NATIONAL PROPERTY ACCREDITATION SCHEME (NPAS)

PURPOSE

The National Property Accreditation Scheme (NPAS) has been developed by the Student Accommodation Association (SAA) to assist national education stakeholders to identify, promote and support quality managed student accommodation businesses which operate for the exclusive use of students.

BACKGROUND

The Student Accommodation Association brings education and student accommodation providers together to promote the value of accommodation provided for the exclusive use of students to support and enhance the education experience in Australia.

SAA recognises that until recently, education stakeholders have perceived “student accommodation” to be accommodation that happens to be occupied by students when in fact, student accommodation is defined by the association as accommodation provided for the exclusive use of students.

As an initiative aimed at providing greater clarity to Australian education stakeholders, and prospective students, agents and the community, SAA has introduced the National Property Accreditation Scheme.

NPAS represents a stamp of quality, enabling students to make an informed choice about their accommodation. An NPAS branded property will consistently deliver on student expectations of the minimum standard of student accommodation provided with respect to amenity, facility, security, customer service and management processes.

The National Property Accreditation Scheme offers providers of student accommodation the opportunity to align their new offerings with a set of industry led minimum standards.

It is envisaged over time that education providers, and government agencies who support students in Australia will recognise the NPAS stamp of quality to be a prerequisite for promotion to their student communities.

Simple, it has the NPAS accreditation
