Award-Winning Author Aims to End the “Laughter Drought” with New Book Uncorked & Off the Chain Is a Second Helping of Laughs from Comedic Author Jameson Gregg

Alpharetta, GA – Jameson Gregg brings us Uncorked & Off the Chain as his second book and the first in a series of offbeat ramblings of a zany comic.

A Harvard University study determined that adults in America are in a “laughter drought.” Adults are only laughing about 15 times a day, while children laugh an average of 400 times a day. Uncorked & Off the Chain is here to quench the thirst for chuckling with 175 handspun slices of prose ranging from sports, gambling, and edgy tales, to marriage, dogs, and mass consumption of cocktails.

“Everybody loves to laugh,” says Gregg. “It provides instant gratification and an endorphin burst. Some pieces will resonate with every reader in a long-lasting and personal way. Writings that they will not soon forget.”

Gregg seeks to bring comic relief to a vastly underserved market of readers seeking quick-hitting and scintillating material. Uncorked & Off the Chain zings with quick reads of one to two pages—perfect for busy lifestyles.

Uncorked & Off the Chain will be available on Amazon.com, shop.booklogix.com, BarnesandNoble.com, and jamesongregg.com on May 14, 2021.

You can catch Gregg later this year at Gold Rush Days in Dahlonega, Georgia, and The Mountain Moonshine Festival in Dawsonville, Georgia.

Biography of Jameson Gregg

Jameson Gregg practiced law for twenty years in Georgia's Golden Isles and achieved the highest national ranking for lawyers before hanging up his wingtips to pick up a pen to pursue his passion for writing humor. Offbeat college jobs influencing his worldview include Mississippi River tugboat deckhand, taxi driver, iceman in a chicken plant, and traveling circus promoter.

Jameson is a multi-award-winning author. In 2015, he won Georgia Author of the Year for his first book, Luck Be A Chicken: a comic novel. Northeast Writers Group named him Writer of the Year in 2016, and in 2018, he took top prize in the Georgia Bar Journal's annual Fiction Writing Contest.

A Mississippi native and graduate of Ole Miss and Mississippi College School of Law, he now resides in the mountains of North Georgia with his wife, Maureen, and boss dog, Molly.

Jameson Gregg on writing Uncorked & Off the Chain

When did you first take an interest in writing?

During high school, I only read books assigned by teachers. I arrived at Ole Miss with wide-eyed curiosity and began reading on a much wider scope—avant-garde magazines, gonzo literature, and comic novels, in addition to Faulkner, Hemingway, Twain, and other writers of classics. I developed a deep appreciation for brilliant and talented writers.

I started writing in those halcyon college days, but due to my desire to choose a path more likely to put food on the table, writing took a back seat. During my successful twenty-year law practice, the burn to write always simmered just below the surface. I finally hung up my wingtips and got busy pursuing my passion.

Is this the first book you have written?

My first book, Luck Be A Chicken: a comic novel, won for me 2015 Georgia Author of the Year. The competition judge wrote, “The wit is reminiscent of Twain,” and “a must-read” for Foxworthy fans. Uncorked & Off the Chain is my second book.

What do you hope readers will gain from reading Uncorked & Off the Chain?

Everybody loves to laugh. It provides instant gratification and an endorphin burst. Laughter is nature’s stress reliever. Recent studies show that humor is essential to how many of us view ourselves and is the number one form of expression for many. A striking statistic: babies laugh over 400 times a day and if you are over thirty-five years old, you laugh on average only fifteen times a day. A Harvard study concluded that adults in America are in the midst of a “laughter drought.”

Uncorked serves up humor and satire with chops and attitude—175 handspun slices of prose ranging from sports, gambling, and edgy tales, to marriage, dogs, and mass consumption of cocktails. I’m here to do my part to bust the drought. I find it gratifying to make people chuckle.

What do you think sets Uncorked & Off the Chain apart from other books in this genre?

Mine is a fresh, new voice with unique style and perspective garnered from decades of acute observation of the human condition. Uncorked dispatches enough outrageous, offbeat moxie and zing to generate buzz.

The book differs from most in today’s essay-centric, literary humor genre in that its average entry is one to two pages—quick reads for a busy life. In that sense, Uncorked is stylistically similar to George Carlin’s books and will, I believe, reach a vast underserved market of readers looking for quick-hitting, scintillating material.
