Definitions

TRANSFER

The movement of IRA funds or assets directly from one IRA to another IRA without the account owner taking receipt of funds. This is sometimes referred to as a Trustee to Trustee Transfer. A Transfer is not a tax-reportable event.

DISTRIBUTION ROLLOVER

A Distribution Rollover occurs when you withdraw cash or other assets in the form of a Distribution from one eligible retirement plan and contribute all or part of it, within 60 days of receipt of the funds or assets, to another eligible retirement plan. Generally, if you make a tax-free Distribution Rollover (in full or part), you cannot take complete another Distribution Rollover from that same account within a rolling 12 month period. This rollover transaction is not taxable, but it is reportable on your federal tax return. Both a 1099 and 5498 are typically created, by your account custodian or administrator, to report the transaction.

DIRECT ROLLOVER

The transfer of funds directly from a qualified retirement plan into an IRA or retirement plan without the account owner taking receipt of the funds. This rollover transaction is not taxable, but it is reportable on your federal tax return. Both a 1099 and 5498 are typically created, by your account custodian or administrator, to report the transaction.

ROTH CONVERSION

Also known as a "Conversion Contribution," a Roth Conversion is the movement of funds from a tax-deferred IRA or retirement plan into a tax-free Roth IRA or designated Roth qualified plan. This is a taxable event, and both a 1099 and 5498 are typically created, by your account custodian or administrator, to report the transaction.

RECHARACTERIZATION

Typically, a Recharacterization is the action of reversing a Roth Conversion by moving the funds or assets back into a traditional IRA. You may also be able to treat a contribution made to one type of IRA as having been made to a different type of IRA, which is referred to as recharacterizing the contribution. A Recharacterization is typically done via a trustee-to-trustee transfer, and if made by the due date (including extensions) for your tax return for the year during which the contribution was made, you can elect to treat the contribution as having been originally made to the second IRA instead of the first IRA in which the funds or assets were deposited. Typically, both a 1099 and 5498 will be created, by your account custodian or administrator, to report the transaction.

Tax-Reporting for Rollovers, Conversions & Recharacterizations

Q. When will I receive a 1099 and 5498 to report my Rollover, Roth Conversion or Recharacterization?

A. You should receive the 1099 from the custodian or administrator of which the funds were distributed, prior to your tax filing deadline. The 5498 is typically mailed to you after the tax-filing deadline, by the receiving custodian or administrator, due to the fact that 5498s are also used to report prior year contributions which can be made up to the tax filing deadline.
