

MURIEL

I'm just sick. From the outside this house looks like a grain elevator, and on the inside everything's miles too small.

As they reach the second floor landing, we hear, o.s. a steady but muffled pounding.

They stop as they hear the thumping.

MURIEL

What's that?

JIM

What's what?

MURIEL

That noise -- listen.
(again the thumping)
It's coming from the closet!

They rush to the closet, open the heavy oak door. Bill is inside, leaning disgustedly against the wall.

JIM

What happened?

BILL

The door blew shut. I got locked in.

JIM

Impossible. I had this closet built especially for myself. The lock opens from the inside.

BILL

Maybe for Houdini -- not for me.

As Bill starts to step out, Jim detains him.

JIM

Nothing to it. A child could work it. Look, I'll show you.

He steps inside with Bill, firmly closes the door. A moment's pause. The door re-opens.

JIM

(condescendingly)
You see, it just takes a little good old Yankee know-how.

MURIEL

You know, dear, it's just possible the lock worked for you and not for Bill.

JIM

Ridiculous. Even you could do it.

MURIEL

(sarcastic) Thank you.

JIM

Come on, I'll show you.

He ushers Muriel inside and the door closes on the threesome.

The CAMERA REMAINS on the closed door.

JIM'S VOICE

Go ahead, dear, just open it.

The knob turns, jiggles a little, but the door remains closed.

MURIEL'S VOICE

I don't seem to be able to ---

JIM'S VOICE

Here, let me show you! You just take the knob and turn it clockwise.

An efficient clockwise turn of the knob. Pause. An impatient rattling of pounding doubletwhist of the knob. Pause. A more forceful the knob, plus a slight kick. A furious rattling, and kicking. The door remains closed.

INT. THE CLOSET

As Jim turns sheepishly:

BILL

Nothing like that good old Yankee know-how.

Jim turns back to the door, pounds on it, yelling:

JIM

Hey! Hey! Somebody let us out of here!

Silence. Muriel is at the shoulder-high circular frame solid glass window. She looks out.

MURIEL

Oh, dear.

Jim and Bill look out.

WHAT THEY SEE - THE LAST OF THE WORKMEN'S CARS

WHAT THEY SEE - The last of the workmen's cars driving away.

INT. CLOSET

BILL

(drily)

Leave a call for seven o'clock.

(afterthought)

Monday morning.

Jim gives him a look, turns back to the window, sizing up an escape, starts muttering to himself.

JIM

If I could just get over to that scaffolding...

He tests the window frame, finds it solid.

JIM

(still muttering)

Seems a shame but I guess it's the only way...

Jim picks up a piece of tar paper.

MURIEL

What are you going to do?

JIM

Don't get panicky, I'll get you out of here.

(hands tar paper to Bill)

Here, hold this over the window.

piece
As Bill somewhat skeptically complies, Jim picks up a of two-by-four.

JIM

Stand back, Muriel.

Jim raises the plank, takes a stance.

JIM

(to Bill)

Ready?

BILL

Roger.

there
Jim
he Jim swings; the window shatters. Almost simultaneously is a click and the door to the closet swings open. As turns with a sense of accomplishment, his face falls as and the others see that the erratic door has opened.

MURIEL

(sweetly)

In case of emergency -- break glass.
Come on, Bill.

down
lock.
As Muriel and Bill precede Jim out of the closet and the stairs, Jim pauses, speculatively toying with the

JIM

(muttering)

Funny... always worked before. Huh.
I wonder...

INT. FOYER - STAIRWAY

comes closet.
walk Muriel and Bill walking down the stairs. From upstairs a steady sullen pounding from the interior of the Without a word, they stop, look at each other, turn and back upstairs.

DISSOLVE

INT. THE BLANDINGS' BREAKFAST NOOK - DAY

Muriel and the children are having breakfast. Jim enters, in fairly high spirits, once again improvising to "Home On The Range."

JIM

(as he sits down)

"Home, home in Connecticut -- Where you have to conform to local traditions, customs, politics and etiquette..."

(picks up his morning mail, starts to thumb through it)

JOAN

Dad, do you suppose I could have a chemistry lab in the basement?

JIM

(preoccupied with mail)

Sure, why not?

BETSY

I think it's awful. Smelling up the house with those horrible chemicals.

MURIEL

Never mind, Betsy.

(to Jim)

Dear, I'm going up to the place this afternoon to see about landscaping. Bill's driving me.

JIM

(preoccupied)

That's nice.

(looking up; darkly)

What do you mean, Bill's driving you?

MURIEL

(a little annoyed)

Why do you always say, "what do you mean," when you know perfectly well what I mean and what you mean?

JIM

I mean that every time I turn my back Bill Cole's driving you some place or something.

MURIEL

He's only being helpful.

JIM

(annoyed; tears open a letter)

I thought he was a lawyer! Why isn't he out suing somebody?

JOAN

Bicker, bicker, bicker.

MURIEL

(to Joan)

Another word and you don't get your laboratory.

BETSY

Well, that's something!

Jim suddenly explodes, crumpling a letter he has just read.

JIM

We'll just see about that!

MURIEL

(concerned)

What is it, dear?

Ignoring her, he reaches for the phone, starts to dial.

MURIEL

Jim, what's the matter?

JIM

(into phone; sharply)

Mr. William Cole, please.

(pause; then with rising emotion)

Hello, Bill? I want you to fight this thing! I know my rights as a citizen! They can't get away with it!... What do you mean, what am I talking about? The letter, of course. From the owner of this building. They want us to move! It's a thirty day notice!

(listens a moment)

But that's ridiculous. How can I move into a house that isn't even finished?! No windows, no plaster -- or paint, or -- or plumbing!

(listens a moment;
then with rising emotion)

Now you listen to me! I have no intention of moving in thirty days! This is not legal! I'm going to fight this thing! And I don't care if it takes every penny I've got!

(listens)

Yeah... Yeah... Yeah... All right!
(hangs up)

MURIEL

(expectantly)

...Well?

JIM

(quietly)

We're moving in thirty days.

On Muriel's reaction:

DISSOLVE

EXT. ROAD AND COVERED BRIDGE - DAY

Two moving vans are approaching the bridge. Behind them is the Blandings' convertible. In it are Jim, Muriel and the children. Behind it and attached is a trailer. After a pause, over this, we hear:

BILL'S VOICE

So-came thirty days -- and they moved.

MED. CLOSE SHOT - ENTRANCE TO BRIDGE.

MED. CLOSE SHOT - Entrance to bridge. As the cavalcade passes

the
Bill
through we see in the rear of the trailer, jammed among household effects, Gussie and a very uncomfortable Mr. Cole.

BILL'S VOICE

I mean -- we moved.

OTHER END OF BRIDGE AND FORK

turn.
The moving vans precede the convertible, make the wrong opposite

Jim stops the convertible at the fork and honks as he impatiently gestures to the drivers to turn in the direction. Over this:

BILL'S VOICE

(as Jim would say it)

That's the wrong road! Any fool knows that!

Jim starts his car up leading the way.

DISSOLVE

EXT. ROAD AT THE HOUSE - DAY

stops
The moving vans turn up the new gravel driveway. Jim his car and they all look off at the house, react with pleasant surprise.

NEARING
WHAT THEY SEE - LONG SHOT - THE HOUSE IS RAPIDLY COMPLETION.

nearing of men
the property as
WHAT THEY SEE - LONG SHOT - The house is rapidly completion. A half dozen men are finishing the exterior painting, planing down doors, etc. In front, a couple from the nursery are working on the landscaping. For first time we, as well as the Blandings, see the a clean, bright and very attractive new house.

BILL'S VOICE

Well, there she is, bright and shining -- and just about complete -- the residence of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Blandings.

INT. THE CAR - DAY

the intimate

MOVING SHOT - Jim and Muriel are visibly affected by sight of their Dream House. They exchange a warm smile.

BILL'S VOICE

Not bad at that.

EXT. THE FRONT OF THE HOUSE - DAY

MED. SHOT. The car pulls up, stops.

BILL'S VOICE

(efficient scoutmaster)
All right! -- Everybody out.

toward reaches

Everybody piles out of the car. As Jim and Muriel walk the house away from us and Bill, Muriel sentimentally out, takes Jim's hand.

BILL'S VOICE

Guess you can't blame them for feeling just a little bit proud.

carry

At the door, Jim stops, indicates that he'd like to carry Muriel across the threshold.

BILL'S VOICE

(sentimentally)
Look -- he wants to carry his wife across the threshold. Romantic, isn't it?

JOAN AND BETSY.

Joan and Betsy. They look on with distinct adolescent disapproval.

BILL'S VOICE

Ooops! I guess I meant "corny."

GROUP SHOT. OVER MURIEL'S PLAYFUL PROTEST

to GROUP SHOT. Over Muriel's playful protest, Jim starts pick her up.

BILL'S VOICE

Uh-uh. Watch that sacroiliac. Fifteen years since you've done this sort of thing.

Jim manages to lift Muriel.

BILL'S VOICE

Whew! Nice work, Tarzan. Now, let's see if you can make it into the hall.

foyer.

BILL'S VOICE

That's right. Go right in. Don't pay any attention to the sign.

the
The CAMERA PANS TO a LOW SHOT of a sign on the floor of foyer. It reads:

WET VARNISH

FULL SHOT - FOYER.

the newly steps, Jim rises,
FULL SHOT - foyer. In the b.g. is a painter, varnishing floor. He looks up in complete dismay as he sees his varnished floor being violated. After a couple of stops, suddenly aware of the painter. The painter throws down his brush, says something caustic.

BILL'S VOICE

(imitating painter)

Don't mind me, buddy, I just got through varnishing that floor.

something.
Jim reacts, raises a tentative foot, the sticky varnish practically holding it to the floor. Jim says

BILL'S VOICE

Whose bright idea was this?

darkly admission of

The painter says something, points at Muriel. Jim looks and accusingly at Muriel whose weak smile is an admission of guilt.

BILL'S VOICE

She just wanted everything to be nice and shiny on the day they moved in.

Jim turns and shouts something to the painter.

BILL'S VOICE

Stop painting that floor and put some planks down in here, or some thing!

The painter shouts back.

BILL'S VOICE

Okay, mister, but take it easy. The Republicans ain't in yet, you know.

desperately footsteps.
varnish.

Jim reacts, turns and walks back out of the foyer, trying to match his clearly outlined incoming footsteps. Each step is outlined by strands of thick sticky

EXT. THE FRONT DOOR OF THE HOUSE - DAY

catch which is

As Jim appears, still carrying Muriel, Betsy and Joan his attention, indicate the front wall of the house complete except for the windows. Jim reacts.

BILL'S VOICE

Oh, fine! A house without windows!
We'll just see about that!

him spread

Abruptly handing Muriel to Bill he starts off. Ahead of and unnoticed are a layer of newspapers which have been spread out.

BILL'S VOICE

Look out for those papers!

feet.
of
disgustedly

But Jim has stepped on the papers. They stick to his After a few steps he is aware of it, tries to get rid them. After a few hectic but futile attempts, he disappears around a corner of the house, the newspapers flapping behind him.

EXT. SIDE OF HOUSE - DAY

pile
Jim flaps his way up to a workman who is staring at a of window casements.

JIM

Where's Simms?

WORKMAN

Around back trying to figure out what to do about them windows.

JIM

What's the problem? You put windows up.

WORKMAN

Not these. They don't fit.

JIM

(angrily; control going)
Oh, they don't, don't they?

newspapers
He continues on toward the back of the house, the flapping beneath him.

EXT. REAR OF HOUSE - DAY

against
Jim having Retch
Simms and Retch. More window frames are neatly stacked the wall. Simms and Retch react as they see an angry Blandings flap his way into scene, his varnished shoes picked up additional paper, shavings, shingles, etc.
hands Jim a sheaf of papers.

RETCH

Oh, Mr. Blandings, you'd better look these over.

JIM

What's this about the windows?

SIMMS

(calmly)

I'm afraid there's a little slip-up. These windows seem to belong to a Mr. Landings in Fishkill, New York. I talked to Mr. Landings this morning.

JIM

Well, has he got mine?

SIMMS

No, he seems to have some windows that belong to a Mr. Blandsworth of Peekskill.

JIM

Where are my windows?!

SIMMS

As near as we can figure out they've either been sent to a Mr. Benton in Evanston, Illinois, or a Mr. Bamberger of Phoenix, Arizona.

Bill wanders into scene, looks over Jim's shoulder.

JIM

What are we supposed to do -- live the rest of our lives in a house without windows?

SIMMS

It'll just be a matter of a few days.

BILL

What's a "Zuz-Zuz Water Soft-N-R"?

JIM

How should I know?

BILL

(indicating)

You've got one.

JIM

(reading from bill)

"Furnishing and installing one Zuz-Zuz Water Soft-N-R, two hundred and eighty dollars!"

(explosively)

I will not have any such piece of equipment in my house!

SIMMS

I'm afraid I authorized that, Mr. Blandings -- to save your boiler and water pipes.

JIM

From what?!

SIMMS

Rust. The plumbing man assures us the water from your well is the most corrosive in his entire experience in the trade.

BILL

Another first!

JIM

(pursing his lips)

Mm.

(irritably)

Well, if it's necessary, put it in! We're moving in today, you know and --

RETCH

It's in.

JIM

Oh.

(a final show of authority; sharply)

Then get me the bill for it!

BILL

(indicating bill)

You've got it.

JIM

All right then.

behind

And he stalks off, his papers, shavings, etc. flapping him.

DISSOLVE

EXT. THE HOUSE - LATE AFTERNOON

The moving vans are driving away.

INT. THE FOYER - LATE AFTERNOON

workmen Muriel, scheme to boss is assistant.

A general flurry of activity; Gussie and several carrying furniture upstairs, unpacking barrels, etc. list and samples in hand, is explaining her color Mr. PeDelford, a polite, cigar-smoking, noncommittal painter. In the b.g., casually leaning on the bannister PeDelford's taciturn and somewhat skeptical-looking

MURIEL

Now I want the living room to be a soft green.

(PeDelford nods)

Not quite as bluish as a robin's egg, but yet not as yellow as daffodil buds.

PEDELDFORD

Mm.

MURIEL

(handing him a sample)

The best sample I could get is a little too yellow, but don't let whoever mixes it go to the other extreme and get it too blue. It should just be sort of a grayish yellow green.

PEDELDFORD

(making a note)

Mm-hmm.

They turn to the dining room.

MURIEL

Now the dining room I'd like yellow. Not just yellow, a very gay yellow.

PEDEFORD

Mm-hmm.

MURIEL

Something bright and sunshiny.

(sudden inspiration)

I tell you, Mr. PeDelford, if you'll just send one of your workmen to the A&P for a pound of their best butter and match it exactly, you can't go wrong.

PEDEFORD

(making a note)

Mm.

MURIEL

This is the paper we're going to use here in the foyer.

(hands sample to him)

It's flowered but I don't want the ceiling to match any of the colors of the flowers. There are some little dots in the background, and it's these dots I want you to match. Not the little greenish dots near the hollyhock leaf, but the little bluish dot between the rosebud and the delphinium blossom. Is that clear?

PeDelford looks carefully at the sample, then:

PEDEFORD

(making note)

Mm-hmm.

MURIEL

The kitchen's to be white. Not a cold, antiseptic hospital white -- a little warmer but not to suggest any other color but white.

PEDEFORD

(note)

Mm.

MURIEL

Now for the powder room, I want you to match this thread.

(hands him thread)

You can see it's practically an apple red. Somewhere between a healthy Winesap and an unripened Jonathan.

PEDELFORD

(making note)

Mm.

There is a crash from the kitchen.

MURIEL

Will you excuse me?

Muriel hastily exits toward the kitchen. PeDelford turns to his assistant.

PEDELFORD

Got it, Charlie?

CHARLIE

(deadpan; indicating rooms with his thumb)

Green, yellow, blue, white, red.

PEDELFORD

Check.

DISSOLVE

INT. PANTRY - OFF KITCHEN - DAY

Joan is on a stepladder helping Gussie put away some dishes.
Remains of two broken plates are on the floor below them.

MURIEL

Joan, you know father was to take care of the heavy dishes.

JOAN

He disappeared. I haven't seen him for an hour.

Betsy flies into the room waving a railroad timetable.

BETSY

Where's Uncle Bill? I just checked the timetable -- he's going to miss his train.

MURIEL

If they've run off somewhere it certainly isn't very -- (suddenly stops, listens)

thumping From upstairs comes the SOUND of a steady, methodical of a hand on a solid oak door.

MURIEL

Heavens!

She rushes for the door.

QUICK

DISSOLVE

UPSTAIRS LANDING

who Muriel opens the closet door revealing Jim and Bill, leans have been locked in the closet for the last hour. Each boredom and against the wall, arms folded, in an attitude of closet. disgust. Without a word Jim and Bill exit from the
The three start down the stairs.

JIM

(darkly)
I thought you were going to take care of it.

MURIEL

I thought you were.

BETSY

(from below)
You're going to miss your train, Uncle Bill! It leaves Lansdale in twenty-five minutes.

BILL

Isn't there a later one?

BETSY

Not till the Commuter's Special tomorrow morning at six-fifteen.

JIM

You mean seven-fifteen.

BETSY

No, Dad, six-fifteen.

JIM

What about the seven-fifteen I'm supposed to take to the office every morning?!

BETSY

(consulting timetable)

There's a little asterisk. The seven-fifteen only runs Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

JIM

(taking timetable)

Let me see that!

(scans table, tightlipped)

Muriel!

MURIEL

Oh, dear, don't tell me I read it wrong.

JIM

That's fine! For the rest of my life I'm going to have to get up at five o'clock in the morning to catch the six-fifteen, to get to my office by eight, which doesn't even open until nine -- and which I never get to until ten!

MURIEL

Perhaps if you started earlier you could quit earlier.

JIM

(sharply)

So I could get home earlier to go to bed earlier to get up earlier!

BILL

Maybe you can have the railroad push the train up to four-fifteen -- then you won't have to go to bed at all!

BETSY

Uncle Bill, you're going to miss your train!

MURIEL

Jim, you clean up this mess. I'll drive Bill to the station and pick up some cold cuts for dinner.

dining

Betsy and Joan pick up some boxes and walk into the room.

BETSY

You'd better hurry!

BILL

(indicating upstairs closet)

Kind of hate to leave that little place. Just four walls and a couple of mothballs, but to me it'll always be home.

JIM

(preoccupied with timetable)

So long, Bill.

Bill and Muriel exit.

INT. THE DINING ROOM

As Jim drifts in, still preoccupied with timetable:

JOAN

It's certainly going to be fun this summer when Uncle Bill comes up for his vacation.

BETSY

We'll get in a lot of doubles.

JIM

Hmm?

(looks up from timetable)

What are you talking about? Bill's going to Europe.

BETSY

No, he's not. I heard him and mother talking. He's going to move his vacation up and take a place in Lansdale.

JIM

(vaguely annoyed)
Uh-huh... Mm-hm. Mm-hm... Uh-huh.
(then, covering up)
All right, come on, come on. Get busy.

DISSOLVE

INT. THE BLANDINGS' CAR - (PROCESS)

Evening is beginning to fall as Muriel drives Bill into town.

MURIEL

I'll scout around and find you a place in Lansdale.
(quickly)
Now, you're not going to change your mind about coming up?

BILL

Don't worry, I'll be on the job.

MURIEL

It won't be easy. I promise you a Cook's tour of every lamp maker, rug weaver, and antique shop in Lansdale County.

BILL

(philosophically)
When I married you two I suppose I took you for better or for worse.

Muriel smiles warmly, and in a friendly gesture reaches over and pats his hand.

MURIEL

Good old Uncle Bill.

BILL

(drily)
Good old Uncle Bill.

As they exchange an understanding smile:

DISSOLVE

INT. THE BLANDINGS' LIVING ROOM - NIGHT children unsteady effects.

in
the into which lifetime

It is dark outside and getting quite chilly. The are unpacking a last barrel. They have made a rather pile of books and boxes, obviously Muriel's personal Jim is in the process of trying to start his first fire the fireplace. The immediate result is a clouding of room with smoke. As he backs away, coughing, he bumps the pile which falls to the floor spilling open a box contains, among other things, Muriel's diary and a accumulation of sentimental trinkets.

JIM

Now look what you've done!

handle.
starts

Betsy coughs her way to the fireplace, turns the flue
The smoke immediately goes up the chimney and the room to clear.

BETSY

Father, the first principle of lighting a fire is to see if the flue is open. A three-year-old child knows that.

JIM

Next time we want a fire I'll send out for a three-year-old child!
(indicates trinkets) Get that stuff cleaned up and go in and help Gussie set the table. It's getting late.

up

The children start gathering up the debris. Joan picks some trinkets which have spilled from a cardboard box.

JOAN

Look, Dad, your fraternity pins.

JIM

(busy cleaning the fireplace)
Pins? I only had one.

JOAN

There are two of them here.

JIM

All right, all right. Just put them away.

JOAN

(examining them)
Funny, this one says W.C. on the back. W.C.?
(brightly)
William Cole! It must be Uncle Bill's!

JIM

Huh?
(reaching for it)
Let me see that.
(examining pin)
HMMMM.

Betsy has picked up a small leather-bound book. She whistles.

JOAN

What's that?

BETSY

Mother's diary when she was in college. It's slightly torrid.

JOAN

(coming over) Let's see.

JIM

(sharply)
That's none of your business!

BETSY

(scanning page)
I'd say mother and Uncle Bill were somewhat of an item!

JIM

(taking book from Betsy)
People do not read other people's diaries! It's not a very nice thing to do!

(shooting them out)

Now go in there and help Gussie with the table.

BETSY

(indicating debris)

What about --?

JIM

I'll take care of that. Now, shoo, shoo.

when starts to
The children exit. Jim is about to put down the diary his curiosity gets the better of him. Making sure he's unobserved, he sits down on a box, opens the book, read. As his brows wrinkle with concern:

DISSOLVE

EXT. THE HOUSE - NIGHT on in window.

The wind is howling, the trees swaying. The lights are the kitchen. CAMERA MOVES UP to the open kitchen

INT. THE KITCHEN - NIGHT

table clearing takes
The family, in overcoats, is huddled around the kitchen finishing dinner. Gussie, in overcoat and muffler, is the dishes away. Jim, a sober look on his face, rises, a steaming kettle from the stove.

MURIEL

Where are you going?

JIM

To shave.

MURIEL

Tonight??

JIM

While I can still trust myself with a razor. At six o'clock in the morning

I'd probably cut my throat. Goodnight.

Jim abruptly exits. Muriel looks after him with concern.

DISSOLVE

INT. THE BLANDINGS' BATHROOM - NIGHT

Jim, in his pajamas and overcoat is shaving. After a few
the moments Muriel, in her nightgown and overcoat, enters scene.

MURIEL

Excuse...

She takes her toothbrush and opens the cabinet, Jim automatically moving around back of it in their previously brush, brush her position.
established pattern. As Muriel puts the paste on her replaces the tube, shuts the cabinet and starts to teeth, Jim uncomfortably moves back to his original

MURIEL

Excuse...

JIM

Muriel, do you have to do that now?!

MURIEL

There's no need to be so irritable just because you have to shave at night.

JIM

I'm not irritable!

MURIEL

Well, you're certainly something!
You haven't said a civil word all evening.

JIM

Sometimes a man doesn't feel like talking.

MURIEL

(solicitously)

What is it, dear? Something down at the office?

JIM

No.

MURIEL

Have you got the new slogan for "Wham"?

JIM

It's not due yet!

MURIEL

Well, it's something. You're certainly upset about something. I can always tell.

JIM

I'm not upset.

(going back to shaving; with studied unconcern)

It's just that I don't happen to approve of falsehood and deception. Particularly in my own wife.

MURIEL

What are you talking about?

JIM

(same)

Oh, nothing. It's just that I distinctly remember your telling me you gave back Bill's fraternity pin fifteen years ago.

Muriel looks at him, puzzled.

JIM

Well, did you or didn't you?

MURIEL

Did I, or didn't I what?

JIM

Give it back to him.

MURIEL

Of course I did. If I said I did, I did.

JIM

(suddenly Sam Spade)
Then perhaps you'd have the goodness to explain how this happened to fall out of your jewel box?

Muriel
looks

He takes the pin out of his pocket and hands it to her.
takes the pin, looks at it sentimentally. Suddenly she at Jim and bursts out laughing.

JIM

What's so funny?

MURIEL

You! You're jealous! You're standing there with your face full of soap and you're jealous.

JIM

(angrily)
If you were so crazy about the guy,
why didn't you marry him?!

MURIEL

(beginning to be a little angry)
Because I wasn't in love with him!

JIM

(vindictively) That's not what you said in your diary!

MURIEL

(now really angry)
Oh, now you've been reading my diary!

JIM

(a little guilty)
Well -- it happened to fall open and... I... happened to look at it.
It... just happened.

MURIEL

I'll just bet!

JIM

It's all over the book so why don't you admit it? You were in love with Bill Cole!

MURIEL

Don't be absurd! Of course I was in love with Bill. In those days I was in love with a new man every week.

JIM

Then why did you marry me?

MURIEL

I'm beginning to wonder!

(exploding)

Maybe it was those big cow eyes of yours or that ridiculous hole in your chin! Maybe I knew that some day you'd bring me out to this thirty-eight thousand dollar icebox with a dried-up trout stream and no windows! Or maybe I just happened to fall in love with you -- but for heaven's sake, don't ask me why!

Muriel stalks out of the bathroom. Jim looks after her, thoughtfully starts to dry his face.

INT. THE BEDROOM

winding

Jim enters. Muriel stands with her back to him angrily the clock. Jim noisily clears his throat. No reaction.

JIM

(tentatively)

...Muriel?

No reaction.

JIM

...Honey?

No reaction.

JIM

Would it do any good to say I'm sorry?

MURIEL

I don't know.

Jim gently turns her around facing him.

JIM

Well -- I am. I acted like a schoolboy and I'm sorry.

Muriel looks at Jim. Finally she smiles.

MURIEL

Oh, Jim!

She goes into his arms and they kiss intimately. As their lips part:

MURIEL

(dreamily)
Why don't you take the soap out of your ears?

JIM

(same)
Why do I love you so much?

Jim again kisses her tenderly, warmly.

MURIEL

(breathless)
Darling, it's awfully late.

Jim kisses her again, a little more ardently.

MURIEL

(same) Maybe you ought to go down and lock the doors.

JIM

(kissing her ear)
What for? The windows are all open anyway.

MURIEL

(as he starts to kiss her again)
Jim, you have to get up at six o'clock.

JIM

(considers; logic prevails; brief sigh)
Yes, I guess so.

MURIEL

(reluctantly) Goodnight, dear.

JIM

(same) Goodnight.

Each gets into his own bed, still wearing the overcoats.

DISSOLVE

INSERT JIM'S COST CHART - The house now wavers at $37,000.
As Jim and Muriel still try to stem the tide, the group that is pushing the house ever upward includes all of the previous people connected with the house and -- in addition -- plumbers, painters, landscape gardeners, etc. Over this, and across the scene flutter more bills, more extras.

BILL'S VOICE

And so the days sped by -- and the bills -- and the extras -- and as the house approached forty thousand dollars, Jim approached his deadline for the new slogan. It was almost a photo finish.

DISSOLVE

EXT. RADIO CITY - NIGHT (STOCK)

It is raining. The lights are on in the buildings.

INT. JIM'S OFFICE - NIGHT

Mary is attending to some detail work as the door opens
and
Jim enters, disturbed. Mary looks at him questioningly.

JIM

You'd better send out for coffee and sandwiches,... It looks like an all night session.

MARY

(concerned)
What did he say?

JIM

(wearily, seating himself at desk)
Tomorrow morning.

MARY

(sighs)
Well, I guess you'll just have to dream something up -- good or bad.

JIM

I rather got the impression it had better be good.

MARY

(raised eyebrow)
Oh.

silence on the swivels

He picks up a pencil, nibbles on it thoughtfully. The in the room is broken only by the patter of raindrops window. It strikes a note in Jim's subconscious. He around in his chair and stares soberly out the window.

JIM

(ruminatively, almost to himself)
Funny how you look forward to the little things. Rain, for instance.

Mary looks at him curiously. He turns to her.

JIM

For a month now, I guess I've been looking forward to the first rainy night at the house.
(looks at Muriel's picture)
Big blazing fire. Muriel knitting.
Me in my new smoking jacket... with my pipe and slippers, reading my paper...
(sighs)
Oh, well.

As he starts to work.

DISSOLVE

INT. THE BLANDINGS' LIVING ROOM - NIGHT

furnished.

Note: The house is painted and almost completely fire in it,

one slippers, Cole. shoes by a

A hard rain beats on the windows. There is a blazing the fireplace. Muriel, in a warm bathrobe, sits near comfortably knitting. In fact, the scene is exactly the Jim has just described, except that the man with pipe and smoking jacket, reading the paper, is Bill Near the fire, Bill's rain-drenched jacket, shirt and are hanging up to dry. The cozy tranquillity is broken sharp RINGING of the front doorbell.

MURIEL

(with relief)

Thank heavens! The children.

BILL

(rising)

Stay put. You look too comfortable.

A driving shut

The CAMERA FOLLOWS Bill to the front door. He opens it.
man in raincoat and boots stands there in the pouring, rain. The man enters as Bill struggles to get the door against the wind.

MR. JONES

Whew! What a night! I'm Jones, from down the road. Just came over to tell you your kids are all right,
Mr. Blandings.

BILL

Oh, I'm not Mr. Blandings. Cole's the name, Bill Cole.

feels an

He sees Jones' doubtful look at the smoking jacket, explanation is necessary.

BILL

Friend of the family. Wet clothes.
Just came in out of the rain.

again Muriel walks into scene. Jones takes in the bathrobe, looks skeptically at Bill.

MURIEL

I'm Mrs. Blandings.

JONES

How do. Mrs. Williams just called.
Says your phone's out of order. Wanted me to tell you the water's rising and they've got the bridge roped off. Girls'll spend the night over at her place.

MURIEL

Thank you. I was beginning to get concerned. Can I make you a cup of tea?

JONES

No, thanks. Better be gettin' back
'fore I have to swim for it. 'Night,
Mrs. Blandings.
(to Bill)
'Night, Mr. Bl--

BILL

(weak smile)
Cole. Bill Cole. Friend of the family.
Just came in out of the rain.

JONES

(uncertainly) Well -- 'Night.

MURIEL

Goodnight... and thanks so much.

rain. The door is opened with a terrific swirl of wind and the Jones exits as Muriel and Bill push the door against wind, finally getting it shut.

BILL

That's fine. No bridge. How do I get back to Lansdale?

MURIEL

(simply)
You'll just have to spend the night right here.

As they start back into the living room:

BILL

Muriel, really! With your husband in New York and your children away -- think of my reputation.

MURIEL

(smile)
Don't worry, Snow White, you'll be as pure and unsullied in the morning as you were the night before.

BILL

(with resignation)
That's the story of my life.

Muriel pokes the dying fire, looks up thoughtfully.

MURIEL

Poor Jim, he sounded so worried before. I certainly hope he comes up with something.

BILL

Don't worry about the man who gave the world "When you've got the whim, say Wham!"-- This well will never run dry.

SLOW

DISSOLVE

INT. JIM'S OFFICE - EARLY MORNING

The CAMERA COMES IN ON a package of cigarettes. A finger impatiently rips open what is left of the package, discloses that it is empty. The ANGLE WIDENS to reveal a tired, disheveled Jim. Disgusted, he fishes the most likely butt from a tray littered with them. With considerable difficulty Impatiently he manages to light it, only to burn his nose.

floods stamping out the butt he rises, stretches, walks to the thoughtfully window, pulls up the shade. Early morning sunlight snaps his the room. He turns off a standing lamp, looks resting out the window, suddenly gets an idea. Turning, he fingers. Mary, who is asleep on the desk, her head on her elbows, raises her head, opens a sleepy eye.

JIM

(selling; a note of desperation in his voice)

"Compare the price, compare the slice, Take our advice -- Buy Wham!"

Jim Mary critically shakes her head "no", closes her eye.
with wearily throws himself down on the couch, absently toys he his already loosened tie. He pulls it up over his nose, throwing the balance over the top of his head. Suddenly reacts, snaps his fingers. Mary opens a sleepy eye.

JIM

"If you'd buy better ham. You'd better buy Wham!"

MARY

It's Boyle Petroleum. "If you'd buy better oil, You'd better buy Boyle."

dropping Her eye closes. Jim sinks back with defeat, his hand piece over the edge of the couch. It encounters a crumpled it, of paper, earlier work. He smoothes the paper, scans fingers. kind of likes it. He gets up, comes over, snaps Mary looks up.

JIM

"This little pig went to market As meek and as mild as a lamb. He smiled in his tracks When they slipped him the axe He knew he'd turn out to be

Wham!"

A long silent look passes between them.

JIM

(quietly)

"...knew he'd turn out to be Wham!"

them
He suddenly and angrily gathers all his papers, slams into the wastebasket.

JIM

(rising panic)

It's gone! I've lost my touch! Maybe I never had a touch! Maybe "Whim Say Wham" was an accident! Who knows? I can't think any more! All I've got on my mind is a house with an eighteen thousand dollar mortgage, and bills, and extras, and antiques, and -- and -- (dejected)

I don't know... I don't know.

what emotionally his at it door.
Mary looks at him sympathetically, doesn't quite know to say. As the CAMERA MOVES to a CLOSE SHOT of the distraught Jim, his eyes go to a large photograph on desk of Muriel and the children. He picks it up, looks with affection. Suddenly he gets an idea. Rising with determination he puts on his coat and starts for the

MARY

(startled)

Where are you going?

JIM

Home, to get some sleep -- and I'd advise you to do the same.

MARY

But -- but you haven't --

JIM

Suppose I haven't! This isn't the only job in town!

MARY

But -- but -- what'll I tell Mr.
Dascomb?

JIM

(sharply)
You just tell him to -- to --
(with finality)
You just tell him!

He exits.

DISSOLVE

EXT. THE BLANDINGS' HOME - DAY

rural-
As car,
and
"Home On

It is an especially beautiful, sunshiny morning. A looking taxi deposits a weary Jim, who pays the driver.
the cab drives off, Jim looks speculatively at Simms' which is parked there, yawns, stretches, opens the door enters. Under this a slightly sour underscoring of The Range."

INT. BLANDINGS LIVING ROOM - DAY

nightgown volume

As Jim comes into the foyer, he sees Muriel, in and robe, talking to Mr. Simms. She holds the rolled-up of blueprints that went into building the house.

JIM

'Morning, dear.

MURIEL

(going to him;
solicitously)
Darling, you must be exhausted. How did it go?

JIM

Fine. Fine.

They kiss.

MURIEL

(obliquely)

Is... everything all right?

JIM

(unenthusiastic)

Everything's fine.

(still in embrace;

looking up)

Hello, Simms, what brings you out with the morning dew?

SIMMS

Just dropped by to check the blueprints. Some extras came in from Retch this morning and there're a couple of things I thought we ought to go over together.

JIM

(arms still around Muriel; unconcerned)

Really. What are they?

SIMMS

Well, let's see.

(thumbing through sheets)

Few little things here, all right, I guess. "Mortising five butts -- a dollar sixty-eight."

JIM

Let's not quibble about that. A man's entitled to mortise a few butts now and then.

SIMMS

(next sheet)

Extra nails and screws -- three dollars, eighty-nine cents.

JIM

Petty larceny, but let him get away with it.

SIMMS

Now there's one here I frankly don't understand. Ah, here we are.

(reads)

"Changes in closet, twelve hundred and forty-seven dollars." Did you authorize that?

JIM

Well, we probably told him to -- (reacting)
Twelve hundred and what?!

SIMMS

Forty-seven dollars. Changes in closet.
(hands bill to Jim)

JIM

(explosively)
Who does he think we are!
(looks at bill; very businesslike)
What's this notation: "Refer to Detail Sheet Number one thirty-five?"

SIMMS

(indicating blueprints) Far as I remember, that would be something in the back of the house.
Let's just take a look.

As he unrolls the blueprints, Jim looks suspiciously at Muriel. She seems a little nervous.

SIMMS

Ah, here we are. It isn't a closet at all. It's off the back pantry...
Mrs. Blandings' little flower sink.

JIM

Oh... Mrs. Blandings' little flower sink.

SIMMS

(to Muriel)
You didn't authorize any changes, did you?

MURIEL

(defensively)
Well... they certainly weren't changes.

JIM

What -- have -- you -- done?

MURIEL

(speaking rapidly a little confused)

I haven't done anything! And what I did was... just nothing at all.

JIM

What -- have -- you -- done?!

MURIEL

Well --

(rattling off)

All I did was one day I saw four pieces of flagstone left over from the porch that were just going to be thrown away because nobody wanted them and I asked Mr. Retch if he wouldn't just put them down on the floor of the flower sink and poke a little cement between the cracks and give me a nice stone floor where it might be wet with flowers and things. That was absolutely all I did.

his isn't

During the above speech Simms sinks into a chair, puts head in his hands and closes his eyes, a fact that lost on Jim.

JIM

That's all you did?

MURIEL

Absolutely. Just four little pieces of flagstone.

SIMMS

(to Muriel; wearily)

Did you by any chance authorize a drain?

MURIEL

(verge of tears)

Of course I didn't. All I said was I wanted a nice stone floor and Mr. Retch was just as nice as could be and said, "You're the doctor," and that's all anybody ever said to anybody about anything.

Jim takes a deep breath, turns to Simms.

JIM

...Well?

SIMMS

(sigh; plunging in)

All right, I think I can tell you what happened. First, the carpenters had to rip up the flooring that was already laid. Those planks run under the whole width of the pantry, so Retch had to knock the bottom out of the pantry wall to get at them.

JIM AND MURIEL

Jim and Muriel - Jim looks at Muriel as though he were premeditating first-degree murder. She averts his gaze.

Over

this:

SIMMS' VOICE

Then he had to chop out the tops of the joists under the flower sink space to make room for a cradle. I guess he bought some iron straps and fastened them to a big pan to give him something to hold the cement. What with that added load on the weakened joists, I'll bet he had to put a lally column down there for support, too.

MURIEL

It was just four little pieces of flagstone, and I only ---

JIM

Quiet!

GROUP SHOT - DURING THE FOLLOWING SPEECH

Cole,

enter the GROUP SHOT - During the following speech we see Bill in Jim's pajamas and robe come down the stairs and enter the room. Jim and Muriel are not aware of his presence.

SIMMS

Well, the main soil pipe runs under there on wall brackets, so Retch had to get his plumbing man back to take out a section so he could get that cradle set. I guess that meant he had to change the pitch of the soil pipe from one end of the house to the other.

(looks up)
'Morning, Mr. Cole.

BILL

'Morning. Hello, Jim.

JIM

(turning) Hello, Bill.

taking to
Muriel

Jim turns away, reacts, suddenly turns back to Bill, in the pajamas and robe. A little shocked but unwilling believe the implication of what he sees, he looks to for an explanation.

MURIEL

(lamey)
The bridge was roped off and Bill had to stay last night.

JIM

...Oh.

BILL

(cheerily)
Slept like a rock.

JIM

I'm delighted.

Jim looks at Bill, then back at Muriel.

SIMMS

(clearing his throat)
And then, of course, there are hot and cold water pipes hooked to the joists right under that pantry. They go up to the wing bathroom on the second floor, and I'll bet my bottom dollar he had to relocate them.

THREE SHOT - JIM, MURIEL AND BILL.

but

THREE SHOT - Jim, Muriel and Bill. Jim turns to listen finds himself looking speculatively at Muriel and Bill.

SIMMS' VOICE

And I guess the electrician had to rip out about sixty feet of armored cable between the main panel and the junction box by the oil burner, including the two hundred twenty volt cable that goes to the stove.

FULL SHOT - GUSSIE APPEARS IN THE DOORWAY

FULL SHOT - Gussie appears in the doorway in raincoat, carrying umbrella.

GUSSIE

'Morning, everybody. Whew! What a night!

JIM

Where have you been?

GUSSIE

Lansdale. Couldn't get back across the bridge.

JIM

You... weren't here last night?

GUSSIE

They weren't letting anybody across that bridge, Mr. Blandings.

(to Muriel)

I passed the girls over at the Williams. They'll be along any minute.

As Jim reacts:

MURIEL

(quickly)

Thank you, Gussie. You'd better get breakfast started.

As Gussie exits, Muriel turns to Simms.

MURIEL

Where were we?

BILL

We were at the two hundred twenty volt cable that goes to the stove.

JIM

Just a minute.

(looks at Bill, then at Muriel)
You mean the children weren't here last night either?

MURIEL

How could they be, dear? The bridge was closed.

JIM

I just came across it.

MURIEL

Well, it was closed last night.

JIM

(pointedly) It's open now!

Embarrassed pause.

BILL

(attempt at breeziness)
If you'll all excuse me -- I -- I think I'll just go up and slip into something a little more comfortable.

wants Bill exits. Another pause. Simms, aware of the tension, to get out of there.

SIMMS

(rapidly)
Well, that's about the size of it --

Through Simms' speech, Jim looks darkly at Muriel.

SIMMS

-- except that Retch had to repair the pantry wall and that meant getting a plasterer back. And of course, he couldn't have broken through that wall --

JIM

All right, Simms, all right. We'll take care of it.

SIMMS

(preparing to exit)
I'll admit it's a little steep. But I'll try to get Retch to knock a hundred dollars off the bill. If I can't get that, I'll certainly try for seventy-five.

JIM

Fine.

SIMMS

If he doesn't go for seventy-five, I'll take a stab at fifty.

JIM

You do that.

SIMMS

(at the door)

Anyway, I'm almost sure we can get twenty-five.

There is no answer.

SIMMS

(lame)

Well. Good day.

He leaves. There is a deadly pause.

MURIEL

(carefully)

Now dear, you're upset, you've got a lot of things on your mind --

JIM

(with dangerous calm)

Muriel, there's only one thing on my mind -- This house -- and how fast we can get rid of it!

MURIEL

That's not what you're thinking.

JIM

Maybe it's not. Maybe I'm thinking I was once a happy man!

(the martyr)

I didn't have a closet, I didn't have three bathrooms, but I did have my sanity, a few dollars in the bank, two children who loved me and a wife I could trust!

MURIEL

That's a fine thing to say!

JIM

I also had a job at Danton and Bascomb, something I don't happen to have at the moment!

MURIEL

Jim!

JIM

That's right, I've resigned! We're starting all over again! From scratch! And without this house!

MURIEL

(near tears)

You love this house!

JIM

I hate it!

there, In the b.g. Mr. Tesander enters, cap in hand, stands nervous and embarrassed.

MURIEL

You don't mean that.

JIM

Every word of it! Anybody who builds a house today is crazy! The minute you start, they put you on the list. The All-American Sucker list! Everywhere you turn they've got a hand in your pocket. If you take out their hands, they find more pockets!

(explosively)

It's a conspiracy, I tell you, a conspiracy against every man and woman who want a home of their own! Against every boy and girl who were ever in love!

Tesander clears his throat. Jim turns.

JIM

(sharply)

What do you want?!

A slight embarrassed pause. Then:

TESANDER

(shyly)

Well, Mr. Blandings, there's a matter of twelve dollars and eighty-six cents.

JIM

(with a wild gleam)

Twelve dollars and eighty-six cents! Why be a piker, Mr. Tesander?

(emptying pockets)

Take everything I've got! Spread it out among your pals!

(advancing toward the bewildered Tesander)

Wouldn't Retch like a little something? Maybe Zucca could use my new dinner jacket? It's open house, Mr. Tesander! Help yourself! If this isn't enough I'll come over to your place and do some odd chores. Maybe I can mow your lawn or scratch your back!

TESANDER

(simply)

You don't understand, Mr. Blandings. This twelve dollars and eighty-six cents -- you don't owe me, I owe you.

There is a momentary pause.

JIM

...W-what was that?

TESANDER

(taking out money)

Found I overcharged you. Almost three feet.

He hands the money to Jim, who stares at it blankly.

TESANDER

Better count it. I think it's all there.

Jim looks haplessly at Muriel, sheepish, guilty.

MURIEL

Thank you very much, Mr. Tesander.

TESANDER

Well, I guess I'd better be gettin' along.

(looking around)

Sure got a pretty place here.

(at door; pauses;

looks back)

I'll tell Mr. Zucca about the dinner jacket.

Jim and Muriel look at each other a little sheepishly.

INT. THE FOYER

As Tesander is about to exit, Bill, dressed, starts down the stairs.

BILL

Oh, Mr. Tesander -- could you give me a lift to town?

TESANDER

Yep.

BILL

Be right with you.

INT. LIVING ROOM

MURIEL

(concerned)

What did you mean before about losing your job? Will we really have to sell the house?

JIM

(miserable)

I don't know, dear... I don't know.

Bill enters.

BILL

In case anyone's interested, I'm leaving for town.

(for Jim's benefit)

If you want to count the silverware, I'll wait.

JIM

(sheepishly)

Bill, be patient with me. Maybe one of these days I'll grow up.

BILL

(to Muriel)

What happened to him?

MURIEL

Twelve dollars and eighty-six cents.

BILL

Mind if I say something?

Jim and Muriel look at him curiously.

BILL

You know, I've kind of been the voice of doom about this whole project. Every step of the way I was firmly convinced you were getting fleeced, bilked, rooked, flimflammed and generally taken to the cleaners. And maybe you were. Maybe it cost you a whole lot more than you thought it would. Maybe there were times when you wished you'd never started the whole thing. But when I look around and see what you two have here -- I don't know.

(pause)

Maybe there are some things you should buy with your heart and not with your head. Maybe those are the things that really count... See you around.

opening they
As Bill turns and leaves, the outer door is heard and the kids appear. There is an exchange of "Hi's" as pass.

BETSY

'Morning, everybody!

JOAN

(surprised)

Hi, Dad! How come you're not at the office?

JIM

(a look at Muriel)

I'm on a... kind of a vacation.

JOAN

You mean you got fired?

JIM

Well, not exactly, I --

MURIEL

We'll discuss it later.

Gussie's head appears from the kitchen.

GUSSIE

(brightly)

Come and get it! Breakfast everybody.

BETSY

Good! I'm starving! What are we having, Gussie?

GUSSIE

Orange juice, scrambled eggs and you-know-what.

JOAN

(making a face)

Ham?

GUSSIE

Not ham -- Wham!

(cheerily)

If you ain't eatin' Wham, you ain't eatin' ham!

Gussie's head disappears.

CLOSE SHOT - JIM.

CLOSE SHOT - Jim.

JIM

What did she say?

He reacts with the sudden exhilaration of Balboa first seeing the Pacific. He snaps his fingers.

JIM

Darling, give Gussie a ten dollar raise!

His eyes light up as he begins to visualize.

DISSOLVE

Gussie,
it,

INSERT ADVERTISEMENT IN MAGAZINE - It is a picture of smiling, holding a platter with an enormous ham. Under the simple caption:

"IF YOU AIN'T EATIN' WHAM, YOU AIN'T EATIN' HAM!"

THE CAMERA ANGLE WIDENS TO DISCLOSE MR. JAMES BLANDINGS

In Betsy
as he and CAMERA title

THE CAMERA ANGLE WIDENS to disclose Mr. James Blandings reclining in a hammock on the patio of his Dream House. the b.g. Muriel is working at her garden, Joan and assisting her. Jim reacts with pride and satisfaction sets the magazine down, takes a long drink of lemonade and picks up a book which he has been reading. As the CAMERA COMES IN for an EXTREME CLOSE SHOT of Jim we see the title of the book on the jacket cover. It reads:

"MR. BLANDINGS BUILDS HIS DREAM HOUSE"

the camera and winks.

JIM

(with simple sincerity)
Drop in and see us sometime.

As the CAMERA PULLS AWAY to a LONG SHOT tableau of the Blandings and their Dream House, we:

FADE OUT

THE END