

ARTFORUM

cecimoss | log out | ADVERTISE | BACK ISSUES | CONTACT US | SUBSCRIBE

follow us    search

ARTGUIDE | IN PRINT | 500 WORDS | PREVIEWS | BOOKFORUM | A & E | 中文版
 DIARY | PICKS | NEWS | VIDEO | FILM | PASSAGES | SLANT

All material in the Artforum Archive is protected by copyright. Permission to reprint any article from the Artforum archive must be obtained from Artforum Magazine.

Takeshi Murata

12.05.13

AUTHOR: CECI MOSS

11.08.13-12.14.13 Ratio 3

Takeshi Murata's latest animation, OM Rider, 2013, is dark, funny, and perhaps one of the most bizarre works by the noted video artist. Inspired by Murata's longtime interest in campy horror films—think Dawn of the Dead or films by Dario Argento—this eleven minute and thirty second video stars a synthesizer-playing, motor-scooter-riding, pot-smoking werewolf and a smartly dressed, haggard old man. The werewolf occupies a wide, bluish expanse dotted with coconut trees and mountains, where he rides his scooter and plays music, while his counterpart contemplatively sits in darkness at a wooden table, only briefly getting up to climb a suspended circular staircase to reach yet another table. Murata alternates between these two scenarios in order to increasingly build tension and suspense, a quality heightened by musician Robert Beatty's skillful use of a Shepard tone on the sound track: At the video's most suspenseful moment, fog and a bluish light waft through the old man's chamber while he chops a banana. He pauses, lifts up his switchblade, and sees the werewolf's reflection right as the beast reaches over and grabs hold of his neck. In the following and final scene, the werewolf clumsily plays "Taps," a song played during military funerals, on a trumpet underneath a palm tree; the absence of any dialogue gives a mime-like quality to the video's already playful clownishness.

Like Paul McCarthy or Mike Kelley, Murata is an artist who addresses pop culture intuitively, mining its excesses by drawing attention to the capacities and restrictions of simulation. While McCarthy and Kelley were deeply responsive to the spectacle inherent in the golden age of television, Murata's practice hints at what deranged, comical subversion might look like now that the mainstream is hypernetworked and crowd-sourced. If Ratio 3's maximal treatment of OM Rider in a gigantic, IMAX-like screening room is any indication, the answer is to present the big, the bad, and the ugly of the American subconscious in HD.

links

PAULA COOPER
GALLERY

CHEIM
& READ

DAVID NOLAN
NEW YORK

GALERIE
EVA PRESENHUBER

LEHMANN
MAUPIN
GALLERY

DIARY | PICKS | NEWS | VIDEO | FILM | PASSAGES | SLANT | ARTGUIDE | IN PRINT | 500 WORDS | PREVIEWS | BOOKFORUM | A & E | 中文版

All rights reserved. artforum.com is a registered trademark of Artforum International Magazine, New York, NY