My Visit to the Euromart Headquarters

by Jacob O. Meyer

The heavens wept the day I visited the Common Market headquarters in Brussels, Belgium! On a recent trip to Europe I was able to visit the headquarters of Euromart (the European Common Market) with a friend who is connected with the American Embassy in Brussels. It was a blustery, rainy day as we parked our car outside the huge building and paused to inspect its architecture before entering. The structure is truly imposing. It stands in the middle of a sizable block of land, built of steel and glass. Although there are reputed to be no religious overtones to Euromart, the building is constructed in the shape of a gigantic cross.

We went down a long walkway that descended to the lower level of the building. Since the structure is built on a sloping piece of ground the entrance hall was below ground level from the place we had stopped. The walk down was almost symbolic, as the nations of Europe have descended in their endeavor to manipulate the economy of the world for profit. When we arrived at the entrance hall of the building we entered a spacious room in which small groups of people were clustered busily conversing. We had hoped to take a tour of the building and get some background material for a future SNB article, but we were informed that special arrangements had to be made for such a tour—a week ahead of time. Since such advance planning was impossible due to a congested schedule, it was decided to make an attempt by contacting the British section to see if a tour could be arranged on short notice. Each attempt to arrange a tour met with disappointment. Finally, we left the building and walked around the outside, inspecting the magnificent architecture. As we arrived back at our car the rain came down in torrents and the wind blew even harder than before.

My friend was able to supply some additional facts he had been able to glean about the operation of the Common Market. He informed me that there were approximately 6000 workers in the building and that presumably their job was to manage the European economy. The nations of Europe are becoming increasingly socialistic in their political and economic philosophies and it would seem that the United States is following closely on their heels. One can sense that some unseen sinister force is manipulating the economy of Europe to direct the member nations in their government, religion and other mundane activities. If one wishes to control a people politically it is wise to begin by controlling their economy, which in turn controls their sustenance, food, clothing and shelter.

It was discovered that the United States has a mission to the Common Market, although we are not a member of the combine. Undoubtedly the United States feels that they must have representatives there to look after our interest, but one wonders if the purpose may not be to bridge the gap that will eventually lead to our entry into the group. Since we are closely tied to Europe in so many ways it would appear that such a transition would be logical. One wonders if this could be one of the reasons the power and prestige of the United States is being obviously eroded and reduced in recent years, so that we will eventually allow ourselves to be absorbed into Euromart membership.

The European Economic Community (as it is actually called) is an outgrowth of the European Coal and Steel Community. It was established by the treaty of Rome, March 25, 1957 and took effect on January 1, 1958. The first tariff reduction was set for January 1, 1959. Under the treaty of Brussels, effective July 1, 1967 the policy-making bodies of the E.E.C. were merged with the European Coal and Steel Community. Six nations were the first members and three nations joined later, comprising the current total of nine nations in full membership. Associate membership and special trade agreements today include about thirty other nations in Europe and Africa. The community has announced plans to realize economic and monetary unity by 1980. The E.E.C. has already sought to establish a unified position in international monetary organizations, including the fixing of exchange rates of currencies of member nations to limit fluctuations against world currencies.

It is obvious to one who has studied the objectives of the Common Market that there is a deliberate plan to unite the major nations of the West that are mainly based on an industrial economy with those who have the necessary raw materials. The ultimate objectives seem to be the monopolization of industrial output. By totally controlling the industry of such a sizable block of people, controlling the remainder of the world will be simple. There is no great rush to accomplish the final objective, but to paraphrase the proverb about justice, the wheels of the Euromart organization grind slowly, but they grind with certainty.

Mankind has made a religion out of economics today. Few people rely on our Heavenly Father Yahweh to sustain them and provide for their needs. They rely on human reason, logic and resource. As we considered the implications of the Euromart venture and the design of its headquarters it was obvious that Europeans have turned this integration of nations into their contemporary religion.

The Common Market takes on the appearance of a modern day tower of Babel, as the combined resources of the Western world are directed toward achieving a self-sufficiency, totally disregarding the existence of the Heavenly Father. "Israel has forgotten his maker and buildeth temples..." Hosea 8:14. Western Europe (modern Israel) has constructed a temple of worship for itself utilizing a symbol of pagan religion. Shall the whole world come to worship before this beast (government)? "And they worshiped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshiped the beast, saying, 'Who is like unto the beast? Who is able to make war with him?'" Although contemporary scientists and theoreticians would hardly admit it, they have developed a pseudo-religion from evolution and economics, among other sciences to replace the Bible faith. The super-government that they envision for the world will solve all of the problems which today plague our civilization, they surmise. The world is building such a government today which they hope will solve all the problems of the world—by relying exclusively upon human ideas and philosophies. Such a government will never work because it excludes Yahweh, the exclusive source of truth. Do you see how far the people of this world have drifted away from the Bible over the past few decades? They have placed their faith in the mental capability of mankind rather than in the infallible Word of Yahweh.

One of the most striking aspects of Euromart is its secretiveness. Rather than being open with its public and declaring its plans and goals it has suppressed information. One hears very little in the news of the formation of policy within the organization, who is running the organization and what is being accomplished. It was not surprising therefore, that we were not taken on an immediate tour of the building, but rather they demanded that a period of time must elapse between application for a tour and the actual tour, undoubtedly so that a close check could be made of the inquiring individual. When we asked to visit the office of the press secretary or publicity agent for the organization we again met with another rebuff. We were not even given any published information about Euromart and its functions. One cannot help but become suspicious under such secretive circumstances.

Control of economic and monetary policy involving millions of people such as is proposed for the Common Market countries will demand a capacity for surveillance that can be supplied only by computer technology. We are now in an age when the formation of a behemoth world government can be accomplished, when millions of people can be controlled through the use of computers. Computer technology is a Frankenstein monster; while it can be used for good, it can also be misused and thereby prove to be enslaving. Already the various government agencies in our own country are in possession of a great deal of information about each individual that can be used to control or manipulate him, perhaps even blackmail him into submission to the system. Let us be cautious about adding more capability to the branches of our government.

Having checked prices of various products in Europe it became obvious to me that Euromart has not held down prices. Many products in Europe were marked at a noticeably higher price than in America. Apparently Europe is experiencing the same inability we are here in our country, relative to holding down inflation. Once again it is obvious that without Yahweh and His law the people of this world cannot solve their problems.

We asked ourselves the question, "Will this be the beast of Revelation 13?" Many students of prophecy feel that it is a fulfillment of Revelation 13. It is our opinion that this is the initial phase of world domination by a small group of power-hungry men, which will later incorporate other international trading organizations in the West, along with governmental and military agencies already involved such as NATO. We must remember the warning given by an angel of Yahshua the Messiah in Revelation 14:9-12, as True Worshipers continue to rely upon Almighty Yahweh and keep His commandments. "And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, 'If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand, The same shall drink of the wine of the wrath of Yahweh, which is poured out without mixture into the cup of his indignation; and he shall be tormented with fire and brimstone in the presence of the holy angels, and in the presence of the Lamb: And the smoke of their torment ascendeth up for ever and ever: and they have no rest day nor night, who worship the beast and his image, and whosoever receiveth the mark of his name.' Here is the patience of the saints: here are they that keep the commandments of Yahweh, and the faith of Yahshua.'" Let us heed this warning and fulfill our calling.

We all seek the good life that anyone can have on this earth, but we realize that mankind will never establish it by himself. Nevertheless, that good life is just ahead for this earth in the Kingdom of Yahweh which will be ruled by Yahshua the Messiah at His coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. It will be a time when peace and plenty will be established throughout the earth under His righteous rule as the law of Yahweh becomes the constitution for the Kingdom government. What mankind lost at the garden of Eden through his sin will be recovered in the Kingdom of Yahweh. Have you made your stand against Satan and his human government and yielded yourself to Yahweh?
