Washington State’s successful student aid program – the State Need Grant – provides funding for low-and-middle income students to attend 65 higher education and career training institutions throughout the state. Currently this program serves more than 68,500 Washingtonians – but there is not enough funding to provide grants to about 18,000 additional eligible students.

With 740,000 job openings projected over the next five years in our state, we must close this gap and fully fund the State Need Grant to help make sure that all Washington students have a chance at a postsecondary education – their future depends on it.
