Starfield & Smith's business litigation group has decades of experience representing businesses and business persons regarding the risks and strategies in the consideration, avoidance, prosecution and defense of claims in civil, administrative and criminal matters throughout the United States. Our attorneys invest the time and personal attention necessary to understand our clients' businesses and fully appreciate the impact litigation may have on their business and business relationships. Starfield & Smith attorneys understand that business disputes are often resolved with business solutions that preserve business relationships that have been productive for many years. Our attorneys have the business acumen that is fundamental to understanding both the legal and business issues that are at the core of business disputes. We not only understand the dispute and the reason for the dispute, but recognize the big picture context in which the dispute exists so that we can provide business litigation advice, and not just litigation advice.

Starfield & Smith's business litigators have the depth of knowledge and experience of attorneys at large firms but charge fees that are a fraction of big firm rates.
