"ALL THE PRESIDENT'S MEN"

by

William Goldman

Based on the novel

"All The President's Men"

by

Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward

Pre-rehearsal version March, 1975

Start with as few credits as possible. When they're over--

FADE IN ON:

A TINY BLACK PIECE OF TAPE.

We see it in the center of the large, dimly lit screen. As the tape is pressed around a door--

BEGIN THE BREAK-IN SEQUENCE.

It's a major piece of action, running maybe five minutes and it's all as detailed and accurate as we can make it, with as many "if only's" included as possible. ("If only" the tape had been attached up and down instead of around the door, Wills wouldn't have spotted it and alerted the police; "if only" the first police car called had gone to investigate, Baldwin, watching from the Howard Johnson Motor Inn, would have seen their uniforms and radioed Hunt and Liddy in time for them to have gotten to the five burglars and then safely away.)

The break-in ends when Leeper arrests the five men. He thought he only had one guy, so when ten hands were raised he was surprised. The hands are all encased in Playtex rubber surgical gloves. HOLD on the hands a moment; then--

GO TO:

A DARK APARTMENT.

The phone rings. WOODWARD fumbles for the receiver, turns on the bed light. He listens a moment.

WOODWARD

No, no trouble, Harry, be right down.

(he hangs up)

Son of a bitch.
He lies back. The apartment is one room, a small terrace beyond. Not much of a place.

WOODWARD lies still, staring at the ceiling. He blinks, blinks again. HOLD...

CUT TO:

THE ENORMOUS FIFTH FLOOR OF THE WASHINGTON POST.

It looks, early of a Saturday morning, pretty deserted. Those reporters that are around are young, bright, and presently involved in nothing more taxing than drinking coffee and thumbing through the papers.

HARRY ROSENFELD surveys the scene from his office doorway as WOODWARD approaches, hangs his coat at his desk, not far from where ROSENFELD is standing.

ROSENFELD
Where's that cheery face we've come to know and love?

WOODWARD
You call me in on my day off because some idiots have broken into local Democratic Headquarters--tell me, Harry, why should I be smiling?

ROSENFELD
As usual, that keen mind of yours has pegged the situation perfectly. (chomps on some Maalox tablets) Except (a) it wasn't local Democratic Headquarters, it was National Democratic Headquarters-- (WOODWARD is surprised--he hadn't known) --and (b) these weren't just any idiots, these were special idiots, seeing as when they were arrested at 2:30 this morning, they were all wearing business suits and Playtex gloves and were carrying-- (consults a piece of paper) --a walkie-talkie, forty rolls of film, cameras, lock picks, pen-sized tear gas guns, plus various bugging devices. (puts paper down) Not to mention over two thousand dollars, mostly in sequenced hundred dollar bills.

WOODWARD
Preliminary hearing at Superior Courthouse?

ROSENFIELD
(nods)
Two o'clock, work the phones 'til you go.

CUT TO:

THE CRIMINAL COURTS BUILDING.

WOODWARD hurries along, goes inside as we

CUT TO:

A CORRIDOR INSIDE. WOODWARD comes down it, looks around, sees a door marked "Counsel's Offices" and heads toward it. Now--

CUT TO:

A CLERK AT A DESK as WOODWARD comes up. Behind them, two lawyers are clearly angry about something, talking and gesticulating to each other.

WOODWARD
(to the COUNSEL'S CLERK)
Could you give me the names of the lawyers for the men arrested in the Watergate.

CLERK
These two were appointed-- (indicates the angry men)
--only now it turns out the burglars got their own counsel.
(he starts to laugh)

FIRST ANGRY LAWYER
(to CLERK)
When you gonna stop thinking it's so funny.

SECOND ANGRY LAWYER
(To CLERK)
We wouldda done a terrific job protecting those guys.
(neither lawyer, by the way, is Clarence Darrow)

FIRST ANGRY LAWYER
You think we're not as good as some hotshot fancy lawyer?--
THE COURTROOM and business is booming. Muggers, pimp, hookers, their families and friends. In the scene that follows, a constant counterpoint is what's going on up at the front as an endless succession of petty criminals caught the previous night, the aforementioned muggers, pimps, and hookers, are shuttled in, given a quick appearance before a JUDGE who sets bond, and then shuttled out.

In the audience, one man stands out--DOUGLAS CADDY. He is extremely well-dressed and obviously successful. Beside him sits another smaller man, who is unshaven and squints. WOODWARD moves in, sits alongside CADDY.

WOODWARD
Mr. Caddy? My name's Bob Woodward, I'm from the Post and I wanted to ask about how you happened to come on this case--

CADDY
--I'm not here.

WOODWARD
(nods)
OK.

He takes out a small notebook, writes, muttering aloud as he does.

WOODWARD
Douglas Caddy, the attorney of record, when questioned about his presence in the courtroom, denied he was in the courtroom, "I'm not here," Mr. Caddy said.

CADDY
(impatiently)
Clearly, I am here, but only as an individual, I'm not the attorney of record.
(indicating unshaven man)
Mr. Rafferty has that position. Whatever you want, you'll have to get from him, I have nothing more to say.

And as he gets up, walks off--

CUT TO:

THE WATER FOUNTAIN IN THE CORRIDOR. There is a small line. CADDY waits at the end of it.
WOODWARD
(moving in behind him)
Mr. Rafferty was very helpful. Four Cuban-Americans and this other man, James McCord.

CADDY
Look, I told you inside--

WOODWARD
--you have nothing more to say, I understand that.

CADDY turns away; WOODWARD goes right on.

WOODWARD
What I don't understand is how you got here.

CADDY
I assure you, there's nothing mysterious involved.

WOODWARD
Probably you're right, but a little while ago, I was talking to a couple of lawyers who'd been assigned to represent the burglars.

CADDY
So?

WOODWARD
Well, they never would have been assigned if anyone had known the burglars had arranged for their own counsel. And that could only mean the burglars didn't arrange for their own counsel--they never even made a phone call.
  (looks at CADDY)
So if they didn't ask for you to be here, how did you know to come?

Without a word, CADDY turns, leaves the line without getting a drink. Silently, WOODWARD watches. Now--

CUT TO:

CADDY seated as before beside RAFFERTY. WOODWARD's voice come from behind him, and as CADDY turns, WOODWARD is seated one row back.

WOODWARD
Did you know to come because one of the other men involved in the break-in called you?

CADDY
(turning)
There is no reason to assume other people were involved.

WOODWARD
Your clients were arrested with a walkie-talkie; they didn't need that to talk among themselves.

CADDY looks at WOODWARD, turns back.

CADDY
(turning back)
They are not my clients.

WOODWARD
You're a lawyer and you're here--

CADDY
--I met one of the defendants, Mr. Barker, at a social occasion once-- (stops himself)
--I have nothing more to say.

WOODWARD
(leaning forward as CADDY turns away again)
A Miami social occasion?
(explaining)
Mr. Rafferty told me the Cubans were from Miami.

CADDY
(sighing)
Barker's wife called me at three this morning; her husband apparently had told her to call if he hadn't called her by then.

WOODWARD
It was really nice of you to come, since you'd only met him once.

CADDY
Are you implying you don't believe me?

WOODWARD
I have nothing more to say.

CADDY
You don't mind getting on people's nerves, do you?
WOODWARD considers this a moment. Then--

WOODWARD

Nope.

And on that word--

CUT TO:

THE COURTROOM as without warning, it quiets. There is suddenly a tremendous air of expectancy, you can feel it. Now we see why as five men in dark business suits are led in; they've been stripped of belts, ties, and shoelaces. McCord is taller than the others. They stand, facing the JUDGE, backs to the audience.

WOODWARD sits watching as the proceedings start, but it's hard to hear. He concentrates as the JUDGE starts speaking.

JUDGE

Will you please state your professions.

The five men do not move or reply. Then, after a long pause, Barker says--

BARKER

Anti-Communists.

JUDGE

Anti-Communists?

(perplexed)

That, sir, is not your average occupation.

WOODWARD starts moving forward now, down an aisle, moving past kids and whores and all the rest, trying to hear what the hell's going on. At the front of the spectator's section is a fence-like wooden barricade about three feet high. As he approaches it--

The JUDGE indicates the bald burglar.

JUDGE

Your name, please.

MCCORD

James McCord.

JUDGE

Will you step forward, sir.

(MCCORD obeys)

WOODWARD at the bench is leaning forward, trying to hear but it's hard.
JUDGE
And what is your occupation, Mr. McCord?

MCCORD
(softly)
Security consultant.

JUDGE
Where?

MCCORD (softer)
Government. Recently retired.

JUDGE
Where in government?

MCCORD
(we can't really make this out)
...Central... Intelligence...
Agency...

JUDGE
(he can't either) Where?

MCCORD
(clearing his throat)
The C.I.A.

And on these words,

ZOOM TO:

CLOSE UP--WOODWARD leaning over the fence practically falling over it in a desperate straining effort to catch what's going on.

WOODWARD
(stunned) Holy shit.

Now from the courtroom--

CUT TO:

THOUSANDS AND THOUSANDS OF WASHINGTON POSTS.

We are at the end of the press run, the papers are all assembled and being cabled and sent off by machine to various places. As the papers continue to roll past--

A UNION TYPE EMPLOYEE grabs a paper, looks at the front page. The Watergate story, headlined whatever it was headlined, is visible. The byline was by Alfred E. Lewis. The union type Post employee glances at the article--

UNION POST EMPLOYEE

(reading half-aloud)
"Five men, one of whom said he is a former employee..."
(stops reading, gives a shrug) Schmucks.

And he turns happily to the sports section--

CUT TO:

A CLOSE UP OF HUNDRED DOLLAR BILLS.

It's new money and looks as if it's been recently ironed. Someone is going through the cash, making a quick count. During this--

FIRST VOICE (V.O.)

Hurry it, huh, Bachinski?

BACHINSKI

You said I could look at it--

PULL BACK TO REVEAL

We're in a room in a police station and two men are present. One, a COP, is nervous as hell and constantly aware of the door. The other, BACHINSKI, is taking hurried notes in a reporter's type notebook as he examines the evidence.

COP

--I said look, not memorize--

BACHINSKI

--almost done, give it a rest, all right...
(and he looks at an address book, he stops)

CUT TO:

THE ADDRESS BOOK. Beside the name "Howard E. Hunt" is the notation "W.House." Now, BACHINSKI hurriedly opens the other book to the letter "H" and there is the same name, "Howard E. Hunt" and beside it, the letters, "W.H."

COP (V.O.)

What'd you find?

BACHINSKI (V.O.)

Beats me. These notebooks belonged to Cuban guys?
COP (V.O.)
S'right.

BACHINSKI (V.O.)
It's gotta mean either White House or whore house, one or the other.

We HOLD on the HUNT name, and the address notations. Then--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD'S APARTMENT - NIGHT.
The phone rings, waking him. He fumbles for the phone and the light, finally gets them both.

WOODWARD
Bachinski?
(reaches for a notebook)
What?--hold it-- (gets it open, starts to write)
--OK, go on, go on...

CUT TO:

A BOX OF MAALOX TABLETS.
ROSENFELD is opening them, we're in his office, WOODWARD sits across the desk, holding the notebook we saw him writing in.

ROSENFELD
...go on, go on...

WOODWARD
That's everything Bachinski had, I think it's worth following up.

ROSENFELD
Don't know; who the hell's Howard Hunt?
(crunches tablets)
It's probably nothing but check it out. Just go easy, it could be crazy Cubans.

HOWARD SIMONS sticks his head in the office.

SIMONS Anything?

ROSENFELD
Woodward's onto a new wrinkle with the break-in thing--absolute page one stuff--
--in other words, you got nothing, you're thumbsucking.

(shrugs)
Could develop.

Let me see what you get, but don't jump--The New York Times thinks it's crazy Cubans.

He moves on. ROSENFELD turns quickly to WOODWARD.

OK, get on this W.House guy and do a better job then you did on McCord.

I did all right on McCord.

Then how come the Associated Press were the ones found out that Mr. McCord is security coordinator for the Committee to Re-elect the President, otherwise known as CREEP?

(getting it straight)
The head of security for the reelection of a Republican President got caught bugging the national offices of the Democrats? What the hell does that mean?

(hasn't the foggiest)
Mr. John Mitchell, the head of CREEP, says it means nothing.
(reads)
"...This man and the other people involved were not operating on either our behalf or with our consent. These is no place in our campaign or in the electoral process for this type of activity, and we will not forget it or condone it."

(getting up)
You can't believe that.

As a rough rule of thumb, as far as I can throw Bronco Nagurski, that's how much I trust John Mitchell...

Now--

CUT TO:

A MOON-FACED MAN RINGING A TRIANGLE.

CUT TO:

THE NEWSROOM as the triangle sound echoes.

HOWARD SIMONS leaves large Managing Editor's office, walks past another office, knocks twice on the glass wall.

Inside the Executive Editor's office, BEN BRADLEE sits. As SIMONS knocks, he turns, nods. He appears, for the moment, deep in thought.

HARRY ROSENFELD on the opposite end of the room hurries out of his office, following a bunch of editors, all of them heading across the huge room. As he passes WOODWARD's desk ROSENFELD pauses.

ROSENFELD

What'd you get on W.House?

WOODWARD

(massaging his neck)

Lotsa hints--

ROSENFELD

(not happy)

I can't sell hints to Simons--

(stops, looks at piece of yellow paper)

--you called everyone you know?

(WOODWARD makes a nod)

Call someone you don't know.

WOODWARD continues to rub his neck as ROSENFELD hurries off, all the editors still moving toward the place where the moon-faced man intermittently rings the triangle.

WOODWARD picks up the sheet of yellow paper from his desk. Lined, legal-sized, it is crammed with names and numbers and addresses. They are in no neat order; looking at them it's almost like following a path; chicken tracks in ink. WOODWARD mutters "to hell with it" and reaches for a thick book, flips it open.

NOW WE SEE THE BOOK: It's the Washington Phone Directory and we're in the W's. As WOODWARD's finger stops, we can see he's looking at the White House entry number. There it is, just like your name and mine. Listed.
Now WOODWARD starts to dial, visibly nervous, a fact he tries very hard to keep out of his voice tone.

WHITE HOUSE OPERATOR (V.O.)

White House.

WOODWARD
(casually) Howard Hunt, please.

Throughout the following call, we stay on WOODWARD's face, hear the other voices.

WHITE HOUSE OPERATOR (V.O.)

Mr. Hunt does not answer.

WOODWARD is delighted he's even there.

WOODWARD
Thanks, anyway--

And he's about to hang up, when--

WHITE HOUSE OPERATOR (V.O.)

I'll bet he's in Mr. Colson's office.
Let me connect you.

SECRETARY (V.O.)

Charles Colson's wire.

WOODWARD
(a little more excited)
Howard Hunt, please.

SECRETARY (V.O.)

Mr. Hunt isn't here just now.

WOODWARD
Thanks, anyway.

And he's about to hang up again when--

SECRETARY (V.O.)

Have you tried Mullen and Company
Public Relations? He works at Mullen and Company Public Relations as a writer. The number is 555-1313. I'm sorry I couldn't be more helpful.

WOODWARD
Listen, forget it.

He hangs up, sits there. His hands are a little twitchy...

HOLD. Now--

CUT TO:
ROSENFELD hurrying (he always hurries) toward his office.
WOODWARD, looking for something in his desk throughout this scene, speaks to him.

WOODWARD
Who's Charles Colson?

ROSENFELD
(stops dead)
I would liken your query to being in Russia half a century ago and asking someone, "I understand who Lenin is and Trotsky I got too, but who's this yokel Stalin?"

WOODWARD
Who's Colson, Harry?

ROSENFELD
The most powerful man in America is President Nixon, probably you've heard his name.

WOODWARD, unfazed by anything, continues to open drawers, close them, as ROSENFELD rolls on.

ROSENFELD
The second most powerful man is Robert Haldeman. Just below him are a trio: Mr. Erlichman is Haldeman's friend, and they protect the President from everybody which is why they are referred to as either The German Shepherds or the Berlin Wall. Mr. Mitchell we've already discussed. Mr. Colson is the President's special counsel.

WOODWARD (rising) Thanks, Harry.
(looks at ROSENFELD)
Know anything about Colson?

ROSENFELD
Just that on his office wall there's a cartoon with a caption reading, "When you've got them by the balls, their hearts and minds will follow."

WOODWARD nods, heads back toward the files as we

CUT TO:

WOODWARD AT HIS DESK dialing the phone.
He's got the Colson file spread out now, and we see pictures of the man and articles the Post had done on him. But basically what we see is WOODWARD plugging away on the goddamn phone and you'd think his finger would fall off from all the dialing and you know his voice is tiring as this montage goes on, you can hear it grow raspy. But a lot of what a reporter does he does on the phone, and that's what we're compressing here. The dialing never stops, the voices are continuous.

WOODWARD
Hello, I'm Bob Woodward of the Washing Post and...
(beat)
Mullen and Company Public Relations? Could you tell me when you expect Mr. Hunt?
(surprised)
He is?

HUNT (V.O.)
Howard Hunt here.

WOODWARD
Hi, I'm Bob Woodward of the Post and--

HUNT (V.O.)
(impatient)
--yes, yes, what is it?

WOODWARD
I was just kind of wondering why your name and phone number were in the address books of two of the men arrested at Watergate?

HUNT (V.O.)
(blind panic)
Good God!

And he bangs the phone down sharply--

--more dialing SOUNDS. Now snatches of conversation--

WOODWARD
I'm sorry to bother you, Mr. Bennett, but we're doing some investigating of one of your employees, Howard Hunt.

BENNETT (V.O.)
Well, if you've been doing some investigating then obviously it's no secret to you that Howard was with the C.I.A.

WOODWARD
(he hadn't known)
No secret at all.

More dialing. Then--

WOODWARD
(tired, voice deeper)
Hello, C.I.A. This is R.W. Woodward, of the Washington Post--get me Personnel--

Dialing again. WOODWARD's voice is showing genuine fatigue.

WOODWARD
Hi, I'm Bob Woodward of the Washington Post--and--what's that?--you've never heard of me?--I can't help that--you don't believe I'm with the Post?--what do you want me to do, Madam, shout "extra--extra"?

There is the SOUND of the phone being slammed down in his ear. Hard. Now--

CUT TO:

ROSENFIELD AND SIMONS approaching WOODWARD who is working at his desk. He has put in a lot of hours on this and looks it.

ROSENFIELD
Whaddya got, whaddya got?

WOODWARD
Hunt is Colson's man-- (to SIMONS, explaining)
--that's Charles Colson, Nixon's special counsel-- (SIMONS almost says something, decides against it)
--they both went to Brown University-- (consulting his notes)
--Hunt worked for the C.I.A. till '70, and this is on deep background, the FBI thinks he's involved with the break-in.

SIMONS
What else have you got?

WOODWARD
According to White House personnel, Hunt definitely works there as a consultant for Colson. But when I called the White House Press office, they said he hadn't worked there for three months. Then the P.R. guy said the weirdest thing to me.
"I am convinced that neither Mr. Colson nor anyone else at the White House had any knowledge of, or participation in, this deplorable incident at the Democratic National Committee."

He looks up at them.

SIMONS
Isn't that what you'd expect them to say?

WOODWARD
Absolutely.

ROSENFELD
So?

WOODWARD
I never asked them about Watergate. I only said what were Hunt's duties at the White House. They volunteered that he was innocent when nobody asked was he guilty.

ROSENFELD
I think we got a White House consultant linked to the bugging.

SIMONS
Just be careful how you write it.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD TYPING LIKE MAD, makes a mistake, corrects it, types on muttering to himself, and--

CUT TO:

ROSENFELD IN HIS OFFICE munching a handful of Maalox tablets and--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD taking a sheet from his typewriter, hurrying off and--

CUT TO:

ROSENFELD taking the sheet from WOODWARD--
WOODWARD

Here's the first take--

ROSENFIELD nods, shows him out and--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD BACK AT HIS MACHINE typing faster then before, makes another mistake, starts to correct it, glances around and--

CUT TO:

ROSENFIELD IN HIS OFFICE gesturing to somebody but not WOODWARD and--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD watching as BERNSTEIN appears in view from behind the wide pillar by WOODWARD's desk, heads toward ROSENFIELD's office. WOODWARD shrugs, goes back to his typing, makes a typo immediately, glances over toward ROSENFIELD's office, freezes as we--

CUT TO:

ROSENFIELD handing some papers to BERNSTEIN. They look, from this distance, suspiciously like WOODWARD's story.

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN hurrying out of ROSENFELD's office, and--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD watching BERNSTEIN until he disappears out of sight behind the pillar. WOODWARD hesitates, finally goes back to his typing, makes another mistake, fixes it, makes still another, his temper is shortly to make itself known--

CUT TO:

ROSENFIELD as WOODWARD hands him another sheet of paper.

WOODWARD

This is all of it, Harry.

ROSENFIELD NODS, takes it, immediately starts to read as we--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD AT HIS DESK watching as ROSENFIELD gestures again. There is a pause. Then BERNSTEIN appears from behind the pillar and--

CUT TO:

ROSENFIELD handing BERNSTEIN another sheet of paper. BERNSTEIN nods, takes it, walks back toward his desk, disappears behind the pillar again. WOODWARD is starting to steam. Now--

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN AT HIS DESK typing magnificently, his hands rising and falling like Rubinstein's. Behind him is the pillar and for a moment there is nothing--then, very slowly, a figure peers out from behind the pillar--it is WOODWARD.

He watches. BERNSTEIN continues to type, then after a moment, rests, thinks, shifts around in his chair and as his glance starts toward the pillar--

CUT TO:

THE PILLAR. WOODWARD is gone.

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN typing madly away.

THE PILLAR. WOODWARD is visible again, eyes very bright... now--

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN finishing typing, his hands moving majestically. WOODWARD comes up behind him, stands looking a second.

Then--

WOODWARD

We have to talk.

BERNSTEIN nods, grabs the papers both that he's been typing and that he's been copying from.

And as he rises--

PAN TO:

WOODWARD AND BERNSTEIN walking silently out of the newsroom then turning left down a darker corridor, passing bulletin boards and wall lockers and it's all nice and quiet as they amble on, nodding to the few people they pass on their way and after a while they turn right and enter the coffee lounge which is empty; the walls are lined with Norman Rockwell reproductions and various kinds of vending machines are visible, selling coffee or milk or fruit or sandwiches and there are some plastic tables and chairs and the minute they are alone, the silence ends.

WOODWARD

What the hell were you doing rewriting my story--
BERNSTEIN
--I sure couldn't hurt it, could I?--

WOODWARD
--it was fine the way it was--

BERNSTEIN
--it was bullshit the way it was--

WOODWARD
--I have to stand here and listen to the staff correspondent from Virginia?--

BERNSTEIN
(a sore subject)
--what have you been here, nine months?--I been in this business since I was sixteen--

WOODWARD
--and you've had some fucking meteoric rise, that's for sure--by the time you turn forty you might be the head of the Montana bureau--

BERNSTEIN
--you only got the job because both you and Bradlee went to Yale--

WOODWARD
--Bradlee went to Harvard--

BERNSTEIN
--they're all the same, all those Ivy League places--they teach you about striped ties and suddenly you're smart--

WOODWARD
--I'm smart enough to know my story was solid--

BERNSTEIN
--mine's better--

WOODWARD
--no way--

BERNSTEIN
(handing them over)
--read 'em both and you'll see--

And as WOODWARD glances at the two stories--

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN watching. Now--
WOODWARD. He glances from one story to the other. Then, disconsolately--

WOODWARD

...crap...

And he sinks down in a chair.

BERNSTEIN

Is mine better?

WOODWARD nods.

WOODWARD

(handing the stories back)

What is it about my writing that's so rotten?

BERNSTEIN

(as he exits)

Mainly it has to do with your choice of words.

And as he goes, leaving WOODWARD just sitting there--

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN, re-entering the newsroom, returning to his desk. He starts to insert some papers into his typewriter, hesitates, lights a cigarette. He inhales, as, behind him, WOODWARD briefly is visible going to his desk behind the pillar.

Finally BERNSTEIN inserts the paper, starts to type as

WOODWARD (V.O.)

(from behind the pillar)

Carl?

BERNSTEIN

(turns)

Yeah?

WOODWARD

(pushing his chair briefly into view)

Fuck you, Carl.

And as he rolls forward again, out of sight--

CUT TO:

RICHARD NIXON ON THE TUBE.
(It's the June 22 Press Conference.) He talks on about something, it doesn't matter exactly what here, the point is, it should include that strange smile of his that kept appearing when the man should not have been smiling. Hints of pressure maybe, that's all, and once it's established--

PULL BACK TO REVEAL:

WOODWARD sitting alone, gloomily staring at the set. We're in the Post Cafeteria, it's the next morning, and the place is pretty much empty. He sips the coffee, it tastes rotten. BERNSTEIN moves up behind him, carrying a cup of coffee of his own. He stands by WOODWARD briefly.

BERNSTEIN
You heard?
(WOODWARD glances up)
They put us both on the break-in thing. Simons liked the way we worked together.
(WOODWARD nods, BERNSTEIN sits down)
Listen, I'm sorry I said your story was bullshit.

WOODWARD
It's OK; I'm sorry I called you a failure.

BERNSTEIN
Forget it, the main thing-- (stops)
--did you call me a failure?

WOODWARD
I was sure trying.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD, BERNSTEIN, AND NIXON. The way it's shot, it's almost as if they're watching each other; NIXON staring out from the TV set, answering questions. WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN sip coffee. We don't know yet--or better, they don't know it yet, but these are our adversaries.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD AND BERNSTEIN, without NIXON now. They sit at the table. Occasionally, NIXON is audible in the background.

WOODWARD
All right, what do we know?

BERNSTEIN
Let me lay a little theory on you--
WOODWARD
(cutting him off)
--I'm not interested in theory. What do we know? For example, Hunt's disappeared.

BERNSTEIN
Well, Barker tried to get blueprints of the Miami Convention Center and the air-conditioning system.

WOODWARD
And McCord was carrying an application for college press credentials for the Democratic convention.
(to BERNSTEIN)
The Times has got to be full of it--it can't be crazy Cubans.

BERNSTEIN
What, though?
(points to Nixon)
It can't be the Republicans--he'd never allow something as stupid as this, not when he's gonna slaughter McGovern anyway.

WOODWARD
Right. Nixon didn't get where he got by being dumb-- (stops abruptly)
--listen, that was a Watergate question--

CUT TO:

NIXON ON THE TUBE. Serious now.

NIXON
The White House has had no involvement whatever in this particular incident.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD AND BERNSTEIN staring at the set thinking...

CUT TO:

WOODWARD AND BERNSTEIN walking toward BERNSTEIN'S desk.

WOODWARD
Hey?

BERNSTEIN
Hmm.

WOODWARD
What do you think he meant, this particular incident? Were there others? How would we find out? You know anyone important?

BERNSTEIN
(sits, shakes his head)
I lived here all my life, I got a million contacts, but they're all bus boys and bellhops.

The reporter KEN RINGLE at the next desk watches them a moment. Then--

RINGLE
What do you need?

BERNSTEIN
Someone inside the White House would be nice.

RINGLE
(writes down phone number)
Call her. She worked for Colson, if that's any help.

As BERNSTEIN grabs for the phone--

CUT TO:

A SECRETARIAL POOL IN A LARGE OFFICE.

BERNSTEIN is talking off to one side with an attractive girl.

GIRL
Kenny's crazy, I never worked for Colson, I worked for an assistant. Colson was big on secrets anyway. Even if I had worked for him, I wouldn't have known anything.

BERNSTEIN
Nothing at all you can remember?

SECRETARY
(headshake)
Sorry.
(pause)
Now if it was Hunt you were interested in--

BERNSTEIN
--Howard Hunt?

SECRETARY
Sure. Him I liked, he was a very nice person. Secretive too, traveled all over, but a decent man.

BERNSTEIN
Any idea what he did?

SECRETARY
Oh, the scuttlebutt for awhile was he was investigating Kennedy--

BERNSTEIN
--Teddy Kennedy?

SECRETARY
Sure. I remember seeing a book about Chappaquiddick on his desk and he was always getting material out of the White House Library and the Library of Congress and--

And as she goes on, quickly--

CUT TO:

THE NEWSROOM.

BERNSTEIN is at his desk, telephoning. WOODWARD stands alongside.

BERNSTEIN
White House Library, please.

We hear the other end of this phone call clearly.

OPERATOR (V.O.)
One moment.

LIBRARIAN (V.O.)
(elderly-sounding lady) Library.

BERNSTEIN
Hi. Carl Bernstein of the Washington Post. I was just wondering if you remember the names of any of the books that Howard Hunt checked out on Senator Kennedy.

LIBRARIAN (V.O.)
I think I do remember, he took out a whole bunch of material. Let me just go see.

SOUND of the phone being laid down.
--what do you think?--

--Hunt doesn't seem like your ordinary consultant.

Maybe a political operative of some sort--

--a spy, you mean?

It makes sense; Hunt worked for the C.I.A. and the White House was paranoid about Teddy Kennedy.

Mr. Bernstein?

Yes, ma'am.

What I said before? I was wrong. The truth is, I don't have a card that Mr. Hunt took out any Kennedy material.

(WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN listen, and now there is something in her voice that wasn't there before: fear)

I remember getting that material out for somebody, but it wasn't Mr. Hunt. The truth is, I've never had any requests at all from Mr. Hunt. (beat) The truth is, I don't know Mr. Hunt.

There is the SOUND of the phone being dropped into its cradle. BERNSTEIN continues to hold his. He and WOODWARD just look at each other. Now--

CUT TO:

THE LIBRARY OF CONGRESS.

Now, as WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN get out of a cab, start inside--

CUT TO:

A MALE LIBRARIAN IN HIS OFFICE.
LIBRARIAN
You want all the material requested by the White House?

PULL BACK TO REVEAL

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN standing there. The nod. One of them maybe says "yessir," the other maybe "please." The LIBRARIAN moves out of his office into a corridor. They go with him. No one else is around. The LIBRARIAN looks at them, quickly--

LIBRARIAN
All White House transactions are confidential.

And just like that, he's back into his office, and as he shuts the door--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD AND BERNSTEIN walking along through the Library of Congress.

WOODWARD
You think they are confidential? I don't know anything about how this town works, I haven't lived here a year yet.

BERNSTEIN
We need a sympathetic face.

On the word "face"--

CUT TO:

A BEARDED YOUNG-LOOKING CLERK. We're in the reading room of the library, and WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN are with him.

YOUNG CLERK
You want every request since when?

BERNSTEIN
(to WOODWARD)
When did Hunt start at the White House?

WOODWARD
July of '71.

BERNSTEIN
About the past year.

CLERK
(starts to smile)
I'm not sure you want 'em, but I got 'em.
Now--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD AND BERNSTEIN seated at a table with from anywhere between 10 to 20 thousand slips of paper. In front of them, seated at a high desk, the bearded clerk looks down on them, shaking his head. It's a staggering amount of work to thumb through.

CLERK
I can't believe you guys are actually doing this.

WOODWARD
(to the clerk)
You do a lot of things when you're on a story.
(to BERNSTEIN, quietly)
Can you believe we're actually doing this?
(BERNSTEIN can't)

Now we have a series of shots of the two of them going through the slips; it took them hours and hours, and the afternoon darkened as they worked. And they're tired. Now--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD AND BERNSTEIN getting back into a cab.

BERNSTEIN
That was fun.
(slams the door)
What now?

WOODWARD
I met a Presidential aide once at a social occasion.

BERNSTEIN
(stunned)
And you haven't called him?--

As the taxi pulls off--

CUT TO:

ROSENFELD
reading an article by BERNSTEIN's desk. WOODWARD sits on an adjacent desk.

ROSENFELD
(to BERNSTEIN)
You got accurate notes on the White House librarian?
(BERNSTEIN nods)
OK, we'll leave space for the White House denial and we should be set.

Suddenly he gestures and we--

CUT TO:

BRADLEE STANDING ACROSS THE ROOM. Without a nod, he moves toward ROSENFIELD.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD AND BERNSTEIN, nervously watching BRADLEE come. As soon as BRADLEE is within earshot, ROSENFIELD starts his sell.

ROSENFIELD
Benjy, we got a present for you. Above the fold on page one for sure. It may not change our lives one way or the other. Just a good, solid piece of American Journalism--
(beat)
--that The New York Times doesn't have.

BRADLEE by this time has taken the story, grabbed an unoccupied chair, sat down, started to read. His only response to ROSENFIELD is an intermittent "uh-huh, uh-huh."

CUT TO:

WOODWARD AND BERNSTEIN, watching as the silence goes on. ROSENFIELD too. He wants the story too, but he doesn't want it like WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN do. They were, as they said, proud of their work. The silence goes on. Finally BRADLEE looks up.

BRADLEE
You haven't got it.
(before they can reply)
A librarian and a secretary say Hunt looked at a book.
(shakes his head)
Not good enough.

He begins editing the piece, slashing paragraphs out of it.

WOODWARD
I was told by this guy at the White House that Hunt was investigating Teddy Kennedy.

BRADLEE
How senior?
WOODWARD
(edgy)
You asking me to disclose my source?

Other reporters are watching now. BRADLEE is impatient, as always.

BRADLEE
Just tell me his title.

WOODWARD
I don't know titles.

BRADLEE
Is he on the level of Assistant to the President or not?

WOODWARD doesn't know. BRADLEE continues to hack at their piece. Done, he stands, walks away.

BRADLEE
Get some harder information next time.

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN watch him go, they are embarrassed, angry, crushed. HOLD on their faces. Then--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD'S APARTMENT - MORNING

He is in pajamas and lugging a flower pot out to the balcony, positioning it so it would be visible to anyone passing in the alley below. He takes a stick with a red flag, jams it into the flower pot. He's nervous and he makes several adjustments, making sure the red flag is secure and won't fall.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD down in the alley, staring up at his apartment. The flag is clearly visible. It's early. He checks his watch, hurries out of the alley.

CUT TO:

THE CITY ROOM - NIGHT

Deserted except for a few older Front Page types, reporters whose legs have given out, playing cards in a corner of the room. WOODWARD is working at his desk until he glances up at a wall clock. It's almost one on the button and as he rises--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD racing down the stairway of the Post; as he hits the lobby, he turns and we OUTSIDE THE POST - NIGHT

WOODWARD appears in the side exit, walks off. When he gets out of sight of the paper, he starts to run. Now--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD turning a corner, running on. Up ahead is a cab--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD IN THE CAB sitting forward tensely. Occasionally, various monuments are briefly visible, lit up in the b.g. WOODWARD takes out some money as we

CUT TO:

THE CAB stopping. WOODWARD pays, gets out. The cab pulls away. When it is out of sight, WOODWARD starts to run again.

CUT TO:

A STREET as WOODWARD runs by. It's not the nicest area in the world. He is going faster now.

CUT TO:

A CAB GASSING UP AT A STATION. WOODWARD hurries to it, gets in and--

CUT TO:

THE SECOND CAB roaring along some Washington streets.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD INSIDE THE CAB. He looks at his watch, tries not to seem nervous. But his fingers are drumming, drumming and--

CUT TO:

THE SECOND CAB stopping, as WOODWARD gets out, pays. The cab starts off, but slowly. WOODWARD waits. The cab doesn't turn as the first one did. WOODWARD still waits. Finally the cab turns and the second it does, WOODWARD starts to run again and--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD turning a corner, running on and--

CUT TO:

ANOTHER CORNER as WOODWARD turns it, finally stops and catches his breath as we--

CUT TO:

A GIGANTIC UNDERGROUND TYPE GARAGE

CUT TO:

WOODWARD ENTERING THE GARAGE. It's an eerie place, and his heels make noise and if you wonder is he edgy, yes he's edgy.
He comes to the ramp leading down to lower levels, hesitates.

CUT TO:

THE RAMP. It seems to descend forever.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD starting down. HOLD on him as he walks. Down he goes, the shadows deepening, then disappearing, then covering him again. He continues on. He must be at least at the first underground level now but he doesn't stop, and we don't stop watching him as he continues to go down, turning, the SOUND of his shoes softer now and he's a smaller figure as we watch him circle around and around until we--

CUT TO:

ANOTHER LEVEL UNDERGROUND. Dimly lit. A few cars parked here and there. WOODWARD hesitates on the ramp, looks around.

THE GARAGE. Dark, dark, eerie.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD quietly stepping off the ramp, continuing to glance this way, that way. Now--

CUT TO:

TWO CARS PARKED BESIDE EACH OTHER.

Nothing unusual about that. But then some cigarette smoke appears, trailing up and disappearing from between the cars.
As WOODWARD moves forward--

CUT TO:

A MAN SITTING ON HIS HAUNCHES BETWEEN THE CARS, smoking. He leans with his back against the wall.

DEEP THROAT
I saw the flag signal--what's up?

WOODWARD
Nothing, that's the problem--the story's gone underground.
DEEP THROAT
You thought I'd help out on specifics?
(headshake)
I'll confirm what you get, try to keep you on the right track, but that's all.
(looks at WOODWARD)
Are you guys really working?
(WOODWARD nods)
How much?

WOODWARD
I don't know maybe sixteen, eighteen hours a day--we've got sources at Justice, the FBI, but it's still drying up.

DEEP THROAT
Then there must be something, mustn't there. Look, forget the myths the media's created about the White House-- the truth is, these are not very bright guys, and things got out of hand.

WOODWARD
If you don't like them, why won't you be more concrete with me?

DEEP THROAT
Because the press stinks too--history on the run, that's all you're interested in.
(inhales)
You come up with anything?

WOODWARD
John Mitchell resigned as head of CREEP to spend more time with his family. That doesn't exactly have the ring of truth.
(DEEP THROAT nods)
Howard Hunt's been found--there was talk that his lawyer had 25 thousand in cash in a paper bag.

DEEP THROAT
Follow the money. Always follow the money.

WOODWARD
To where?

DEEP THROAT
(shakes his head "no")
Go on.
WOODWARD
This man Gordon Liddy—he's going to be tried along with Hunt and the five burglars—we know he knows a lot, we just don't know what.

DEEP THROAT
(lights a new cigarette)
You changed cabs? You're sure no one followed you?

WOODWARD
I did everything you said, but it all seemed—

DEEP THROAT
--melodramatic?
(headshakes)
Things are past that—remember, these are men with switchblade mentalities who run the world as if it were Dodge City.

WOODWARD
What's the whole thing about—do you know?

DEEP THROAT
What I know, you'll have to find out on your own.

WOODWARD
Liddy—you think there's a chance he'll talk?

DEEP THROAT
Talk? Once, at a gathering, he put his hand over a candle. And he kept it there. He kept it right in the flame until his flesh seared. A woman who was watching asked, "What's the trick?" And he replied. "The trick is not minding."

DEEP THROAT shakes his head, walks off. WOODWARD stands alone now, watching. Now the shadows have the other man. Just his footsteps are audible. WOODWARD stands there... HOLD.

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN.

It's morning and he's struggling to get his bike down the steps of his apartment building.

CUT TO:
WOODWARD driving up in his two-year-old red Karmann Ghia. He roars up alongside BERNSTEIN, waving a folded-up newspaper.

BERNSTEIN
What's that?

WOODWARD
The fucking New York Times.

CUT TO:

The Times spread somewhat tentatively over a mailbox. A small headline is visible, with the words "Barker," "Liddy," and "Telephone" in some kind of order. WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN look at it the best they can.

BERNSTEIN
Goddamnit--

WOODWARD
--see?--

BERNSTEIN
--I'm trying--

WOODWARD
--fifteen phone calls--

BERNSTEIN
---fifteen or more phone calls from the burglars in Miami to Gordon Liddy at CREEP--

WOODWARD
Why didn't we get that?

BERNSTEIN
Christ, and I even know somebody at the phone company--

WOODWARD
--you do?--with access to records?

As BERNSTEIN nods--

CUT TO:

A LITTLE CITY PARK.

A guy shells peanuts. BERNSTEIN hurries up.

BERNSTEIN
Why couldn't you have just dialed me from the office, Irwin?

IRWIN
'Cause I'm not calling out from the phone company anymore-- (drops his voice)
--I think the place is bugged.

BERNSTEIN
   (taking some peanuts)
So tell me about the Times article.

IRWIN
What do you want to know?

BERNSTEIN
No games, Irwin; give.

IRWIN
   (looks at BERNSTEIN)
My big civil rights buddy--
   (shakes his head)
--boy, if John Mitchell was after your phone records, would you be screaming.
   (eats)
What're you onto?

BERNSTEIN
Something maybe big.

IRWIN
And that makes anything you do OK, is that it?

BERNSTEIN
Just tell me about the goddamn article.

IRWIN
   (shelling away)
It was accurate, but I can't get a fuller listing for you--all Barker's phone records have been subpoenaed.

BERNSTEIN
Who by?

IRWIN
A Miami D.A. The guy doing the investigating is named Martin Dardis.
   (finishes his peanuts, starts off)

BERNSTEIN
Irwin? I really feel bad, doing something like this--you know that, don't you?

IRWIN looks at BERNSTEIN for a long time. then--
IRWIN
Don't give me any more of your liberal shit, OK, Carl?

He walks off, doesn't look back. Now--

CUT TO:

ROSENFELD

at the water fountain on the 5th floor. He chews up a few Maalox tablets, notices BERNSTEIN steaming up.

BERNSTEIN
Harry, I just talked to a Miami investigator about Barker--

ROSENFELD
--so?

BERNSTEIN
I think it might be helpful if you'd send me to Miami.

ROSENFELD heads for his office, BERNSTEIN pursuing.

ROSENFELD
I'm the one sent you to Toronto, Bernstein--

BERNSTEIN
(trying to head him off)
--that was awhile ago--

ROSENFELD
--"I think it might be helpful if you'd send me to Toronto." That was your spiel then. "The Lifestyles of Deserters."
-whirls on BERNSTEIN-
I'm still waiting for it.

He enters his office, BERNSTEIN follows.

BERNSTEIN
Down to Miami and back--how much damage can I do?

ROSENFELD
You're the fella who forgot he rented a Hertz car, do I have to tell you they didn't forget to send us the bill?

And he looks unsympathetically at BERNSTEIN--
CUT TO:

SIMONS circling around the 5th floor. ROSENFELD falls into step. They keep moving throughout.

ROSENFELD
I can predict the next words you're gonna say: "anyone but Bernstein."
(SIMONS gestures for ROSENFELD to continue)
I want to send a reporter to Miami.

SIMONS
Anyone but Bernstein.

ROSENFELD
Howard--

SIMONS
--remember Toronto, Harry.

ROSENFELD
That was awhile ago.

SIMONS
I don't get it--you were the one who wanted to fire him.

ROSENFELD
I know, I did, but damnit Howard-- (SIMONS looks at him)
For the first time since I've known him, I think he's really humping...

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN'S APARTMENT.

A shambles. He is busy doing two things at once, studying notebooks and packing. Music plays, lovely stuff; the Bach Brandenburgs. As the phone rings--

BERNSTEIN
(ANSWERING) Yeah?
(pause)
Yes, this is Carl Bernstein.
(stunned)
You're repossessing my bicycle?
(soften)
Listen, I'm sure I paid this month's installment, so why don't you check your records before you go around hassling people?
(pause)
Oh...
And as he stands there--

AN ATTRACTIVE, EFFICIENT-LOOKING WOMAN of BERNSTEIN's age. She has just entered the apartment. Vivaldi is playing now.

BERNSTEIN
Hannah, I never would have bothered you but I'm off to Miami and they're gonna take away my ten speed unless I get it straightened out fast.

HANNAH
(glancing around the chaos)
Where are your bills, Carl?

BERNSTEIN
Oh, they're here.
(starts lifting debris from his desk)
I'm keeping much better records now, Hannah.
(grabbing a big manila envelope)
See?
(hands it to her)

HANNAH
(looks inside)
Carl, it's a jungle.
(sits at his desk, takes out a mass of papers--glancing at the top bill)
I suggest you either pay this immediately or lay in a large supply of candles.
(studies another bill)
You'd give a stranger the shirt off your back--except it wouldn't be paid for.

He smiles, gently begins massaging her shoulders as she studies his finances.

BERNSTEIN
Hey... very tense.

HANNAH
(nods)
Lot of pressure at the Star.
(looking at the bills)
Carl, when we got married, you were four thousand dollars in debt; when we split, you were solvent. That may prove to be the outstanding single achievement of my life, and now look at this.
   (sighs)
How much did the damn bike cost?

   BERNSTEIN
Five hundred; six maybe.

   HANNAH
(looking at paper)
You're two months behind--you got enough to cover?

   BERNSTEIN
I think.

   HANNAH
Give me your checkbook then.

   BERNSTEIN
It's right under that pile.

   (sighs)

He indicates a mound of papers. She pulls it out as he continues to massage her, more sensually now. She reaches back, puts her hand on his.

   HANNAH
I thought you had to get to Miami.

   BERNSTEIN
There's always a later plane.

   HANNAH
You're a sex junkie, you know that, Carl?

   BERNSTEIN
Nobody's perfect.
   (more rubbing now)
I'm glad you're out of it, Hannah--you're a terrific reporter and I turned you into a bookkeeper.

   HANNAH looks at BERNSTEIN a moment; then she smiles gently, shakes her head.

   HANNAH
Aw baby, you can get it up... I just wonder if you'll ever be able to get it together.

   And quickly from that--

   CUT TO:

   BERNSTEIN
seated perspiring on a hard bench in a stifling office. Outside: palm trees; we're in Miami. And judging from the number of cigarette butts strewn around the bench, BERNSTEIN's been there a while. Waiting. Nervous. And maybe he never will be able to get it together, who knows.

At the front, a SECRETARY sits filing her nails. Behind her are a number of closed doors to offices. No one passes without her OK. The clock hits three in the afternoon as BERNSTEIN gets up from the bench, goes to the SECRETARY.

BERNSTEIN
Hi, it's me. I'm still here.

SECRETARY
(couldn't be nicer)
I'm so glad.

BERNSTEIN
I'd really like to see Mr. Dardis.

SECRETARY
And you will.
(smiles)
But not now.

BERNSTEIN
I called him from Washington. He's the one who asked me to be here at eleven in the morning.

SECRETARY
I told you, he had to go out on a case.

CUT TO:

THE BENCH as BERNSTEIN slumps back down. He wipes his forehead with his sleeve, smokes a fresh cigarette, is kind of interested when a UNIFORMED COP walks up to the SECRETARY, who is now putting red polish on her nails.

UNIFORMED COP
Is it OK to go on back?

She nods.

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN watching as the cop walks past the SECRETARY, enters an office behind.

CUT TO:

THE CLOCK ON THE WALL. IT'S QUARTER OF FOUR NOW.

PULL BACK TO REVEAL
BERNSTEIN, approaching the SECRETARY again. She is working on her right hand now.

BERNSTEIN

Could you reach Mr. Dardis by car radio?

SECRETARY

He is not in the car.

(Smiles; she's just so understanding)

Sorry.

---

CUT TO:

ANOTHER UNIFORMED COP walking by the SECRETARY's desk.

SECOND COP

Hey, babe.

He enters the same office the first COP did.

---

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN. He lights another cigarette, puts it out, then lights another.

---

THE SECRETARY

finishing her manicure. It is almost five o'clock now. BERNSTEIN, his bench a sea of cigarette butts, slowly gets up and goes to the SECRETARY.

BERNSTEIN

Mr. Dardis does call in every so often?

SECRETARY

Well of course.

BERNSTEIN

(quietly)

Good. Just tell him I was here, that I'm sorry I missed him--

He walks out the double doors.

---

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN IN HALLWAY. He looks down the hall. At the end, opposite the SECRETARY's reception room, is a big glass door with a sign reading: Office of the Dade County Clerk. BERNSTEIN goes into a phone booth in the corridor from which he can see both offices. He puts in a dime, and dials.
BERNSTEIN
Mr. Dardis' office, please.

CUT TO:

SECRETARY. The phone RINGS and she punches the button on the phone console.

SECRETARY
Mr. Dardis' office.

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN in phone booth.

BERNSTEIN
This is Mr. Tomlinson in the clerk's office. Could you come across the hall for a moment? We've got some documents your boss probably should see.

He hangs up.

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN watching from phone booth as the SECRETARY hurries across the hallway. As we see her open the door of the clerk's office, BERNSTEIN bolts out of the phone booth and runs into the reception room heading straight for the SECRETARY's desk.

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN at her desk, looking at the telephone console, receiver in hand. He punches the button marked Intercom and we can hear it BUZZ somewhere.

VOICE (V.O.)
Dardis.

BERNSTEIN
Carl Bernstein's here to see you--I don't know why, but he seems angry--

CUT TO:

DARDIS emerging through one of the doors behind BERNSTEIN. BERNSTEIN see him.

BERNSTEIN
(to DARDIS)
Look, you've been jerking my chain all day. If there's some reason you can't talk to me--like the fact that you've already leaked everything to The New York Times--just say so.
DARDIS
Listen, I've got a dinner--can't we do this tomorrow?

BERNSTEIN
(headshake)
I'm on deadline.

CUT TO:

DARDIS' OFFICE. He is fiddling with a combination lock at a filing cabinet. BERNSTEIN is seated across DARDIS' desk.

DARDIS
You want Barker's phone stuff or his money stuff?

BERNSTEIN
Whatever.

He hands BERNSTEIN some papers, glances at his watch.

DARDIS
I'll never get out of here in time.

BERNSTEIN
(flying through what he's been handed)
The telephone calls... we know about that.

DARDIS
The rest is Barker's bank records. It's mostly the eighty-nine thousand in Mexican cashier's checks--

BERNSTEIN
--yeah, that was in The Times this morning.

BERNSTEIN continues to fly through the papers.

BERNSTEIN
(continuing stops)
What's this Dahlberg check?

And as it's mentioned--

CUT TO:

CLOSE UP--CASHIER'S CHECK. It's drawn on the First Bank and Trust Company of Boca Raton, Florida, it's dated April 10 and it's for 25 thousand dollars, payable to the order to Kenneth H. Dahlberg.

DARDIS' VOICE
That the twenty-five grand one?—
Don't know—

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN starting to copy the check in a meticulous facsimile. DARDIS watches.

DARDIS
I never could figure just who this Dahlberg was.
(watching BERNSTEIN)
Think it might be anything?

BERNSTEIN
(casually) This?
(shrugs)
Naw...

And from here quickly—

ZOOM TO:

BERNSTEIN IN A PHONE BOOTH in the lobby of the Justice Building. Wildly excited—

BERNSTEIN
—Woodward—Woodward, listen, I don't know what I got—(holding the Dahlberg facsimile) —-and I think the Times has it too—(big) —-but somewhere there's a Kenneth H. Dahlberg in this world and we've gotta find him—

And now comes

THE HUNT FOR DAHLBERG.

This is a compressed montage sequence in which we CUT from one reporter to the other, both of them desperately trying to locate a man names DAHLBERG.

WOODWARD is maybe in the reference room of the Post, sweating, surrounded by Who's Who and Dictionary of American Biographies and phone books from dozens and dozens of cities—

BERNSTEIN is maybe in the phone booth of the Justice Building, sweating, with a pile of dimes as he dials away.

This took them hours, and that effort should be visible to us. They tire, grow punchy, but they keep on, checking phone book and dialing numbers and God knows what else. The point is, we want to get to DAHLBERG in a reasonably short amount of time, but we also want people to know there was effort involved.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD, bleary, in the reference room, a girl comes in, a researcher librarian type.

RESEARCHER
Were you after the Dahlberg articles from the files?
(WOODWARD nods)
There aren't any, sorry.

And now she drops a piece of paper, a photo--

WOODWARD Whazzis?

RESEARCHER
(shrugs)
Our Dahlberg file.

As she leaves--

CUT TO:

The photo.

It is a picture of Hubert Humphrey standing next to another man. The caption identifies that other man as KENNETH DAHLBERG. Now--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD AT HIS DESK.

The room is reasonably quiet. ROSENFELD is visible in his office. As WOODWARD picks up the phone, gets Minneapolis information--

CUT TO:

ROSENFELD'S PHONE RINGING. He hurries in, grabs it.

BERNSTEIN'S VOICE (V.O.)
Harry--I know how to get Dahlberg--

ROSENFELD
--Woodward's talking to him know.

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN, drenched. There are no dimes left. He listens a moment more, then nods, hangs up, leans back against the glass, takes a deep breath, closes his eyes as we WOODWARD on the phone.

WOODWARD
--this should take only a minute, Mr. Dahlberg, but we're doing a follow-up on the break-in-- (pause)
--and I was kind of curious about your check.

DAHLBERG (V.O.)
...check...?

WOODWARD
The twenty-five thousand dollar one.
(silence)
The one with your name on it.
(silence)
In Bernard Barker's Florida account.
(still nothing)
Bernard Barker, the Watergate burglar--

DAHLBERG (V.O.)
(struggling)
...you're definitely doing a story...?

WOODWARD
Yes, sir.

DAHLBERG (V.O.)
I'm a proper citizen, I'm a decent man, I don't do anything that isn't decent or proper.
(WOODWARD waits, pen ready; tense as hell)
I know I shouldn't tell you this...

WOODWARD's lips are going "tell me, tell me."

DAHLBERG (V.O.)
That twenty-five thousand dollars is money I collected for Nixon in this year's campaign.

WOODWARD
I see. And how do you think it reached Miami?

DAHLBERG (V.O.)
I don't know; I really don't. The last time I saw it was when I was in Washington. I gave it to the Finance department of the Committee to Re-Elect the President. How it got to that burglar, your guess is as good as mine.

WOODWARD (trying to keep his voice level)
That checks out with our finding, thank you, Mr. Dahlberg.

CUT TO:

AN ARTICLE WITH WOODWARD'S NAME ON THE BYLINE.

ROSENFELD holds it.

ROSENFELD
CREEP financed the Watergate break-in, Jesus Christ.

He starts off.

WOODWARD
One sec'--

WOODWARD takes the story, scrawls BERNSTEIN's name in front of his on the byline. ROSENFELD watches. As WOODWARD finishes, he takes the story again, hurries off. Now--

CUT TO:

THE HEADLINE OF THEIR STORY:

"Campaign Funds Found in Watergate Burglar's Account."

Now--

PULL BACK TO REVEAL

that it isn't exactly a gigantic headline piece. As a matter of fact, as more and more of page one appears, we see that their story is tucked away at the bottom and as bigger and bigger headlines are visible--

PULL BACK TO REVEAL

--the whole first page. Plastered across the top in giant letters is the following: "EAGLETON RESIGNS." And as you look at the whole page now, you can barely make out the tiny piddling Watergate story. The point is abundantly clear:
obody cared a whole lot.

CUT TO:

THE TRIANGLE

being rung like crazy. And as it SOUNDS--

CUT TO:
THE BUDGET MEETING

SIMONS
--OK, last go-round. Foreign, anything else?

The foreign editor, an enormously thoughtful-looking and respected man, indicates "no."

SIMONS
(to another editor)
National?

NATIONAL EDITOR
I'll stand with the Eagleton follow-ups and McGovern not being able to get a replacement--that's your page one stuff right there, Howard--

SIMONS
--Metropolitan--

ROSENFELD
--you are ignoring the importance of the Dahlberg repercussions--

NATIONAL EDITOR
--nobody gives a shit about the Dahlberg repercussions--

ROSENFELD
(to NATIONAL EDITOR)
--quit equivocating, say what you mean--

(to SIMONS and BRADLEE)
--our story got Government Accounting to start an audit on CREEP's finances--

BRADLEE
--and we printed that, didn't we, Harry? And when the frigging audit's done, we'll print that too--

NATIONAL EDITOR
--let me tell what happened when I was having lunch today at the Sans Souci--

ROSENFELD
--correction--when you were drinking your lunch at the bar of the Sans Souci--

NATIONAL EDITOR
--this White House guy, a good one, a pro, came up and asked what is this Watergate compulsion with you guys and I said, well, we think it's important and he said, if it's so goddamn important, who the hell are Woodward and Bernstein?

ROSENFELD
Ask him what he's really saying--he means take the story away from Woodstein and give it to his people at the National Desk--

NATIONAL EDITOR
--well, I've got some pretty experienced fellas sitting around, wouldn't you say so?--

ROSENFELD
--absolutely--and that's all they do, sit sit sit--every once in a while, they call up a Senator, some reporting--

NATIONAL EDITOR
--well, what if your boys get it wrong--

BRADLEE
(after a beat)
Then it's our asses, isn't it?

SIMONS
(indicates the meeting is over)
And we'll all have to go to work for a living.

As the men rise and head for the door, the FOREIGN EDITOR moves toward BRADLEE and SIMONS who remain seated as before.

FOREIGN EDITOR
I don't think either Metropolitan or National should cover the story.
(BRADLEE and SIMONS look at him)
I don't think we should cover the story, period.

BRADLEE
Go on.

FOREIGN EDITOR
It's not that we're using unnamed sources that bothers me, or that everything we print the White House denies, or that almost no other papers are reprinting our stuff.
SIMONS
What then?

FOREIGN EDITOR
I don't believe the goddamn story, Howard, it doesn't make sense.

BRADLEE
It will, it just hasn't bottomed out yet, give it time.

FOREIGN EDITOR
Ben, Jesus, there are over two thousand reporters in this town, are there five on Watergate? Where did we suddenly get all this wisdom?

BRADLEE and SIMONS say nothing. They respect this guy.

FOREIGN EDITOR
Look--why would the Republicans do it? --my God, McGovern is self-destructing before our eyes--just like Muskie did, Humphrey, the bunch of 'em.

(sits on the table, talks quietly on)
Why would the burglars have put the tape around the door instead of up and down unless they wanted to get caught? Why did they take a walkie-talkie and then turn it off, unless they wanted to get caught? Why would they use McCord--the only direct contact to the Republicans?

BRADLEE
You saying the Democrats bugged themselves?

FOREIGN EDITOR
The FBI thinks it's possible--the Democrats need a campaign issue, corruption's always a good one.

(rises, starts out)
Get off the story, Ben--or put some people on McGovern's finances; fair is fair, even in our business.

He leaves. BRADLEE and SIMONS stay where they are, both of them flattened by what the guy's said. Because they're not sure he's wrong... HOLD. Now--

CUT TO:

THE PAPERS POURING OUT OF THE ASSEMBLY LINE.
We're back with the UNION GUY from before. He pulls out a paper again, looks at a story on the front page--

CUT TO:

THE WOODWARD/BERNSTEIN STORY that said the GAO found that CREEP has mishandled over $500,000 in campaign funds.

UNION GUY

(to another UNION GUY who's reading over his shoulder)

What'd'ya think?

SECOND UNION GUY

Politics as usual, someone just got caught with his hand in the cookie jar, that's all.

UNION GUY

.he's not so sure)

Big fuckin' cookie jar.

As he turns to the sports section--

CUT TO:

GETTING THE CREEP LIST SEQUENCE.

Either they get it as it is now, or as they really did, from a Post researcher who knew someone. In ant case, we see the list, with the columns of names and numbers meaning offices and phone extensions.

We also see the two of them working, first, making long attempts at figuring out who worked for whom at CREEP.

Then, once they have that, they begin using the cross-reference phone books, which are not familiar to moviegoers. And from these, they begin to get the home addresses of the various small-fry people who work for CREEP.

Near the end alphabetically, there is a common female name, Jane Smith or something like that. As BERNSTEIN runs his finger down the addresses, something strikes him as familiar, and as he reaches for the phone--

CUT TO:

A CRUMMY-LOOKING BAR - MID-DAY.

BERNSTEIN enters, looks around, then smiles and moves to a lovely girl with a sweet face who probably weighs 200 pounds. She is sitting alone in a corner booth. She nods to BERNSTEIN, can't quite pull off a smile.
BERNSTEIN
(sits across)
This is practically a high school reunion for us, Jane--I would have sprung for a classier place.

JANE
Anyplace really public, they'd know about it--they know everything at the Committee, Carl--

BERNSTEIN
--you don't really think you're being followed?

JANE
This girlfriend of mine at the Committee, the other day she went back to the D.A. to tell the things the FBI didn't ask her. That night, her boss, he knew what she'd done. They control everything; that's how they know it all.

BERNSTEIN
FBI too?

JANE
You don't believe me? Well, I was working the weekend of the break-in and my God, all the executives were running around like crazy--you had to practically wait in line to use the shredding machine--and when the FBI came to investigate, they never even asked me about it.

BERNSTEIN
If you don't like it down there, why don't you quit?

JANE
I don't know what they'd do to me.

BERNSTEIN
(reaching over)
Hey, easy...

JANE
(headshake)
We're a long way from high school, Carl... (she looks at him) ...and I'm scared.

HOLD on her frightened face a moment. Then-- riding home on his bicycle. He gets to his building, starts lugging it up when--
BERNSTEIN

JANE'S VOICE (O.S.)

They found out I saw you-- (BERNSTEIN stops, glances around)
--they wanted to know everything.
(louder)
Don't call me again.

BERNSTEIN

(moving toward her voice)
I can help if you'll--

JANE (O.S.)

--stay away from me, Carl!

CUT TO:

JANE IN THE DARKNESS. If she was scared earlier, it's panic-time now. She turns, hurries off.

BERNSTEIN watches her. Suddenly a SOUND comes from the darkness behind him. He whirls. It was nothing but from the way he jumped when it happened you can tell the fear is spreading.

Now from Washington, in darkness--

CUT TO:

ESSEX HOUSE IN MANHATTAN - BRIGHT SUNSHINE.

WOODWARD comes hurrying along, and as he enters the hotel--

CUT TO:

A DESK CLERK shaking his head at WOODWARD.

CLERK

We have no one by the name of Mitchell registered.

WOODWARD

My mistake, sorry.

And as he goes--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD out on the street, in a phone booth near Essex House.
WOODWARD
Get me John Mitchell, it's urgent.

OPERATOR (V.O.)
That would be room 710, I'll connect you.

WOODWARD waits anxiously as the connection is made.

MAN'S VOICE (V.O.)
The Mitchells.

WOODWARD
Can I speak to Martha Mitchell, please.

MAN'S VOICE (V.O.)
Who is this?

WOODWARD
I've met Mrs. Mitchell in Washington, I'm Bob Woodward of the Post and tell her--

And the phone clicks dead--

CUT TO:

AN ELEVATOR, the numbers of the floors being lit as it rises. 4--5--6-- WOODWARD stands alone in the elevator. As it reaches seven and the doors slide open, he steps out and

CUT TO:

THE MARRIOTT SUITE. It's numbered 710. WOODWARD approaches but as he does the door begins to open so he whirs, knocks on the door nearest him. Now 710 is wide open and several maids leave, watched by a large black man.

FIRST MAID
We'll be back after lunch.

BLACK MAN
(it's the voice from the phone)
We'll be here.

WOODWARD waits by his door as 710 slowly closes. The maids look at him a moment. He knocks again, louder.

SECOND MAID
I think they went out.

WOODWARD
(shrugs)
I don't mind waiting.
The maids nod, move out of sight. WOODWARD stands tense and still, watching the closed door numbered 710... Now--

CUT TO:

NATIONAL AIRPORT IN D.C. - LATE AFTERNOON.

People are getting off the shuttle, WOODWARD among them. BERNSTEIN waits.

BERNSTEIN
(as WOODWARD reaches him)
See her?
(WOODWARD nods)
Get anything?

WOODWARD
For the paper, no; for us, plenty.
(The two of them head for the terminal)
I waited a long time and finally this big guy--I guess a bodyguard--he left and I knocked and she remembered me, we talked awhile.

BERNSTEIN
And?--And?--

WOODWARD
(looks at BERNSTEIN)
--she was panicked, Carl--every time I mentioned Watergate, you could tell.

BERNSTEIN
Were you eyebrow reading?

WOODWARD
(shakes his head "no")
It was there. I just don't get it; a CREEP secretary being scared, that's one thing. But what does the wife of one of the most powerful men in America have to be afraid of...?

They look at each other, neither has a clue. HOLD. Now-- moving along a residential area in Washington. It's later that night.

CUT TO:

THE RED KARMANN GHIA

CUT TO:
INSIDE THE CAR - NIGHT. WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN driving along.

BERNSTEIN
Left up ahead.

WOODWARD nods.

WOODWARD
Who's first?

BERNSTEIN
Alphabetically, on the CREEP phone list, Miss Helen Abbott of South George Street.

As WOODWARD turns left.

BERNSTEIN
Now hang your second right-- (explaining)
--this was my turf when I was a kid.

And on those words--

CUT TO:

A DEAD END SIGN. We hear BERNSTEIN explaining--

BERNSTEIN (V.O.)
I brought you over one street too many--go back and hang a left again.

Now on those words--

CUT TO:

ANOTHER DEAD END SIGN.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN pulled over to one side. BERNSTEIN, baffled, stares around; WOODWARD looks at a map with the aid of a flashlight.

BERNSTEIN
I don't get it... this really was my turf...

WOODWARD
(concentrating on the map)
You're not a kid anymore.

BERNSTEIN
(shaking his head)
My first day as a copy boy I was sixteen and wearing my only grown-up suit—it was cream colored. At 2:30 the head copy boy comes running up to me and says, "My God, haven't you washed the carbon paper yet? If it's not washed by three, it'll never be dry for tomorrow."

(WOODWARD is getting interested in the story now)
And I said, "Am I supposed to do that?" and he said, "Absolutely, it's crucial." So I run around and grab all the carbon paper from all the desks and take it to the men's room. I'm standing there washing it and it's splashing all over me and the editor comes in to take a leak, and he says, "What the fuck do you think you're doing?" And I said, "It's 2:30. I'm washing the carbon paper."

(BERNSTEIN looks at WOODWARD)
Just wanted you to know I've done dumber things than get us lost, that's all.

WOODWARD goes back to his map. BERNSTEIN continues to smoke, staring around at the night.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD — AT THE FRONT OF A HOUSE. A sweet old lady is looking out at him.

WOODWARD
Hi. I'm Bob Woodward of the Washington Post and I hate to bother you at home--

SWEET OLD LADY
--I already get the Post. I don't need another subscription.

WOODWARD
No, I'm a reporter. I wanted to talk to you about the Committee to Re-Elect.

SWEET OLD LADY
The what to what?

WOODWARD
You work there, Miss Abbott.

SWEET OLD LADY
I'm not Miss Abbott.

CUT TO:

ANOTHER LADY - IN HER DOORWAY. This time both WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN are there.

WOODWARD
Miss Abbott?

MISS ABBOTT
Yes?

WOODWARD
We're from the Washington Post and we wanted to ask you some questions about the Committee.

ZOOM TO:

CLOSE UP - MISS ABBOTT

MISS ABBOTT
I'm sorry--

And from nowhere, suddenly she bursts into tears.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN as her door slams in their faces.

They just look at each other, bewildered. And a little bit upset; their upset increases as the rejections go on.

CUT TO:

WHOLE SERIES OF FACES

in quick succession--they're all in various doorways, men, women, young, old. The only thing in common is their fear.

MIDDLE-AGED MAN
(literally trembling)
God, it's just so awful--

And as he closes the door

CUT TO:

A YOUNG GIRL
--I can't--I'd like to but-- (that's all she'll say)

And as her door starts to shut

CUT TO:
OLD MAN
--go--you've got to go before they see you--please--

And as he almost starts to beg

CUT TO:

OLD WOMAN
--no... good...

She stands there, shaking her head back and forth, back and forth, pathetic and sad. Now--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD.

He is seated alone staring at his coffee cup, surrounded by junk food debris. We are in a Hot Shoppe, it's night, and as BERNSTEIN comes up with food, they're dressed differently from before. BERNSTEIN puts more junk food and coffee down.

BERNSTEIN
You had the Mighty Mo and the fries without gravy, right?
(WOODWARD shrugs)

BERNSTEIN passes over some food. They both look bleary and in foul moods. Silently, they start to eat, something they continue doing throughout. They're not hungry, they just eat.

WOODWARD
This is terrific work, if you like rejection.

BERNSTEIN
I never scared anyone before.

WOODWARD
It's not us, they were scared before we got there.
(looks at BERNSTEIN)
What do we know?

BERNSTEIN
Facts or theory?

WOODWARD
Anything you've got.

BERNSTEIN
We know there's got to be something or they wouldn't be so panicked.
WOODWARD
And that something's got to be more than just Hunt, Liddy, and the five burglars--those indictments are gonna be bullshit when they come down. What else do we know?

BERNSTEIN
I just wish we knew when someone would talk to us, that's all.

The continue to eat, bleary and numb, as we

CUT TO:

A MIDDLE-AGED WOMAN--

--kind of an honest, hard-working face.

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN are standing in her doorway.

WOODWARD
A friend at the Committee told us to contact you--

WOMAN
--who was it?

BERNSTEIN
We never reveal our sources, which is why you can talk to us.

WOODWARD
It's safe, try it, you'll see.

She doesn't talk at first, but she doesn't slam the door either.

BERNSTEIN
We understand your problem--

WOODWARD
--you believe in the President, you wouldn't ever want to do anything disloyal.

BERNSTEIN
We appreciate your position--really.

And now she starts, at last, to talk, and they expect it to be their first breakthrough, but when it turns out to be the most withering onslaught yet, they are stunned.

WOMAN
You people--you think that you can come into someone's life, squeeze what you want, then get out.
(to BERNSTEIN)
You don't appreciate a goddamn thing, mister.
(to WOODWARD)
And you don't understand nothing.
(voice rising)
But the Committee's briefed us on you--so get the hell out of here--
(big)
--do you like scaring the life out of decent people?--'cause if you don't, in the name of God--stop it!

And she slams the door--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN, slowly walking back in silence back to the car.

WOODWARD
At Yale once, they held an auction.
There was this woman and her name was Lulu Landis. Her postcards came up for sale. She had 1400 postcards written to her and I'd never heard of her before but I knew I had to have those cards, I had to know why anyone would get so many messages. I paid sixty-five dollars for them...
I got all crazy trying to work it out and first it was just a maze but then I found that her husband killed himself in Dayton, and once I had that, it all began to open, an evangelist had come to Dayton and his horses hit Lulu Landis at the corner of 13th and Vermillion and she was paralyzed. Permanently, and her favorite thing til then had been traveling and all her friends, whenever they went anyplace, they wrote her. Those cards, they were her eyes...

They continue to walk; slowly.

CUT TO:

A MIDDLE-AGED MAN--IN HIS DOORWAY

MIDDLE-AGED MAN
I know who you are and I'm not afraid but that don't mean I'll talk to you either--you're just a couple Democrats out to stop Nixon getting re-elected.
WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN, staring at the man.

WOODWARD

Democrats?

MIDDLE-AGED MAN

That's right.

BERNSTEIN

I hate both parties.

WOODWARD

And I'm a Republican.

The middle-aged man looks at him.

BERNSTEIN

(surprised, turns to WOODWARD)

Republican?

WOODWARD

Sure.

BERNSTEIN

Who'd you vote for?

WOODWARD

When?

BERNSTEIN

'68.

WOODWARD

Nixon.

BERNSTEIN stares at him in silence as we--

CUT TO:

ANOTHER SERIES OF CREEP EMPLOYEES.

Only they aren't slamming doors, they're sitting in various rooms of their houses and apartments. We don't see the reporters or hear their questions but the answers they receive make it self-evident. We start with the middle-aged man seen above.

MIDDLE-AGED MAN

Mitchell never left the Committee--he resigned, sure, but he was there as much as before--

CUT TO:
YOUNGER MAN
--oh, don't worry, Gordon Liddy will be happy to take the fall for everyone because, well, it's not that Gordon's crazy, he's...
(pauses, looking for the right word)
...weird. I'll give you some Committee people who know about him--only don't tell it was me--

CUT TO:

YOUNGER WOMAN
--of course we were briefed on what to say--and never to volunteer anything--

CUT TO:

OLD WOMAN
--oh, we were never alone with the FBI, there was always someone from the Committee right there--

Smiles, talks on as we--

CUT TO:

RICHARD NIXON'S SOMBER VISAGE.

NIXON
...No one in this administration, presently employed, was involved in this very bizarre incident...

FULL BACK TO REVEAL

BERNSTEIN and WOODWARD in a crummy cafeteria, watching the evening news on the TV set high on the wall. WOODWARD eats a hamburger, BERNSTEIN smokes, sips coffee. It is night, as usual now.

CUT TO:

NIXON--on the tube.

NIXON
...What really hurts in matters of this sort is not the fact that they occur, because overzealous people in campaigns do things that are wrong. What really hurts is if you try to cover it up.

CUT TO:
WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN as the news commentator come on, begins introducing another story.

WOODWARD
Did he just say what I think he said?

BERNSTEIN
You voted for him.

He gives WOODWARD a big smile. WOODWARD eats his hamburger in silence...

CUT TO:

A DIFFERENT TIME, A DIFFERENT PLACE--EARLY EVENING.

BERNSTEIN gets out of his car, walks up, and knocks on the door of a small tract house in the D.C. suburbs. A woman opens the door.

BERNSTEIN
Hi, I'm Carl Bernstein of the Washington Post and--

WOMAN
--oh, you don't want me, you want my sister.
(calls out)
For you.

And we--

CUT TO:

THE BOOKKEEPER approaching the door. She's younger than the cliché version of a bookkeeper. As she looks at her sister--

BOOKKEEPER'S SISTER
This here is Carl Bernstein--

BOOKKEEPER
--omigod, you're from that place, you've got to go.

The sister is smoking and there is a pack on the dinette table.

BERNSTEIN
Could I bum one of your cigarettes?--

As the sister starts for the pack--

BERNSTEIN
--don't bother, I'll get it.

And he crosses ten feet inside the front door.
BOOKKEEPER
You've really got to go.

BERNSTEIN
Just let me get a match.

He goes into the living room area, picks up a book of matches. This whole scene moves slowly, the tension building under it--it's not like news people talking, nothing overlaps here.

BERNSTEIN
But I want you to know that I understand why you're afraid--a lot of good people down there at the Committee are afraid. I'm really sorry for what you're being put through.

BOOKKEEPER
All those articles you people write--where do you find that stuff?

BERNSTEIN
We don't tell anyone that. Which is why you can talk to us. And if we can't verify what you say someplace else, we don't print it. That's another reason you can relax.

BOOKKEEPER
(tense)
I'm relaxed--light your cigarette.

BERNSTEIN lights the cigarette.

BERNSTEIN
You were Hugh Sloan's bookkeeper when he worked for Maurice Stans at Finance, and we were sort of wondering, did you go work for Stans immediately after Sloan quit or was there a time lapse?

BOOKKEEPER
I never worked for Sloan or Stans.

BOOKKEEPER'S SISTER
(out of the blue; to BERNSTEIN)
Would you like some coffee or anything?

As the BOOKKEEPER winces.

BERNSTEIN
(like a shot)
Please, yes, thank you.
(he looks at the BOOKKEEPER)
Can I sit down for a minute?

He is by a couch.

BOOKKEEPER
One minute but then--

BERNSTEIN
--right, right, I've got to go.
(he sits)
Why did you lie just then?

The BOOKKEEPER kneads her hands together silently. BERNSTEIN watches.

BERNSTEIN
I was just curious--you don't do it well, so I wondered. Have you been threatened, if you told the truth, is that it?

BOOKKEEPER
...No... never in so many words...

BERNSTEIN
(gently)
It's obvious you want to talk to someone--well, I'm someone.

He takes out his notebook.

CUT TO:

The BOOKKEEPER. And she does want to talk. But the notebook scares her terribly and she can only stare at it.

BERNSTEIN
I'm not even going to put your name down. It's just so I can keep things straight.
(beat)
Start with the money, why don't you?

BOOKKEEPER'S SISTER
(returning with coffee)
How do you like it?

BERNSTEIN
Everything, please.

BOOKKEEPER'S SISTER
(going again)
I won't be a minute.

BERNSTEIN
(to the BOOKKEEPER, quietly)
The General Accounting report said there was a 350 thousand cash slush fund in Stans' safe. Did you know about that from the beginning?

BOOKKEEPER
(about to fold)
There are too many people watching me--they know I know a lot--

BERNSTEIN
--it was all in hundreds, wasn't it?

BOOKKEEPER
A lot of it was. I just thought it was sort of an all-purpose political fund--you know, for taking fat cats to dinner, things like that.

BERNSTEIN
Could buy a lot of steaks, 350,000 dollars.

BOOKKEEPER
(her words are coming faster)
I can't be positive that it was used for the break-in but people sure are worried.

BERNSTEIN
Which people?

BOOKKEEPER
The ones who could disburse the money.

BERNSTEIN
Who were they?

BOOKKEEPER
There were a group of them--I think five, I don't know their names.

BERNSTEIN
Sloan knew which five, didn't he?
(she nods)

BOOKKEEPER'S SISTER
(back with cream and sugar)
Here we are.

BOOKKEEPER
I don't want to say anymore.
BERNSTEIN
(indicating coffee)
It's awfully hot-- (smiles)
--and you haven't finished telling me about the money--

BOOKKEEPER
(long pause; then--in a burst)
--omigod, there was so much of it, six million came in one two-day period-- six million cash, we couldn't find enough places to put it. I thought it was all legal, I guess I did, til after the break-in, when I remembered
Gordon got so much of it.

BERNSTEIN
(heart starting to pound)
Gordon Liddy, you mean?

BOOKKEEPER
(nods)

It was all so crazy--the day after the break-in he gave us a speech, bouncing up and down on his heels in that loony way of his--Gordon told us not to let Jim McCord ruin everything--don't let one bad apple spoil the barrel, he said. You just know that when Gordon Liddy's calling someone a bad apple, something's wrong somewhere.

...It's all so rotten... and getting worse... and all I care about is Hugh Sloan. His wife was going to leave him if he didn't stand up and do what was right. And he quit. He quit because he saw it and didn't want any part of it.

BERNSTEIN
Think Sloan's being set up as a fall guy for John Mitchell? Sometimes it looks that way.

There is a pause. Then--

BOOKKEEPER
If you guys... if you guys could just get John Mitchell... that would be beautiful...
And now, as long last, she begins to cry. HOLD on her tears, then--

CUT TO:

A TYPEWRITER

clicking away. The words "INTERVIEW WITH X. SEPT. 14" are visible. There is music in the background, really blasting away, Rachmaninoff or worse.

We are in WOODWARD's apartment and BERNSTEIN is dictating notes from the BOOKKEEPER interview. It's very late, and BERNSTEIN has notes on everything, matchboxes, and it's hard for him to read. They're both really excited, BERNSTEIN from his coffee jag, WOODWARD by what BERNSTEIN's dictating.

BERNSTEIN

I couldn't believe what she told me. Eight cups of coffee worth.

WOODWARD

Go on, go on--

BERNSTEIN

--we've got to find out who the five guys are--the five with access to the slush fund--they were aware of the break-in.

WOODWARD

Then tomorrow's grand jury indictments will just be bullshit.

BERNSTEIN

It goes very high--we've got to find out where--

WOODWARD

--we will--

BERNSTEIN

--she was really paranoid, the bookkeeper.

WOODWARD

That happens to people. (he goes over, turns the hi-fi on even louder. Shouts--)

OK, go on.

The noise blasts away as BERNSTEIN and WOODWARD hunch over the typewriter. It's a moment of genuine exhilaration. Paranoid, sure, but for the first time, they're really on to something; it's all starting to split open...
WOODWARD AND BERNSTEIN

They are driving through McLean, Virginia, a development of identical imitation Tudor houses.

BERNSTEIN
How do you want to handle Sloan?

WOODWARD
You mean, who's going to play the mean M.P. and who's going to be the nice one?

(BERNSTEIN nods; WOODWARD shrugs)
Whichever.

BERNSTEIN
He's another Ivy Leaguer so he'll probably expect you to be understanding--might surprise him if you're not.

WOODWARD
You want me to be the bastard.

BERNSTEIN
(nods)
And I'll just shitkick in my usual way.

As they drive on--

CUT TO:

A PRETTY YOUNG WOMAN standing in the doorway of one of the Tudor houses. She is very pregnant. She knows instinctively who they are, and she dominates them in a genuinely proud female way. What I mean is, it's her scene, and they're suddenly embarrassed to be bothering her.

WOODWARD
To see Mr. Sloan.

MRS. SLOAN
He's out.
(There is a pause. She studies them--)
You're those two from the Post, aren't you.
(they nod)
I'll tell him.

BERNSTEIN
(as she's about to step back inside)
This must be a difficult time for the both of you.

MRS. SLOAN
This is an honest house.

WOODWARD
That's why we wanted to see your husband.

She studies them still; more silence.

MRS. SLOAN
That decision is up to him.

BERNSTEIN
(conspiratorially)
Maybe you could put in a good word.

WOODWARD
We've got another appointment tonight in this area—we'll just stop back later, all right?

MRS. SLOAN
It's a free country—
(beat) in theory.

They nod, start back down the walk. She watches them.

MRS. SLOAN
(calling out)
Be careful—

They turn, look back at her.

CUT TO:

CLOSE UP--MRS. SLOAN

MRS. SLOAN
--you can destroy lives.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN watching her. She seems like a terrific girl. And maybe they've upset her. Or maybe what she has said, coming from her, has more impact than otherwise. Quietly, they turn back, walk in silence toward the red Karmann Ghia...

CUT TO:

THE McLEAN MCDONALD'S--DINNERTIME. Lots of very noisy, happy children. WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN sit surrounded by their usual array of junk food.
WOODWARD
Think Sloan's back?
   (BERNSTEIN seems lost in thought)
What's wrong?

BERNSTEIN
Nothing--I just found out that Jeb Magruder from CREEP is a bigger bike freak than I am.
   (sips coffee)
I never like it when the other guy's human...

They continue to sip coffee; outside it continues to rain.
Now--

CUT TO:

A YOUNG, SLENDER GUY answering his door.

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN stand outside, their jackets over their heads, protecting themselves from the rain which is harder now.

WOODWARD
Mr. Sloan?

SLOAN
   (nods)
My wife told me to expect you.
   (softly)
As you know, I haven't talked to the press.

BERNSTEIN
We were hoping that maybe now you could. We know why you left the Committee. We know you're not guilty of anything. But we know you know who is--

It has begun to rain even harder.

SLOAN
--look, come in. We'll have to be quiet--my wife's asleep.

CUT TO:

A CHRISTMAS CARD from the Nixons, they are standing in front of the White House Christmas tree. It is signed "To Hugh and Debbie Sloan, with thanks, Richard M. Nixon, Patricia Nixon."

PULL BACK and we're in the living room. More coffee is being drunk; SLOAN endlessly stirs his.

SLOAN
I'd like to talk to you, I really would, but my lawyers say I shouldn't until after the Watergate trial.

WOODWARD
You handed out the money. Maybe there's a legitimate explanation for the way it was done--

BERNSTEIN
--then again, maybe things are even worse than we've written--

SLOAN
--they're worse. That's why I quit.

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN wait as SLOAN is clearly going through a struggle with himself. Then--

SLOAN
Try and understand this. I'm a decent Republican. I believe in Richard Nixon. I worked in the White House four years--so did my wife. What happened on June 17 I don't think the President knew anything about. Some of his men I'm not so sure of.

BERNSTEIN
Do you think the truth will come out at the trial?

SLOAN
That's another of the things I'm not so sure of.

BERNSTEIN
Because people at the Committee were told to lie to the prosecutors?

SLOAN
We were never told flat out "Don't talk." But the message was clear.

BERNSTEIN
To cover up?

SLOAN
Well, they sure didn't ask us to come forward and tell the truth.

WOODWARD
Does "they" mean the White House?
SLOAN
As opposed to the Committee? The Committee's not an independent operation. Everything is cleared with the White House. I don't think that the FBI or the prosecutors understand that.

WOODWARD
The report on the cash in Maurice Stans' safe, the three hundred fifty thousand, that's true?

SLOAN
No. It was closer to seven hundred thousand.

WOODWARD
And as treasurer, you could release those funds?

SLOAN
(nods)
When so ordered.

WOODWARD
We're not sure we've got all the guys who could order you, but we know there were five.
(SLOAN is silent)

BERNSTEIN
(ticking them off)
Mitchell, Stans, Magruder, they're obvious--

SLOAN stirs his coffee.

WOODWARD
--there had to be a White House overseer--

BERNSTEIN
--Colson.

SLOAN
Colson's too smart to get directly involved with something like that.

WOODWARD
(to BERNSTEIN) Haldeman.
(to SLOAN) Right?

SLOAN
I won't talk about the other two.

BERNSTEIN
But they both worked at the White House?

SLOAN
(softly)
I will not talk about the other two.

BERNSTEIN
(out of the blue)
Kalmbach--Nixon's personal lawyer.

SLOAN is shocked at the mention of Kalmbach.

SLOAN
I can't say anything, I'm sorry.
(He starts to rise)

WOODWARD
One thing I'm not completely clear on--when you gave out the money to Liddy, how did that work?

SLOAN Badly.
(and now for the first time, he almost smiles)
You don't realize how close all this came to staying undiscovered--I gave Liddy the Dahlberg check and he gave it to Barker who took it to Miami and deposited it.

BERNSTEIN
Right.

SLOAN
Then Barker withdrew the 25 thousand in hundred dollar bills and gave it back to Liddy who gave it back to me and I put it in the office safe which was crammed.

WOODWARD
Go on.

SLOAN
Well, when Liddy came and asked for money for what turned out to be the break-in funds, I went to the safe and gave him--out of this whole fortune--I happened to give him the same hundreds he gave me--banks have to keep track of hundreds. If the money had been in fifties, or if I'd grabbed a different stack, there probably wouldn't have been any Watergate story.

BERNSTEIN
Ordinarily, though, what was the procedure?

SLOAN
Routine--I'd just call John Mitchell over at the Justice Department and he'd say "go ahead, give out the money."

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN just look at each other--they hadn't known it, not remotely. SLOAN stands and as they head for the door--

CUT TO:

THE THREE OF THEM heading across the foyer.

BERNSTEIN
What happens when the baby comes?

SLOAN
We're moving.

(beat)
I've been looking for a job but it's been... hard. My name's been in the papers too much. Sometimes I wonder if reporters understand how much pain they can inflict in just one sentence. I'm not thinking of myself. But my wife, my parents, it's been very rough on them.

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN and WOODWARD looking very uncomfortable as SLOAN goes on.

SLOAN
I wish I could put down on paper what it's like--you come to Washington because you believe in something, and then you get inside and you see how things actually work and you watch your ideals disintegrate.

(beat)
The people inside, the people in the White House, they start to believe they can suspend the rules because they're fulfilling a mission. That becomes the only important thing--the mission. It's so easy to lose perspective. We want to get out before we lose ours altogether.

SLOAN opens the front door. WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN pause, nod, almost an embarrassed pause. Then as they hurry out into the rain--

CUT TO:

A NERFBALL

flying toward a basket cupped to a picture window. When we we're in BRADLEE's office, SIMONS and ROSENFELD are also there, along with WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN. BRADLEE plays nerfball mostly; he hasn't got the world's longest attention span.

PULL BACK

BERNSTEIN

Look--five men controlled that slush fund as CREEP--three of them we've got, Mitchell, Stans, Magruder, and we're pretty sure of Kalmbach.

WOODWARD

We'd like to wait til we have all five before we print it.

BRADLEE

This is a daily paper, we'll explain it tomorrow.
(looks at them)
You're certain on Mitchell?

WOODWARD

He approved the payments to Liddy while he was still Attorney General--

And all this now goes fast--

ROSENFELD

--you got more than one source?--

BERNSTEIN

--yes--

SIMONS

--has any of them got an ax?--

ROSENFELD

--political, personal, sexual, anything at all against Mitchell?--

WOODWARD

--no--
--can we use their names?--

--no--

--goddamnit, when's somebody gonna go on the record on this story--

--who you got?--

--well, Sloan--

--and we got a guy in Justice--

--Deep Throat?--

--I saw him. He verifies.

OK.

(now after the burst of talk, a pause)
You're about to write a story that says that the former Attorney General--the man who represented law in America--is a crook.

(throws the nerfball)
Just be right, huh?

As WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN leave the office--

Leave plenty of room for his denial.

BERNSTEIN AT HIS DESK ON THE PHONE. He has some papers in front of him an a notepad and pencil in his free hand. He is tired and very, very nervous. It is dark outside. In what follows, BERNSTEIN takes notes.

OPERATOR'S VOICE (V.O.)
Essex House, can I help you?

BERNSTEIN
John Mitchell, please.

There is a BUZZING SOUND. Then--

JOHN MITCHELL'S VOICE (V.O.)
Yes?

BERNSTEIN
Sir, this is Carl Bernstein of the Washington Post, and I'm sorry to bother you but we're running a story in tomorrow's paper that we thought you should have a chance to comment on.

MITCHELL (V.O.)
What does it say?

BERNSTEIN
(starting to read)
John N. Mitchell, while serving as US Attorney General, personally controlled a secret cash fund that--

MITCHELL (V.O.)
--jeeeeeesus--

BERNSTEIN
--fund that was used to gather information against the Democrats--

MITCHELL (V.O.)
--jeeeeeesus--

BERNSTEIN
--according to sources involved in the Watergate investigation. Beginning in the spring of 1971--

MITCHELL (V.O.)
--jeeeeeesus--

BERNSTEIN
--almost a year before he left the Justice Department--

MITCHELL (V.O.)
--jeeeeeesus--

BERNSTEIN
--to become President Nixon's campaign manager on March 1, Mitchell personally approved withdrawals from the fund--

MITCHELL (V.O.)
--all that crap, you're putting it in the paper? It's all been denied. You tell your publisher--tell Katie Graham she's gonna get her tit caught in a big fat wringer if that's published. Good Christ! That's the most sickening thing I ever heard.

BERNSTEIN
Sir, I'd like to ask you a few--

MITCHELL (V.O.)
--what time is it?

BERNSTEIN
11:30.

MITCHELL (V.O.)
Morning or night?

BERNSTEIN
Night.

MITCHELL (V.O.)
Oh.

And he hangs up.

CUT TO:

BRADLEE and BERNSTEIN at BERNSTEIN's desk. BRADLEE is going over BERNSTEIN's notes.

BRADLEE
He really made that remark about Mrs. Graham?
(BERNSTEIN nods)
This is a family newspaper--cut the words "her tit" and run it.

And now suddenly--

THE PRESSES OF THE POST

rolling the story. They're modern and gigantic and

CUT TO:

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN. They're in the lobby of the Post at night and through a thick-pane of glass they're watching their story roll and on their faces is something you don't expect to see: panic.

BRADLEE comes up behind them, looks down at the presses, starts to talk.

BRADLEE
Once when I was reporting, Lyndon Johnson's top guy gave me the word they were looking for a successor to J. Edgar Hoover. I wrote it and the day it appeared Johnson called a press conference and appointed Hoover head of the FBI for life... And when he was done, he turned to his top guy and the President said, "Call Ben Bradlee and tell him fuck you."

(shakes his head)
I took a lot of static for that-- everyone said, "You did it, Bradlee, you screwed up--you stuck us with Hoover forever--"

(looks at WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN)
--I screwed up but I wasn't wrong.

They all watch the presses now.

BRADLEE
You guys haven't been wrong yet, is that why you're scared shitless?

(as WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN nod, BRADLEE starts away)
You should be...

CUT TO:

THE PRESSES continuing to roll. The SOUND is incredible. Now--

CUT TO:

A TELETYPE MACHINE

clicking away like crazy. We can read the words, "The Senator finished by saying that although he was..." and from there--

DISSOLVE TO:

A SENATOR and while the words "although he was" are still very fresh in our minds--

SENATOR
Although I am a Republican, I would like to state in a pure bipartisan spirit that I feel only sadness that a once fine journal of record like the Post would have become merely the hysterical spokesman for the equally hysterical left wing of the Democratic Party--

The SOUND of the teletype doesn't stop in this little part and we see three people and it's very important that their voices are immediately recognizable and distinct. One, the SENATOR is from the West and will have that twang. The next two whom we are about to meet are PUBLIC RELATIONS PEOPLE from CREEP and the WHITE HOUSE. The CREEP voice is very southern, the WHITE HOUSE GUY sounds like an NBC announcer. The WESTERN SENATOR will be seen in a corridor of the Senate office building, talking to reporters, the CREEP P.R. SOUTHERNER will be talking to reporters in front of the CREEP office doors and so identified. The WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN will be standing on a platform with a flag visible off to one side. As the teletype goes on--

CUT TO:

THE SOUTHERN CREEP P.R. MAN

CREEP P.R. MAN
(in mid-sentence)
--hearsay, innuendo, and character assassination. I can only conclude that the so-called sources of the Washington Post are a fountain of misinformation--

CUT TO:

THE WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN

WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN
--the White House has long since stopped being surprised at this type of reporting by certain elements of the Eastern liberal press--

CUT TO:

BRADLEE'S OFFICE

A lot of activity. BRADLEE is at his desk reading the teletype dispatches. SIMONS and ROSEN Feld are there, WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN, too. A kid comes in with more teletype stuff. The editors look at it.

SIMONS
(reading)
Same kind of crap--

BRADLEE
(glancing through; nods)
--all non-denial denials--we're dirty guys and they doubt we were ever virgins but they don't say the story is inaccurate.

BERNSTEIN
What's a real denial?

BRADLEE
If they ever start calling us goddamn liars--
(little pause)
--it's time to start circling the wagons.

THE UNION GUYS IN THE POST

looking at a new headline:

NIXON ELECTION AIDES CONCEALED FACTS FROM GOVERNMENT PROBERS

FIRST UNION GUY
You think they know what they’re doing on the fifth floor?

SECOND UNION GUY
I got eight kids to support--they better.

They start for the sports section, only this time, they stop, go back, stare at the headline again. From them watching-- walking WOODWARD to the elevators.

CUT TO:

SIMONS

WOODWARD
What do you think Mrs. Graham wants to see me for?

SIMONS
Maybe to fire you--since you two started on this story, the Post stock has dropped, what, 50 percent?
(WOODWARD pushes for the elevator)
And the word is some Nixon people are challenging her TV licenses. I'm not saying she's going on relief, but I don't think it's unreasonable for her to want to meet you.

WOODWARD
You think she wants us to ease up on the story?

SIMONS
(shrugs)
I don't know, but I don't think that's unreasonable either, do you?

The elevator opens. WOODWARD shakes his head "no" and steps inside as we

CUT TO:
MRS. GRAHAM in her office as a SECRETARY lets WOODWARD in.
He's nervous. She's standing by the window, he crosses to her.

MRS. GRAHAM
I'm so glad you could come, Mr.--

WOODWARD
--I'm Woodward.

She nods. There's a pause. He waits. She's trying to say something, get something started, but it's difficult. Silence. She stares out again, quietly starts to talk.

MRS. GRAHAM
You know, the paper was my father's and my husband's when they were alive and I was thinking back a year or two ago when Ben called me and said he wanted to publish the Pentagon Papers the next day. The Times had already been stopped from publishing anymore of them and all my legal counsel said "don't, don't" and I was frightened but I knew if I said no, I'd lose the whole fifth floor. So we published, and that night, after I'd told Ben to go ahead, I woke up in the darkness and I thought, "Oh my Lord, what am I doing to this newspaper?"

(She looks at WOODWARD)
I woke up again last night with that same question.
(WOODWARD says nothing, waits)
Are we right on this story?

WOODWARD
I think so.

MRS. GRAHAM
Are you sure?

WOODWARD
No.

MRS. GRAHAM
When will you be, do you think?--when are we going to know it all?

WOODWARD
It may never come out.

MRS. GRAHAM
Never? Please don't tell me never.
(beat)
Ben says you've found some wonderful sources.

WOODWARD
Some Justice Department lawyers and an FBI man, and some people from the Committee to Re-Elect, yes ma'am.

MRS. GRAHAM
And the underground garage one.
(WOODWARD, more nervous now, nods)
Would I know him?

WOODWARD
I couldn't say.

MRS. GRAHAM
But it's possible.

WOODWARD
(throat very dry)
It is.

MRS. GRAHAM
You've never told anyone who he is?
(WOODWARD shakes his head)
But you'd have to tell me if I asked you.
(WOODWARD nods)
Tell me.

WOODWARD
(he is dying)
I would, if you really ever wanted to know.

MRS. GRAHAM
I really want to know.

CUT TO:
WOODWARD caught between a rock and a hard place. He is silent until there is the SOUND of light laughter and we--

CUT TO:
MRS. GRAHAM. The laughter came from her.

MRS. GRAHAM
I wasn't serious. I have plenty of burdens to carry around, I don't need another.

WOODWARD tries not to exhale too audibly.
MRS. GRAHAM
We're going to need lots of good luck, aren't we?

WOODWARD
Nobody ever had too much.

CUT TO:

CLOSE UP--MRS. GRAHAM as abruptly she reaches out, touches WOODWARD on the arm.

MRS. GRAHAM
Do better.

WOODWARD makes a nod. HOLD. Then--

CUT TO:

BRADLEE
in a state of anger, pacing around the tiny teletype room. WOODWARD hurries in.

WOODWARD
What?

BRADLEE says nothing, just points to the AP teletype. WOODWARD looks at it, clearly is upset.

BRADLEE
I thought you guys were supposed to be working on this story--
(to BERNSTEIN who tears in--)
--you think I like being aced out?

BERNSTEIN
--what?--

WOODWARD
--The L.A. Times has a huge interview with Baldwin--

BERNSTEIN
--the lookout in the Motor Inn?--
(WOODWARD nods)
--he say anything we don't know?--

WOODWARD
(headshake)
--just that a lot of reports were sent to CREEP, but he doesn't name who, not here anyway--

BRADLEE
--it would have been nice to have had this, I sure would have liked to have had this--

BERNSTEIN
--there's nothing new in it--

BRADLEE
--it makes the break-in real--it's a major goddamn story-- (starts out)
--I'm not going to kick ass over this, but I'd like you to know I hate getting beat, I just hate it-- don't forget that I hate it--

And he stalks out. WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN stand staring at the teletype which keeps on clacking and clacking as the L.A. Times story keeps getting longer.

BERNSTEIN
Goddamnit--

WOODWARD
--shit--

BERNSTEIN
--we gotta top the Times--

WOODWARD
--I know, I know--

BERNSTEIN
--if we could name the guys got the reports, we'd be ahead again--

WOODWARD
--shit, who do we know?--

BERNSTEIN
--I know a lawyer at Justice--

WOODWARD
--has he got an ax?--

BERNSTEIN
--almost every source we've used has been Republican, this guy's a card-carrying Democrat.

WOODWARD
Then he's got an ax.
(beat)
Call him anyway.

As BERNSTEIN nods, takes off out of the room--

CUT TO:
THE UNION GUYS

studying the front page, on which one headline indicates that they're named the guys at CREEP who got the reports.

FIRST UNION GUY

Who is this Woodstein?
(points to paper)
Two stories on the front page.

SECOND UNION GUY

If he can't pick a winner at Pimlico, to hell with him.

CUT TO:

A HOT SHOPPE.

WOODWARD is stirring his morning coffee as BERNSTEIN comes in, spots him, hurries over. BERNSTEIN is maybe more excited then we've yet seen him.

BERNSTEIN

--I want you to shut up and listen to me--

WOODWARD

--I haven't said anything--

BERNSTEIN

--for the first time I'm beginning to feel like a fucking reporter-- Woodward, I got a tip. A guy called me up with a tip-- (carefully)
--someone named Donald Segretti contacted a bunch of lawyers and asked them if they'd like to go to work with him screwing up the Democrats, dirty tricks, shit like that. The FBI knows about Segretti--Howard Hunt made a bunch of phone calls to him--they interrogated him, but on account of Segretti wasn't involved with the break-in, they didn't follow through. But Segretti did a lot of traveling--he called these lawyers from different places, and he told them the Republicans knew what he was doing.

WOODWARD

How high up, which Republicans?

BERNSTEIN

That's what we've got to find out, but Segretti went to Southern Cal.
and so did a bunch of Nixon men--

WOODWARD
--Haldeman I know, who else?

BERNSTEIN
Dwight Chapin, Nixon's appointments chief--he knew Segretti in school.
Maybe I'm crazy, but this is the first time any of this starts to make sense. What were the three theories?

WOODWARD
The burglary was done by Cubans or Democrats or Republicans.

BERNSTEIN
Now the reason no one believed the Republicans is because there wasn't any reason, they were so far ahead. But Segretti was talking to these other lawyers a year before the break-in.

WOODWARD
So maybe Watergate wasn't really about Watergate--maybe that was just a piece--

BERNSTEIN
--because a year before, the Republicans weren't ahead, not in the polls, Muskie was running ahead of Nixon then. Before he self-destructed.

WOODWARD
If he self-destructed.

Now, from the two of them--

CUT TO:

A MAZE OF CREDIT CARD RECEIPTS IN VARIOUS PILES.

There is the SOUND of bad guitar music, which as we

PULL BACK

we see is BERNSTEIN playing. We are in his apartment, it's night, and the two of them, bleary, are studying the maze of receipts.

WOODWARD
Segretti criss-crossed the country over ten times in six months--and never stayed anyplace over a night or two.

(glancing up)
Switch to another station, huh? You're driving me crazy with that.

BERNSTEIN
Segovia begged me for me secret but I said, "No, Andres, you'll have to try and make it without me."

He switches to another song which sounds a lot like the one he just finished playing.

WOODWARD
(pointing to the thickest stacks)
California, Illinois, Florida, New Hampshire--all the major Democratic primary states.

(whirling)
Why does everything you play sound the same?

BERNSTEIN
--'cause I only know four chords--

CUT TO:

THE CREDIT CARDS. The camera moves across the travels of Donald Segretti. There is the SOUND of BERNSTEIN's guitar.

HOLD for a moment, then--

CUT TO:

TINY, BABY-FACED MAN standing in his doorway.

BERNSTEIN (V.O.)
Donald Segretti?

SEGREGETTI
That's right.

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN--OUTSIDE THE APARTMENT DOOR. We are, it will soon be clear, in California now, Marina Del Rey.

BERNSTEIN
I'm Carl Bernstein.
(SEGRETTI nods)
My paper sent me out to see if I couldn't persuade you to go on the record.
SEGRETTI
You can't.

BERNSTEIN
Mind if I try?

SEGRETTI shrugs, and as they enter his apartment--

CUT TO:

INSIDE. They walk across to a small terrace outside, where they sit. The terrace has a glorious view of the water and lots of girls in bathing costume, below.

BERNSTEIN
According to what we've been able to verify, you've been busy.

SEGRETTI
I've got a lot of energy.

BERNSTEIN
Listen—we know you're involved in this—we're going to get the story, why not help?

SEGRETTI
They never told me anything except my own role—I had to find out the rest in the papers.

BERNSTEIN
By "they" you mean...?

He waits; SEGRETTI just shakes his head.

BERNSTEIN
By "they" you mean the White House, don't you?

(SEGRETTI makes no reply)
Your buddy from USC, Dwight Chapin—he works for the White House.

SEGRETTI
I know where Dwight works.

BERNSTEIN
When did he hire you?

SEGRETTI shakes his head, stares out at the girls.

BERNSTEIN
Do you feel much about the things you did?
SEGRETTI
I didn't do anything wrong.

BERNSTEIN
Tell that to Muskie.

SEGRETTI
Oh, maybe nickel and dime stuff.

BERNSTEIN
During the Florida primary, you wrote a letter on Muskie stationery saying Scoop Jackson had a bastard child. You wrote another that said Hubert Humphrey was out with call girls.

SEGRETTI
Sometimes it got up to a quarter maybe--
  (to BERNSTEIN)
--off the record.

BERNSTEIN
You wrote the Canuck letter--the one where you claimed Muskie slurred the Canadians.

SEGRETTI
I didn't.

BERNSTEIN
But you know who did.

SEGRETTI
When you guys print it in the paper, then I'll know.
  (closes his eyes)
I'm a lawyer, and I'll probably go to jail, and be disbarred, and what did I do that was so awful?

BERNSTEIN says nothing, waits.

SEGRETTI
None of it was my idea, Carl--I didn't go looking for the job.

BERNSTEIN
Chapin did contact you then?

SEGRETTI
Sure--off the record.

BERNSTEIN
On the orders of Haldeman?

SEGRETTI
I don't know anything about Haldeman, except, Dwight's frightened of him--everybody's frightened of him--Christ, I wish I'd never gotten messed around with this--all I wanna do is sit in the sun; sit, swim, see some girls.

BERNSTEIN
It gets interesting if it was Haldeman, because our word is that when Chapin says something, he's gotten the OK from Haldeman, and when Haldeman says something, he's gotten the OK from the President.

SEGRETII
Can't help you.

BERNSTEIN
At USC, you had a word the this--screwing up the opposition you all did it at college and called it ratfucking.

(SEGRETII half-smiles, nods)
Ever wonder if Nixon might turn out to be the biggest ratfucker of them all?

CUT TO:

CLOSE UP--SEGRETII staring at the girls and the blue water.

SEGRETII
What would you have done if you were just getting out of the Army, if you'd been away from the real world for four years, if you weren't sure what kind of law you wanted to practice, and then one day you got a call from an old friend asking you to go to work for the President of the United States...?

HOLD on the question, then--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD AND BERNSTEIN
back in D.C., walking through the airport.

BERNSTEIN
What would you have done?

WOODWARD
You asking would I have been one of the President's men?
(beat)
I would have been.

As they continue on--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD

alone in the underground garage. Tense, jumpy. He looks at his watch, paces around. It's all eerie as hell. Then, from the ramps, footsteps.

CUT TO:

DEEP THROAT moving out of the shadows, smoking, as always.

DEEP THROAT
My turn to keep you waiting.
(approaches)
What's the topic for tonight?

WOODWARD
Ratfucking.

DEEP THROAT
In my day, it was simply called the double cross. I believe the CIA refers to it as Mindfuck. In our context, it simply means infiltration of the Democrats.

WOODWARD
I know what it means--Segretti wouldn't go on the record, but if he would, we know he'd implicate Chapin.
And that would put us inside the White House.

DEEP THROAT
(nods)
Yes, the little ratfuckers are now running our government.

WOODWARD
Who?--be specific. How high up?

DEEP THROAT
You'll have to find that out, won't you.

WOODWARD
The slush fund at CREEP financed the ratfucking, we've almost got that nailed down, so--
He stops as suddenly DEEP THROAT dives down behind the nearest car.

WOODWARD dropping beside him.

WOODWARD

What?

DEEP THROAT

Did you change cabs?

(as WOODWARD nods)

It didn't work, something moved there--

And as he points

CUT TO:

THE SHADOWS BY THE RAMP. You can't see a goddamn thing. But there is the SOUND, faint but distinct, of breathing.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD standing, staring into the darkness. He is scared, wipes his mouth. He doesn't move for a moment. Then he walks directly into the darkness and as he's gone--

ZOOM TO:

A HORRID FACE IN CLOSE UP, red eyed, unshaven, beaten--there are half-formed scabs and cuts. He is leaning against a wall, shivering. He looks, for all the world, like a perpetual drunk.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD in the shadows, coming closer.

CUT TO:

THE DRUNK. He blinks slowly, tongue lolling outside his mouth. He watches WOODWARD approach.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD coming still closer.

CUT TO:

THE DRUNK. He blinks very slowly now. Maybe he isn't even certain WOODWARD's there.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD stopping in front of the drunk. They look at each other for a long time. Then:

WOODWARD
Who are you?

THE DRUNK. Nothing, no reaction.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD studying the other man.

CUT TO:

THE DRUNK. And he blinks again, then slowly, shivering, begins sliding down the wall. WOODWARD reaches for him, holds him up.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD managing to get out his wallet, take out some bills. He starts up the ramp with the drunk, and as they disappear up the ramp out of sight, he gives the drunk the money.

WOODWARD

Here.

(softly)

Forget your troubles and just be happy.

CUT TO:

DEEP THROAT pacing and smoking. He is visibly upset; scared maybe. He glances over as WOODWARD comes back down the ramp alone.

DEEP THROAT

(self-mocking)

I hope you noticed how coolly I behaved under the threat of discovery.

WOODWARD

(impatiently)

Do Justice and the FBI know what we know, and why the hell haven't they done anything about it?

DEEP THROAT

They know, but they focused on the burglary--if it didn't deal with the break-in, they didn't pursue it.

WOODWARD

Why didn't they?--who told them not to?

DEEP THROAT

Someone with authority I'd imagine, wouldn't you?
(coughs)
Don't you know what you're onto?
Come on.

WOODWARD
Mitchell knew then.

DEEP THROAT
Of course--my God, you think something this big just happens? The break-in and the cover up, of course Mitchell knew, but no more than Ehrlichman.

WOODWARD
Haldeman too?

DEEP THROAT
You get nothing from me about Haldeman?

And from this tone, you know HALDEMAN scares him.

WOODWARD
Why did they do all this for Chrissakes?--what were they after?

DEEP THROAT
Total manipulation. I suppose you could say they wanted to subvert the Constitution, but they don't think along philosophical lines.

WOODWARD
Talk about Segretti--

DEEP THROAT
--don't concentrate on Segretti or you'll miss the overall scheme too.

WOODWARD
There were more then.

DEEP THROAT
Follow every lead--every lead goes somewhere--

WOODWARD
--the Canuck letter--was that a White House operation--

DEEP THROAT
(nods, bigger)
--don't you miss the grand scheme too.

WOODWARD
How grand?
DEEP THROAT
Nationwide--my God, they were frightened of Muskie and look who got destroyed--they wanted to run against McGovern, and look who they're running against. They bugged, they followed people, false press leaks, fake letters, they canceled Democratic campaign rallies, they investigated Democratic private lives, they planted spies, stole documents, on and on--don't tell me you think this was all the work of little Don Segretti.

WOODWARD
And Justice and FBI know all this?

DEEP THROAT
Yes, yes, everything. There were over fifty people employed by the White House and CREEP to ratfuck--some of what they did is beyond belief.

WOODWARD
(stunned)
Fifty ratfuckers directed by the White House to destroy the Democrats?

CUT TO:

DEEP THROAT

I was being cautious.

(inhales)
You can safely say more than fifty...

SILENCE in the garage. HOLD... then--

CUT TO:

THE FIFTH FLOOR OF THE POST

and it's noisy. Not as noisy as it's going to get, but there is more tension around just now than there has been previously.

CUT TO:

AN ATTRACTIVE WOMAN IN HER MID-30s. On her desk is her name, MARILYN BERGER. She is watching BERNSTEIN who is standing by the water cooler nearby. As she gets up--

CUT TO:
BERNSTEIN drinking water.

BERGER
Do you guys know about the Canuck letter?

BERNSTEIN
(nods, drinks)
Um-hmm.
(stops, looks at her)
Why?

BERGER
I just wanted to be sure you knew who wrote it.

As she speaks--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD working at his desk, suddenly looking up as a SCREAM comes from the direction of the water cooler and as everyone turns to see, here comes BERNSTEIN dragging BERGER over to WOODWARD's desk.

BERNSTEIN
(hysterical)
Tell him what you just told me.

BERGER
Just than Ken Clawsen—he used to be a reporter here before he went to work for Nixon—I had him over for a drink a few weeks ago and he told me he wrote the Canuck letter.
(she looks from one of them to the other)
You did want to know, didn't you?

And now from her--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN in a corner of the room, talking low and fast.

BERNSTEIN
You think we're being set up?—Christ, Deep Throat tells you last night that the letter came from inside the White House and up traipses Marilyn naming names.

WOODWARD
It makes a crazy kind of sense—remember that initiation rite they have at the White House? Each new member of the President's staff has to prove his guts by getting an enemy of Nixon.

BERNSTEIN
You think this was Clawsen's initiation?

WOODWARD
Could have won him a fraternity paddle with a White House seal.
(beat)
God knows it worked.

CUT TO:

A FROZEN SHOT OF MUSKIE IN THE SNOW in tears, standing on the flat-bed truck. This was in the New Hampshire primary, just after the Canuck letter was published.

WOODWARD (V.O.)
You claiming it was all a misunderstanding, Ken?

CLAWSEN (V.O.)
Absolutely--Marilyn's gotten it totally wrong--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD ON THE PHONE

WOODWARD
She's an awfully good reporter--I can't remember her getting too much wrong before, can you?

CLAWSEN (V.O.)
That's a bullshit question, that's a question straight out of Wichita, Kansas.

WOODWARD
Sorry, Ken; listen, one last thing: where did your talk with Berger happen?

CLAWSEN (V.O.)
Where?
(beat)
What do you mean, where?

WOODWARD
Well, was it in a bar, her apartment, some restaurant--

CLAWSEN (V.O.)
I've completely forgotten where it was, except I know it wasn't her apartment.

There is a sound of him hanging up the phone. Hard. WOODWARD hangs up quietly, rubs his eyes, calls out to BERGER who is at her desk--

WOODWARD
Non denial-denial, Marilyn--

BERGER is about to answer when her phone rings. She picks it up, turns to WOODWARD, mouths "it's him" and we

CUT TO:

BERGER ON THE PHONE. Again Clawsen on the other end.

CLAWSEN (V.O.)
For Chissakes, don't tell them I came to your place.

BERGER
I already told them.

CLAWSEN (V.O.)
Oh, that's terrific, that's just so terrific, I'm thrilled you did that.

BERGER
I have a clear conscience.

CLAWSEN (V.O.)
Marilyn, I have a wife and a family and a cat and a dog.

Now from this--

BRADLEE IN HIS OFFICE GESTURING

And we

CUT TO:

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN heading toward the office. As they enter--

BRADLEE
I got Clawsen on hold--

WOODWARD
--his dialing finger must be falling off--

BRADLEE
--what do you think?--
WOODWARD
--he went to her apartment and he told her--

BERNSTEIN
--if he did it or just said he did it, God knows.

BRADLEE
I could care less about where it happened; what happened is what counts.
(calling out to his SECRETARY)
Put him on.
(picks up the phone)
Ken, I'm sorry, it was Goddamn Beirut and they were having a crisis, what's up, kid?
(pause)
Slow down, Ken, you sound frazzled.
(pause)
A wife and a family and a cat and a dog, right, Ken.
(pause)
Ken, I would never print that you were in Marilyn's apartment at night-- unless, of course, you force me to.

CUT TO:

CLOSE UP--BRADLEE. He is genuinely enjoying himself. Now, he puts his hand over the receiver--

BRADLEE
It's like they taught us at Harvard: few things are as gratifying to the soul as having another man's nuts in a vise...

Now, as he goes back to talking--

CUT TO:

A BIG HEADLINE IN THE POST READING: NIXON AIDES SABOTAGED DEMOCRATS.

Now we HOLD on that headline as the three deniers are visible through it in the same places they spoke before.

WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN
The story is based entirely on hearsay and--

CREEP P.R. MAN
--we at the Committee are continually amazed at the creativity shown by the Washington Post--

WESTERN SENATOR
--although I am a Republican, I would like to state in a pure bipartisan spirit that I am happy that this latest onslaught against the intelligence of the American people will be wrapping fish tomorrow. I offer my condolences to the fish...

And now, the headline fades as we

CUT TO:

SIMONS IN ROSENFELD’S OFFICE

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN hurry in.

ROSENFELD Speak.

BERNSTEIN
We've just been talking to Young--

SIMONS
--which Young?

WOODWARD
Larry Young, a California lawyer--

BERNSTEIN
--he was going to go into law practice with Segretti.

ROSENFELD And?--

WOODWARD
--and he says Chapin hired Segretti--

SIMONS
--well and good, but when will he say it on the record.

WOODWARD
He just did.

BERNSTEIN
He'll give us a sworn statement.

WOODWARD
We're inside the White House now.

ROSENFELD and SIMONS just look at each other. They should be happy, and maybe they are. But at the moment more then anything else they look scared... HOLD. Then--
THE MONTPELIER ROOM OF THE MADISON HOTEL.

It's a very fancy restaurant and BRADLEE is at a corner table as WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN sit down. They are exhausted.

BRADLEE

Look, I wanted to talk because things are getting really hairy and there's a couple of things we've got to be careful of because--

A waiter is nearby.

BRADLEE

--either of you want a drink or should I order?--

(They don't)

--because--

And suddenly he lapses into perfect French with the waiter, ordering lunch and salad and as the waiter nods and goes

BRADLEE

--because our cocks are on the chopping block and you've got to be sure that you're not just dealing with people who hate Richard Nixon and want to get him through us. You see, I don't give a shit who's President--I really don't, it's an adversary situation between them and us and it's always gonna be. I never had a closer friend than Jack Kennedy and once I printed something that pissed him off and for seven months I didn't exist.

A wine steward appears, hands BRADLEE the list. As he examines it, a man walks up to the table, stands there...

MAN

You none of you know who I am, do you?

(they don't)

You screw me up good, you don't even know what I look like.

BRADLEE

OK, you've had your preamble; who the hell are you?

MAN

Glenn Sedam--you wrote about me last week, you said I was one of the guys at the Committee who was sent reports. You were wrong.
BERNSTEIN
Baldwin told the FBI it was you.

SEDAM
Baldwin told the FBI it was someone whose first name sounded like a last name. They showed him a list and he picked me but it wasn't me, it was Gordon Liddy.
(looks at the reporters)
My phone hasn't stopped ringing, my wife's hysterical, my kids think I'm mixed up with the burglary, my friends don't like me around all of a sudden.

CUT TO:

CLOSE UP--SEDAM

SEDAM
You fucked around my life, you two.
(starts off)
I just wanted to say thanks.

BRADLEE watching WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN, who are clearly upset.

BRADLEE
That didn't sound to me like a non-denial denial; could you have been wrong?
(they nod)
You had a good source?
(nod)
Did he have an ax?
(pause. Then another nod)

CLOSE UP--BRADLEE

BRADLEE
All right, you made a mistake maybe, we all have, just don't make another. And watch your personal lives, who you hang around with. Someone once said the price of democracy is a bloodletting every ten years.
(beat)
Make sure it isn't our blood...

Now from BRADLEE--

CUT TO:

HUGH SLOAN
holding a broom and dustpan at his front door.

SLOAN
I really can't talk now--

BERNSTEIN
--this'll only take one second--

SLOAN
--my wife just had the baby, my in-laws are arriving, I'm trying to get the house in some kind of shape.

WOODWARD
A boy or a girl?

SLOAN
A girl. Melissa.

CUT TO:

INSIDE THE HOUSE. WOODWARD AND BERNSTEIN are helping SLOAN with the housework. WOODWARD has a dust mop, BERNSTEIN a dust cloth. We are mostly in the living room throughout, and also throughout, the three guys beaver away tidying.

WOODWARD
(holding up a cup)
Where does this go?

SLOAN points to a shelf. WOODWARD moves to put the cup in its proper place.

WOODWARD
--That cash fund that financed the sabotaging of the Democrats--five guys had control--

BERNSTEIN
(ticking them off)
--Mitchell, Stans, Magruder, Kalmbach--

WOODWARD
--we're working on the last guy now and we're going all the way--that fifth man was Haldeman.

SLOAN
--I'm not your source on that--

BERNSTEIN
--it's gotta be Haldeman--someone from the White House had to be involved--

WOODWARD
--and it wasn't Ehrlichman or Colson or the President.

SLOAN
No, none of those.

BERNSTEIN
--that leaves Haldeman, period.

SLOAN
I'm not your source on that.

He picks up a dust pan, starts sweeping it full.

WOODWARD
(taking the dust pan, helping out)
--look, when the Watergate grand jury questioned you, did you name names?

SLOAN
Of course--everything they asked--

BERNSTEIN
--if we wrote a story that said Haldeman controlled the fund?--

SLOAN
--let me put it this way: I'd have no problem if you did.

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN look at each other while SLOAN empties the dust pan into the trash and from there, quickly--

CUT TO:

A LONG LONG LONG SHOT OF A COUPLE
walking in the park.

We can't really make them out clearly, we never do in this little sequence. But the guy is wearing a windbreaker and has a crew cut and the woman with him is dressed casually too. He has his arm around her, and they are deep in conversation.

WOODWARD'S VOICE (V.O.)
Hey?

PULL BACK TO REVEAL
WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN sitting on a park bench swilling down a six-pack.

WOODWARD
I think that's him.
BERNSTEIN

Who?

WOODWARD

Haldeman.

CUT TO:

THE COUPLE walking along. We just can't quite make them out. But it might be.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN staring after the couple, trying to focus.

BERNSTEIN

Nah.

(squints hard)

Maybe.

WOODWARD

What if I went up and introduced myself--think he'd slug me?

BERNSTEIN

Well, we are trying to ruin his life.

WOODWARD

It's nothing personal, though.

(looks troubled)

BERNSTEIN

What's the matter?

WOODWARD

Same as Magruder, I don't like it when they turn out to be human.

BERNSTEIN

(nods)

I wish we were investigating Attila the Hun.

WOODWARD

Maybe we are...

CUT TO:

THE SLOW-WALKING COUPLE. They continue on. We still don't see them quite clearly. HOLD... then--

CUT TO:

A PUDGY LITTLE MAN HALF-HIDDEN BEHIND A MAGAZINE.

PULL BACK TO REVEAL
A DRUGSTORE-TYPE PLACE. WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN are at the adjoining table.

PUDGY MAN
--Goddamnit, I'm not gonna say it again--you get nothing about Haldeman outta me--

WOODWARD
--we don't need it now, because tomorrow's story is about the FBI--

BERNSTEIN
--about how all you supposed experts really blew the whole investigation--

FBI GUY
(stung)
--we didn't miss so much--

WOODWARD
--you never knew Haldeman had control of the slush fund--

FBI GUY
--it's all in our files--

BERNSTEIN
--not about Haldeman--

FBI GUY
--yeah, Haldeman, John Haldeman.

And he gets up quickly, goes. WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN savor the moment but only briefly as it hits them--

BERNSTEIN
--Jesus--

WOODWARD
--he said John Haldeman, not Bob Haldeman--

And as they take off after the agent--

CUT TO:

BRADLEE'S OFFICE.

WOODWARD, BERNSTEIN, BRADLEE, SIMONS, ROSENFELD. Wild tension. The editors have a long story and they all read and pace, read and pace; the reporters look traumatized with fatigue. All this goes fast.

BRADLEE
(staring at the typed
I don't know, I don't know, it feels thin--

SIMONS

--Christ, I wish I knew if we should print this--

ROSENFELD

--listen, we didn't make them do these things--once they did, it's our job to report it--

SIMONS

(to the reporters)

--go over your sources again--

WOODWARD

--Sloan told the Grand Jury--he answered everything they asked him--that means there's a record somewhere--

BERNSTEIN

--and the FBI confirms--what more do you need?--

ROSENFELD

(whirling to BERNSTEIN)

--listen, I love this country, you think I want to bring it down?--I'm not some goddamn zany, I was a hawk--

SIMONS

--Harry, weren't you just arguing the opposite way?--

ROSENFELD

--maybe I'm tense--

BRADLEE

--well shit, we oughtta be tense--we're about to accuse Mr. Haldeman who only happens to be the second most important man in America of conducting a criminal conspiracy from inside the White House--

(beat)

--it would be nice if we were right--

SIMONS

(to the reporters)

--you double-checked both sources?--

They nod.

BRADLEE

--Bernstein, are you sure on this
BERNSTEIN
Absolutely--

BRADLEE
(to WOODWARD)
--what about you?--

WOODWARD
--I'm sure--

BRADLEE
--I'm not sure, it still feels thin-- (looks at SIMONS)

SIMONS
(to WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN, after a pause)
--get another source.

Now quickly

CUT TO:

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN huddling outside BRADLEE's office.

BERNSTEIN
How many fucking sources they think we got?--

WOODWARD
--Deep Throat won't confirm--I never thought he was scared of anyone, but he's scared of Haldeman.

BERNSTEIN
I know a guy in the Justice Department who was around the Grand Jury.
(looks at WOODWARD)

WOODWARD
--We got twenty minutes to deadline--

And as he speaks

CUT TO:

BERNSTEIN talking softly from a relatively private phone in the newsroom. The voice of the lawyer is also whispered and scared to death.

LAWYER'S VOICE (O.S.)
(barely audible)
...You shouldn't ever call me like this, Carl...
BERNSTEIN
Will you confirm that Haldeman was mentioned by Sloan to the Grand Jury?

LAWYER'S VOICE (O.S.)
...I won't say anything about Haldeman... not ever...

BERNSTEIN
(desperate)
All right--listen--it's against the law if you talk about the Grand Jury, right? But you don't have to say a thing--I'll count to ten--if the story's wrong, hang up before I get there--if it's OK stay on the line till after, got it?

LAWYER (O.S.)
Hang up, right?

BERNSTEIN
Right, right--OK, counting: one, two-- (he inhales deeply)
--three, four, five, six-- (now he's starting to get excited)
--seven, eight-- (inhales deeply)
--nine, ten, thank you.

LAWYER (O.S.)
You've got it straight now? Everything OK?

BERNSTEIN
(on a note of triumph)
Yeah!

And on that shout

CUT TO:
A HEADLINE IN THE POST--A PHOTO VISIBLE OF HALDEMAN:
"TESTIMONY TIES TOP NIXON AIDE TO SECRET FUND"

CUT TO:
THE WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN

WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN
On the record let me say just this: the story is totally untrue. On background, I'd like to add that Bob Haldeman is one of the greatest public servants this country has ever had and the story is a goddamned lie.

NOW FAST ZOOM TO:

BRADLEE

roaring out of his office doorway.

BRADLEE

Woodstein!

CUT TO:

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN tearing into BRADLEE's office--he stands scowling at the TV set in a corner of the room--outside, it is raining like hell.

CUT TO:

THE TV SET. SLOAN is walking along toward a large office building, he is flanked by a lawyer. A TV Reporter (it was DANIEL SCHORR) is walking alongside, mke in hand.

SCHORR

Mr. Sloan, would you care to comment on your testimony before the Grand Jury.

SLOAN

My lawyer says--

SLOAN'S LAWYER

--the answer is an unequivocal no.
Mr. Sloan did not implicate Mr. Haldeman in that testimony at all.

CUT TO:

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN. They look sick. Desperate, tired, stunned, confused; there is nothing to say.

CUT TO:

BRADLEE glaring at them. HOLD ON BRADLEE... then

CUT TO:

THE FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION

in the rain, and

CUT TO:

A CORRIDOR IN THE BUILDING AS THE PUDGY FBI MAN retreats down the hall. WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN, soaked, chase after him.
FBI MAN
--I'll deny everything--everything--
I never talked to you about Haldeman--
I never talked to you about anything--
I'm not talking to you now--

BERNSTEIN
--what went wrong?--

WOODWARD
--for Chrissakes just tell that--

PUDGY FBI MAN
--fuck you fuck you fuck you--

And he tears into an office, slams the door and as we hear it lock--

CUT TO:

This is where the source burning scene would come but I am not writing it for this version.

My reasons are as follows: (1) it is a complicated long scene to put down; (2) we are terribly late in our story; (3) it would mean, here, two hours into the movie, we are bringing in an entirely new character; the FBI agent's head to whom they go, and I think that is unnecessary and confusing; and (4) most important, I think the characters have been abused enough in this version--we have added the Sedam scene and they are berated more in this version by the CREEP people before things turn. (5) Finally, all this can show in reality is that they are desperate, and I would rather let the actors give that to us. I feel that it would be a genuine error at this time in the flick to go into the convolutions of how it's bad manners for a reporter to burn a source, if we've got anything going by this point, I can't conceive of much an audience will be less interested in than the reporters misbehaving.

However, if the scene is requested next time through, I shall be only too happy to oblige.

What I would like to do is cut from the FBI saying "fuck you fuck you fuck you" and locking his door to the following:

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN walking in the rain. It's pouring as they leave FBI Headquarters and they are in anguish.

BERNSTEIN
(after a while) Woodward?

WOODWARD
Hmm?
BERNSTEIN
What was the mistake? Do you think it's been rigged, all along the way, leading us on so they could slip it to us when it mattered? They couldn't have set us up better; after all these months our credibility's gone, you know what that means?

WOODWARD
(nods)
Only everything...

They are soaked, Nearby is a garbage can, they grab papers, hold them over their heads, start to walk. Now--

CAMERA MOVES UP HIGHER TO REVEAL

The papers they grabbed were the Post front page. (This happened.) And as they walked, the Haldeman story was on their heads. HOLD on the reporters walking miserably through the rain. Now--

CUT TO:

THE POST.

A tremendous pall has settled on the city room. People walk by, glancing at WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN, who sit almost immobilized at their desks, wet, whipped; no energy left.

CUT TO:

BRADLEE'S OFFICE. SIMONS sits across from BRADLEE as ROSENFELD enters quietly with a bundle of teletype paper.

SIMONS
(indicating the papers)
More denunciations?

ROSENFIELD
(nods)
One Senator just gave a speech slurring us 57 times in 20 minutes.

BRADLEE has started typing something brief. When ROSENFIELD's done, so is he. He hands it to SIMONS.

SIMONS
What's this?

BRADLEE
My non-denial denial.

ROSENFIELD
We're not printing a retraction?
CLOSE UP--BRADLEE. He is thoughtful for a while. Then, spinning around, staring out towards the newsroom:

BRADLEE
Fuck it, let's stand by the boys.

And he stands, spins out of the room as we

CUT TO:

THE FLOWER POT ON WOODWARD'S TERRACE.

The rain has stopped. The apartment is dark. It's late at night. Inside, the phone RINGS and

CUT TO:

WOODWARD'S APARTMENT in the dark as he manages to knock the phone off its cradle.

WOODWARD
Hello?

BERNSTEIN'S VOICE (O.S.)
What'd you find?

WOODWARD
Jesus Christ, what time is it?

BERNSTEIN
You overslept?

WOODWARD
Goddamnit!--

He fumbles for the lamp, as it falls with a CRASH--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD--MOVING. Hair wild, clothes half-buttoned, he runs through the dark Washington streets as we

CUT TO:

TWO WELL-DRESSED MEN in the shadows across the street, going in the same direction and

CUT TO:

WOODWARD spotting them, picking up the pace and

CUT TO:

THE TWO MEN moving faster too and now
CUT TO:

A BUNCH OF CABS. WOODWARD jumps into the first and as it roars off

CUT TO:

THE TWO MEN getting into a cab also, roaring off in the same direction and

CUT TO:

WOODWARD'S CAB taking a corner fast and as it goes on, HOLD until the second cab takes the same corner, faster, and now

CUT TO:

WOODWARD jumping out of his cab, fumbling into his pockets for change as we

CUT TO:

THE TWO MEN getting out of their cab, paying, and as their cab drives off

CUT TO:

WOODWARD diving back into his cab and in a moment it is roaring again through the night and we

CUT TO:

THE TWO WELL-DRESSED MEN standing on the sidewalk, watching as WOODWARD disappears into the night and then suddenly,

ZOOM TO:

DEEP THROAT IN CLOSE UP AND MAD.

DEEP THROAT
--you were doing so well and then you got stupid, you went too fast-- Christ, what a royal screw up--

PULL BACK TO REVEAL

DEEP THROAT and WOODWARD in the underground garage.

WOODWARD
--I know, I know, the pressure's off the White House and it's all back on the Post--

DEEP THROAT
--you've done worse than let Haldeman slip away, you've got people feeling sorry for him--I didn't think that was possible. A conspiracy like this--the rope has to tighten slowly around everyone's neck. You build from the outer edges and you go step by step. If you shoot too high and miss, then everybody feels more secure. You've put the investigation back months.

WOODWARD
We know that--and if we were wrong, we're resigning--were we wrong?

DEEP THROAT
You'll have to find that out, won't you?--

CUT TO:

WOODWARD exploding.

WOODWARD
--I'm tired of your chickenshit games--I don't want hints, I want what you know!

CUT TO:

DEEP THROAT. He blinks for a moment. Then he begins to whisper.

DEEP THROAT
It was a Haldeman operation--the whole business--he ran the money, but he was insulated, you'll have to find out how--

WOODWARD takes a breath, nods.

DEEP THROAT
--wait-- (almost a smile)
--there's more...

And from his weathered face

CUT TO:

WOODWARD
walking up to his apartment house later that night. He sees, and then we see, BERNSTEIN, asleep at the front door. He comes awake as WOODWARD approaches.

WOODWARD
We gotta go see Bradlee--I'll fill you in in the car.
BRADLEE IN HIS DOORWAY IN THE MIDDLE OF THE NIGHT.

It's a house with a lawn and from somewhere there is the SOUND of dogs barking.

BRADLEE
You couldn't have told me over the phone?

CUT TO:

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN moving up the walk to BRADLEE.

WOODWARD
We can't trust the phones, not anymore. Deep Throat says so.

As WOODWARD beckons for him to move out into the lawn--

BRADLEE
We can't talk inside either?

WOODWARD
(headshake)
Electronic surveillance.

CUT TO:

THE THREE OF THEM MOVING OUT ONTO THE LAWN. It's October now. You can see their breaths as they speak.

BERNSTEIN
I finally got through to Sloan--it was all a misunderstanding that we had: he would have told the Grand Jury about Haldeman, he was ready to, only nobody on the Grand Jury asked him the goddamn question.

WOODWARD
So I guess you could say that we screwed up, but we weren't wrong.

BRADLEE
Anything else from Mr. Throat?

WOODWARD
Mitchell started the cover-up early, everyone is involved in the cover-up, all the way to the top. The whole U.S. intelligence community is mixed in with the covert activities. The extent of it is incredible.
(little pause)
And people's lives are in danger, maybe including ours.

\textbf{CUT TO:}

\textbf{BRADLEE.} He nods again, starts walking the two reporters back toward \textbf{WOODWARD's car}.

\textbf{BRADLEE}

He's wrong on that last, we're not in the least danger, because nobody gives a shit--what was that Gallup Poll result? Half the country's never even heard the word Watergate.

\textbf{CUT TO:}

\textbf{THE RED KARMANN GHIA} as the three approach.

\textbf{BRADLEE}

Look, you're both probably a little tired, right?

(They nod)

You should be, you've been under a lot of pressure. So go home, have a nice hot bath, rest up fifteen minutes if you want before you get your asses back in gear--

(louder now)

--because we're under a lot of pressure, too, and you put us there--not that I want it to worry you--nothing's riding on you except the First Amendment of the Constitution plus the freedom of the press plus the reputation of a hundred-year-old paper plus the jobs of the two thousand people who work there--

(still building)

--but none of that counts as much as this: you fuck up again, I'm gonna lose my temper.

(pause; softer)

I promise you, you don't want me to lose my temper.

(shooing them off)

Move-move-move--what have you done for me tomorrow...?

And as they get back into the car--

\textbf{CUT TO:}

\textbf{THE NEWSROOM--EARLY MORNING} and it's empty pretty much, except at their desks sit \textbf{WOODWARD} and \textbf{BERNSTEIN}, typing away. They type on and on and as they do, voices are \textbf{HEARD}, the same voices we've become familiar with, the WESTERN SENATOR, the CREEP P.R. MAN and the WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN.

WESTERN SENATOR (O.S.)
Although I'm a Republican, I would like to state in a pure bipartisan spirit that the greatest political scandal of this campaign is the brazen manner in which, without benefit of clergy, the Washington Post has set up housekeeping with the McGovern campaign...

CREEP P.R. MAN
For twenty years, the Eastern liberal press has been trying to smear Dick Nixon. Fortunately, the American public is too smart to be fooled by...

WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN
I have been informed reliably by John Dean that no one connected with the White House...

WESTERN SENATOR
(coming in, overlapping)
It is only our pathetic Post that deliberately tries to infuse the Watergate caper with a seriousness far beyond those shenanigans that have been the stock trade of political pranksters ever since...

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN work on. And now, as the voices continue condemning, we see them—all the President's men—as their faces flash on the screen for an instant—only these aren't fashion portraits we're looking at, these are the mug shots of the men taken when they went to jail and they flash on, the mug shots and the name and across each the word CONVICTED. There's VIRGILIO GONZALES—CONVICTED, and EUGENIO MARTINEZ, CONVICTED, and FRANK STURGIS, CONVICTED, and BERNARD BARKER, CONVICTED, and JAMES McCORD, CONVICTED, and HOWARD HUNT, CONVICTED, and GORDON LIDDY, CONVICTED, and DONALD SEGREGTI, CONVICTED, and DWIGHT CHAPIN, CONVICTED, and now the denunciations are louder, shriller, briefer.

WHITE HOUSE SPOKESMAN
An insult to the American public--

CREEP P.R. MAN
—the deplorable tactics employed by the Washington Post--

WESTERN SENATOR
—I have been given access to evidence in possession of the White House and that evidence--

WOODWARD and BERNSTEIN type on. Their machines are the only SOUND in the enormous room. And now more mug shots appear--

JEB MAGRUDER, CONVICTED, EGIL KROGH, CONVICTED, JOHN DEAN, CONVICTED, JOHN EHRLICHMAN, CONVICTED, CHARLES COLSON, CONVICTED, HERBERT KALMBACH, CONVICTED, and LARUE and PORTER and MITCHELL and HALDEMAN--all, all the President's men--CONVICTED. Now--

THE CAMERA STARTS TO MOVE toward the pillar, the one that separates the two reporters, and the denunciations are still going on, but not so loud now, not so fierce.

WESTERN SENATOR
Well, if I was wrong, I sure the hell wasn't alone--

CREEP
--the fact remains that except for Watergate, we ran one hell of a great campaign...

The CAMERA is almost at the pillar now.

BERNSTEIN bums a cigarette from a cleaning lady. WOODWARD kicks his typewriter. Then they both go back to work.

Now we're at the pillar. That's all we see. Just that. And all we HEAR is the two reporters working away, on and on until--

FINAL FADE OUT:

THE END
