

PROVIDENCE HEMATOLOGY

Affiliated with Providence Health Care – St. Paul's Site and University of British Columbia

Providence Hematology is affiliated with the University of British Columbia, and with Providence Health Care, for which the mission statement is 'how you want to be treated. That's our way of saying that we're committed to treating those we serve with compassion and respect. (We are) driven by compassion and social justice'.

Diversity is our strength. Inclusion of different perspectives and experiences is critical to the wellbeing of society and to the pursuit of excellence. We commit to working against hatred, oppression, violence and injustice.

We denounce all forms of racism, bias or discrimination. We stand in solidarity with all marginalized populations. We will work at every level of health care and society to eradicate racism and other inequities in medical care and research, to foster a health system and society that provides equitable treatment and care for everyone. We are committed to improving the health of every patient we serve.

The hematologists and support staff come from a spectrum of cultural and ethnic backgrounds. Equity is a priority for us, and includes active membership on the UBC Department of Medicine Equity Committee. Racism and bias have no place in our community and we have zero tolerance for it. We embrace difference and work to foster dignity, mutual respect, and justice.
