

Entire Population of Tommin's Peak Vanishes

By Kylie Wedgwood

NSW Police are baffled by the disappearance of the entire population of the mountain community of Tommin's Peak; which is said to have occurred some time, mid morning, on Saturday.

The alarm was raised by concerned citizen, Bev Derle, of neighbouring Mt Elizabeth.

Her fiancé had failed to return as promised, that evening.

When police in Mt Elizabeth travelled to Tommin's Peak, to interview fiancé, James Whelan, on a separate matter, they found the town abandoned.

"581 people. All gone." said Police Senior Sergeant, Thomas "Thommo" McGrath. "As though they'd all woken up; some, even having coffee. And then just wandered off, and vanished."

Specialist Crime Scene Investigators from Sydney will be arriving to comb the area for clues.

"We strongly suspect that at least one individual, has been there before us," Senior Sergeant McGrath went on to say. "A small number of houses appear to have been burgled; and cash, and other valuable items stolen."

The Reverend's Range Rover, also appears to be missing.

Police are appealing for the "Looter" to come forward.

"It's important, that these individuals, get in contact with us, urgently." McGrath said. "We aren't interested in pursuing the other matter, of theft. We simply need to know if they witnessed anything out of the ordinary."

Let's hope they can get to bottom of this mystery soon.
