October 13, 2005

KFx: Hedge Funds wagging the dog?

How does a penny-stock that went public through a reverse merger with a $10,000 shell company owned by a car dealer, overcome a long history of questionable dealings and turn a 30 plus year failed energy scheme into a billion dollar bonanza? By involving the best name in an esoteric segment energy business and appearing to be poised to revolutionize an $8 billion industry. Could it all be real? Well real enough for some of Wall Street's biggest hedge-funds (people who are supposed to know how to spot a scam) to think that they can at least join the band wagon and get away with it.

Today we released a research report on this little mystery, titled Is Lurgi really KFx's savior or just smoke mirrors? Click here www.asensio.com to read and make your own decisions.

asensio.com reports are published and distributed solely and exclusively to registered asensio.com subscribers who have read and agreed to the Mandatory User Agreement located at http://www.asensio.com/TermsOfUse.aspx. This Mandatory User Agreement is included herein in its entirety by reference thereto and by notice of its availability.