The Bronx Music Heritage Center is keeping the Hispanic culture alive in the Bronx.

In honor of Hispanic Heritage Month, News 12 got to speak with the director of the nonprofit organization to learn more about what they are doing for our community.

The center hosts artists from all different walks of life who bring the Hispanic culture to others through performances. They are all about bringing joy to the community and will soon be able to bring it in a larger facility.

The nonprofit Women's Housing and Economic Development Corp. provides access to affordable homes and strives to create a wholesome community. Their newest endeavor will house the Bronx Music Hall.

It is expected to open in 2020.
